EBEY’S FOREVER

"THERE IS HEREBY ESTABLISHED THE EBEY'S LANDING NATIONAL HISTORICAL RESERVE IN ORDER TO PRESERVE AND PROTECT A RURAL COMMUNITY WHICH PROVIDES AN UNBROKEN HISTORICAL RECORD FROM NINETEENTH CENTURY EXPLORATION AND SETTLEMENT IN PUGET SOUND TO THE PRESENT TIME...[P.L. 95-625]."

In the early 1970s, local citizens organized to halt a housing development slated for Ebeys Prarie. The effort became a balancing act – to find a way to preserve a cherished and historically significant place, without sacrificing the needs and future of a working rural community. Believing that local government and citizens were needed to find that balance, Congress established Ebeys Landing National Historical Reserve in 1978.

The legislation establishing the Reserve contains two points that are essential to understanding the Reserve. First, the Reserve was established to preserve and protect a living rural community – much more complex than preserving a historic site. Second, it is continuity that makes the Reserve’s history so significant. The story of the Reserve is not a thing of the past – it is kept alive by people who continue to live, work and maintain deep connections with the natural and historic landscape.

The Reserve concept is what makes the balancing act possible. Reserves differ from parks in their approach to preservation and management. For Ebeys Reserve, this means that the land within the Reserve is not owned or regulated by any one agency (see A Partnership Story). While there are federal, state, town and county lands within the Reserve, a surprising 85% is privately owned. Preservation occurs through land donations, tax incentives, local land use regulation, conservation easements, and the cooperation of property owners. Success means that the landscape, the community, and its history will continue forever, to be shared, protected and enjoyed by future generations.

120,000 Years of Local History

THE ISLAND COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY (ICHS) Museum is one of many treasures you will discover when visiting Ebeys Landing National Historical Reserve. With two floors of exhibits, and a 3rd floor dedicated to the Janet Enzmann Archives and Research Library, the museum serves as the repository for Island County history, and features two main galleries: "Native People – Native Places" celebrating the history of the local indigenous peoples spanning some 10,000 years and featuring a 28-foot Nootkan-style cedar dugout canoe. Baskets, stone points and implements, along with historic and contemporary photos of the first settlers of the region complete the exhibit. "Industrious Islanders" delves into the lives and times of “the new settlers” – an eclectic mix of sea captains, immigrants, and Oregon Trail pioneers.

History runs deep in Island County. You'll find 10,000-12,000 year old Columbian mammoth remains and an Ice Age fir tree, squished flat by the immense Vashon Glacier, 120,000 years ago! A third gallery features ever-changing exhibits, such as the "Salish Bounty" or "The NW Treaty Trail". Visit the Museum Store for an unmatched assortment of local and regional history books, videos, postcards, and unique gift items.

The Island County Historical Society was started in 1949, with hopes of saving a beautiful Victorian courthouse from the wrecking ball. Sadly, that project didn't work out.

Welcome to Eby’s Landing National Historical Reserve! Whether you are a resident, history buff, farm lover, or outdoor recreation enthusiast, I hope you enjoy your visit to our nation’s first National Historical Reserve.

As you explore the Reserve’s history and scenic beauty, I encourage you to also look behind the scenes, for evidence of the deep tradition of stewardship and grassroots action that helped create the Reserve and ensure its future. Volunteerism, cooperation, historic preservation, land conservation, sustainable farming, thoughtful planning, and creative development – all of these are at work in the Reserve and contribute to its success.

I hope you find inspiration in the story of Eby’s Reserve. This guide will introduce some of the partners who have made it possible. The “Need to Know” tips on the map page will help you plan a safe and memorable visit. The best way to honor this special place is to enjoy it!

Kris Sager
Trust Board Manager

When the Reserve was established, it represented a bold new way of thinking about protection and preservation. Instead of management by a single government entity, the Reserve would be managed jointly by four partners: Island County, the Town of Coupeville, Washington State Parks, and the National Park Service. Through a nine-member Trust Board, the partners work together to protect, preserve and interpret the Reserve for current and future generations.

What makes this so distinctive? Although the Reserve was established by Congress because of its nationally significant history and resources, the partnership was crafted to ensure that all of the jurisdictions would be truly equal partners in its management, reflecting an exceptionally strong commitment to shared stewardship and local participation.

It has been nearly 28 years since the partnership was put into action. In that time, the partnership has successfully managed the Reserve by setting policy, managing programs, engaging the public, and monitoring the voluntary easements that protect the land.

FORT EBEY STATE PARK
Iconic Buildings of Ebey’s Reserve

Perhaps no other building represents Ebey’s Landing National Historical Reserve as well as the Ferry House. Built by the Ebeys between 1859 and 1860, the Ferry House sits on Isaac Ebeys Donation Land Claim – the first such claim in the Reserve. The Ferry House served locals and those arriving by ferry at Ebey’s Landing as an inn, tavern, post office, and stage connection. The National Park Service acquired the house from The Nature Conservancy in 2000 (adjacent farm fields are privately owned and should not be entered). The house has been stabilized but further preservation is needed. It is not open to the public at this time. For more information about the history of the Ferry House, a brief Site Bulletin is available on the Reserve’s website: www.nps.gov/ebia.

The Jacob and Sarah Ebeys House was built in 1856 by the parents of Isaac Ebeys, the first permanent Euro-American settler in the Reserve. The “Hall and parlor” form plank frame house, and nearby beam log blockhouse, tell the story of the early farmers who claimed land in what is now the Reserve. Under the Donation Land Law of 1850, settlers were able to claim 320 acres for free (a wife could claim an additional 320 acres), provided they could work and improve the land for four years. The National Park Service acquired the house from The Nature Conservancy in 2000. Volunteer docents open the house to the public Thursday – Sunday, from Memorial Day weekend through Labor Day weekend. For more information about the history of the Jacob and Sarah Ebeys House, a brief Site Bulletin is available on the Reserve’s website: www.nps.gov/ebia.

FROM A FORT TO A CAMP – CAMP CASEY

AT THE TURN OF THE 20TH CENTURY, the U.S. Army opened “Fort Casey”, named in honor of Brigadier General Thomas Lincoln Casey. Within 20 years, Fort Casey was the fourth largest military post in Washington, housing 10 officers and 428 enlisted men.

The Army used the fortification to guard the entrance to Puget Sound until World War II, Seattle Pacific University became the property’s owner when it was decommissioned in the 1950s. Today, SPU continues to welcome school groups, churches, nonprofits, and outdoor education classes to this remarkable historical site. For more information on Camp Casey, visit the website at www.spu.edu/casey.

The Land Trust and Ebey’s Reserve

THE WHIDBEY CAMANO LAND TRUST was incorporated in 1984 as a nonprofit nature conservancy organization by a group of citizens who wanted to save the great beauty and nature of Whidbey and Camano Islands— including working farms, natural habitats for fish and wildlife, undeveloped shoreline, trail and beach access, and scenic vistas. It is the mission of the Land Trust to actively involve the community in protecting, restoring, and appreciating the important natural habitats and resource lands that support the diversity of life on our islands and in the waters of Puget Sound.

In Ebey’s Landing National Historical Reserve, the Land Trust has kept over 650 acres of rich, productive soil in permanent working-farm status. Nearly two miles of shoreline, 208 acres of Crockett Lake wetlands, as well as rare old-growth forest and two native prairies remain as part of the Reserve’s amazing natural legacy. These conserved lands draw visitors from near and far and add immeasurably to the local economy and quality of life.

Admiralty Inlet Preserve is one of the Land Trust’s newest nature preserves. Open to the public, visitors will see an old-growth forest, prairie, birds and stunning views of the beach below. It’s the perfect place to take in the outdoors, see wildlife and enjoy nature. There’s a loop trail on the property that is open to the public for walking, although at this time there’s no parking area. A second trail along Engle Road was recently completed and is also open to the public. The goal for the trail is a network of connected natural trails from Camp Casey to Ebey’s Landing.

EBEY’S PRAIRIE: THE STORY BEHIND AN EVER CHANGING MOSAIC

THE FARM FIELDS OF EBEY’S PRAIRIE form a colorful patchwork of tan, gold, brown and green. The pattern tells a story that began October 15, 1850, when Whidbey Island’s first permanent Euro-American settler, Isaac N. Ebey, laid claim to 640 acres of open prairie. Ebey’s claim was oriented across the bottom of the open prairie, quite unlike the later claims that would follow an orderly north-south, east-west pattern.

The roads and fields you see today still trace the outlines of these early land claims and farm fields. Look carefully and the most northern corner of Isaac Ebey’s claim is as distinctive as ever, marked by the intersection of Cemetery Road, and Cook Road.

Prairie crops are more diverse today than in Isaac Ebey’s time. Farmers select those well adapted to the unique maritime environment within the “rain shadow” of the nearby Olympic Mountains. This year’s crops include alfalfa, grass, seed peas, seed beets, corn, squash, pumpkins, winter sown barley, spring sown barley, wheat, oats, seed cabbage, grass seed, beans and a wide variety of garden vegetables. It is the planting, maturation and harvesting of these crops that provides the constantly changing patchwork pattern you see. — Ebey Road Farm

“As Farmers in Ebey’s Landing National Historical Reserve, we are committed to preserving our rural working community and heritage. The prairies of Central Whidbey have sustained agriculture for hundreds, perhaps thousands, of years, beginning with Skagit Indians and continuing to the present. We carry on a tradition of diverse, sustainable agriculture that Ebey’s Landing farmers have practiced since the first donation land claims of 1850. We are honored to continue living our unique rural heritage today while protecting our rich agricultural lands and maintaining historical connections for generations to come.”

- but it did get ICHS off and running, and since then, the Society has collected and preserved thousands of photos, documents, and other ephemera which help interpret Island County history. The local collection of artifacts includes the first car on Whidbey Island (a 1902 Holman Autobugy), the Alexander Blockhouse, 8 Native American cedar dugout canoes, and so much more - from sewing needles to cannon balls!

ICHS is open daily, 11am-4pm year-round, and features occasional guided walking tours in and around Coupeville and Eby’s Reserve. Special annual tours of Sunnyside Cemetery Tour are held each Memorial and Labor Days. These tours will introduce you to some of the colorful folks whose stories helped shape this area.
