There are more than 100 miles of trails in Delaware Water Gap National Recreation, but only one trail has achieved national significance. First marked out in the 1920s, the Appalachian Trail or the "AT," as it is affectionately known, was the first designated National Scenic Trail in the United States. The trail extends along the spine of the Appalachian Mountains from Springer Mountain, Georgia, to Mt. Katahdin in Baxter State Park, Maine, traversing 2,174 miles through 14 states and various jurisdictions. In the spring of each year between 1700 and 2500 hikers start north from Springer Mountain, following the white rectangular blaze that marks the trail, in the hope of hiking the entire length of the trail. Of these thru-hikers, approximately 20% successfully walk the entire trail before the snows envelop Maine's mountains. These hardy trekkers normally cross the Water Gap in the month of June.

The trail is a unit of the National Park system, and the National Park Service has delegated the overseeing of the trail to the Appalachian Trail Conference (ATC). (Editor's note: On July 4, 2005, the Conference changed its name to the Appalachian Trail Conservancy.) This non-profit organization in turn oversees 31 independent hiking clubs that maintain and improve the trail. (The two hiking clubs that maintain the AT in Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area are the New York/New Jersey Trail Conference and the Wilmington Trail Club of Delaware.) These groups are made up of volunteers who maintain and hike the trail. While on the trail, one might encounter a special type of caretaker known as an AT ridgerunner. These individuals spend their summer on the trail providing information, suggesting techniques for minimum impact camping, reporting hazards, and maintaining the trail. Volunteers and ridgerunners are an integral aspect in the maintenance and health of the trail.

The meandering AT sometimes has different and special camping and fire regulations in its various jurisdictions. In Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area the following regulations apply:

- Camping is restricted to hikers who are hiking the AT for two or more consecutive days.
- Camping is limited to one night per campsite.
- Camping is limited to 10 persons per campsite.
- Hikers must camp a minimum of 50 feet and no more than 100 feet from the AT.
- No fires are permitted.
- Persons may not camp within:
  - 100 ft. of any stream/water source, or
  - 1/2 mile of an established roadway, or
  - 200 ft. of another camping party, or
  - the stretch that begins 1/2 mile south of Blue Mountain Lake Road, and continues north to the intersection of the AT and Buttermilk Falls Trail.

Whether one is just hiking for a couple of hours, for the day, or for the entire length of the trail, the AT provides majestic views, sightings of wildlife, and hiking challenges. So be kind, be gentle, and leave only footprints, because the AT is a very special trail for future generations to experience and enjoy.
Mile 7.7 (Left) This view west over the Delaware River is from Mt. Mohican atop Kittatinny Ridge. The stretch of river is at Depew and Poxono Islands. Just touching 1,500 ft., this is one of the highest points of the AT in the recreation area, and one of its best views.
