

Archery, Georgia

African American Community

The Carter family farm was located in Archery, Georgia, an African American community rooted in faith and farming. Carter's experiences were different from most whites because he was a member of one of the only white families around. The impacts of inequality, racism, and segregation shaped his beliefs and a political agenda to end segregation and advance human rights.

To learn more, visit: www.nps.gov/JimmyCarter