Entrance fees, standard amenity recreation fees, and expanded amenity recreation fees for Federal lands are used not only to conserve our nation's land, wildlife, waterways, and historical sites, but also to develop, maintain, and improve visitor services and recreation opportunities.

Authorized by Congress

Congress passed the Federal Lands Recreation Enhancement Act (REA), Public Law 108-447, in December 2004. The law authorized the Fish and Wildlife Service, National Park Service, Bureau of Land Management, and Bureau of Reclamation within the Department of the Interior and the Forest Service within the Department of Agriculture to charge fees at Federal recreation sites that meet certain criteria and reinvest a majority of the revenue into enhancing these sites. Recreation fees provide a vital source of revenue for improving facilities and services for visitors at a variety of public lands throughout the nation. REA established a new interagency pass program to replace the Golden Eagle, Golden Age, and Golden Access Passports and the National Parks Pass. The "America the Beautiful—the National Parks and Federal Recreational Lands Pass" program provides a number of pass options for the public to use at Federal recreation sites that charge fees. The five agencies implemented the new pass program on January 1, 2007.

Legislation authorizing the Federal Duck Stamp Program can be found online at www.fws.gov/duckstamps/Info/Stamps/stamplaw.htm.

The Corps of Engineers was given authority by Congress to collect day use fees as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993.
