Lorraine American Cemetery and Memorial

This is the largest American World War II cemetery in Europe. The U.S. 80th Infantry Division liberated the surrounding area on November 27, 1944. A temporary military cemetery was established nearby on March 16, 1945. Free use as a permanent burial ground was granted by the French government in perpetuity without charge or taxation.

American Battle Monuments Commission

This agency of the United States government operates and maintains 26 American cemeteries and 29 memorials, monuments and markers in 16 countries. The Commission works to fulfill the vision of its first chairman, General of the Armies John J. Pershing. Pershing, commander of the American Expeditionary Forces during World War I, promised that “time will not dim the glory of their deeds.”

The Memorial
Above the memorial entrance, a tall figure of St. Nabor extends his blessing upon those resting here and commemorated on the Walls of the Missing that flank the tower.

Maps
On the chapel’s south wall two maps of glazed ceramic portray military operations in Western Europe and also the fighting in the region of St. Avold.

Chapel
Five sculptured figures on the west wall personify the eternal struggle for freedom. King David, Emperor Constantine, King Arthur, and George Washington reinforce the youthful figure in the center.

Visitor Building
Here you can meet our staff and get your questions answered, and sign the guest register.

Walls of the Missing
Walls of the Missing extend north and south of the memorial. They display the name, rank, organization, and state of 444 men of the U.S. Army and Army Air Forces.

Layout
A linden-lined avenue leads to the visitor building and parking area. At the crest of the hill the memorial is flanked by Walls of the Missing.

Overlook
At the cemetery’s east end the ground rises to a knoll with the overlook. From it one views the entire cemetery and the countryside for miles to the west.

Third U.S. Army resumed its pursuit of German forces across eastern France in early September 1944. Seventh U.S. Army, reinforced by the French First Army, advanced northward after landings in southern France. The Ninth Air Force and First Tactical Air Force rendered vital air support throughout the operations.

September 8, 1944: Third Army’s 5th Infantry Division crossed the Moselle River near Dornot.

September 21: Third and Seventh Armies linked up near Epinal, extending the Allied front line from the North Sea to the Swiss border.

November 8: Third Army began its offensive toward the Saar region.

November 20: Seventh Army liberated Sarrebourg.

November 22: Third Army liberated Metz, bypassing German units in outer forts.

November 27: Third Army liberated St. Avold.

December 13: Last of the forts surrounding Metz surrendered.

December 19: Third Army maneuvered northward to counterattack during the “Battle of the Bulge.”

January 1, 1945: Germany launched Operation NORDWIND, attacking U.S. and French forces along the Saar River. The allies held firm.

March 9: Third Army crossed the Rhine at Oppenheim. Its units pressed onward, reaching Frankfurt on March 26.

Allied forces made multiple crossings of the Rhine from north to south throughout March, then pushed eastward against diminishing German opposition and liberating concentration and POW camps on route. By April 18, elements of Third Army pressed through Germany and crossed into Czechoslovakia. Seventh Army captured Munich on April 30. Germany surrendered unconditionally on May 7 at Reims. V-E Day, May 8, ended the war in Europe.
