The Papua and New Guinea Campaigns, 1942-1944

The Papua and New Guinea Campaigns

The Japanese, after defeats at the naval battles of the Coral Sea and Midway in early 1942, built up forces in northeastern New Guinea. The aim was to threaten Australia by marching south over the Owen Stanley Mountains to capture Port Moresby.

General Douglas MacArthur, commanding the Southwest Pacific Area (SWPA) force, began reinforcing Australian units around Port Moresby.

JANUARY 23, 1943: The Papua Campaign ended. Both sides suffered heavy casualties from combat and tropical diseases.

JANUARY 24: The New Guinea Campaign began. For almost two years, Allied ground, air, and naval forces advanced along the northern coast and nearby islands.
