Fort Frederica Living History Festival Celebrates 270th Anniversary of the Founding of Frederica

Fort Frederica National Monument has a quiet and ancient solitude. Stately live oaks and swaying palm trees stand above bleaching ruins and non-obtrusive brick and tabby foundations. Quietly the Frederica River glides past the silenced cannons of Fort Frederica. It is hard to imagine the hustling, bustling town in its heyday. It is far easier to stand in the middle of the townsite and visualize the site as it appeared on the first day of Frederica’s life. One of Frederica’s settlers described that first day in his journal.

“...in the morning we arrived at the island of St. Simons...the ground was covered with long grass. Mr. Tanner fired it, and it destroyed all the vermin, and made the country round clear, so as not [to] be only pleasant to the eye, but convenient for walking...We all made merry that evening, having a plentiful meal of game brought in by the Indians.”

Francis Moore, 18 February 1736

From that humble beginning, Frederica quickly grew into a sizable settlement. Ironically, it thrived only as long as it was threatened by the Spanish. Its short, tumultuous life ended after the British defeated the Spanish invasion. Following the disbanding of the regiment, settlers left and Frederica fell into disrepair. Crumbling ruins stood where a vibrant town once existed.

Today it is a challenge to bring the history of the site to life in a vivid way. Living history events and programs help visitors connect with the site and its history. On February 18, 2006, the history will become a little more real at the Fort Frederica Living History Festival. This annual event is a great opportunity to delve into the lifestyles of the original residents of the town and fort.

Volunteers from throughout the region will help visitors discover the history of Frederica during this 270th anniversary of the town’s beginnings. Activities throughout the day are designed to engage all visitors, and particularly children in this history. The Stewart-Law Baroque Ensemble Trio will provide music at 1 PM.

NPS Management Policies Under Review

Many of you may have noted recent media reports – many of them negative – regarding the current review of the National Park Service Management Policies that is underway at the Washington level. Many of the reports cover concerns that the management policies are being substantially weakened in favor of use over preservation.

Although the Washington office strongly denies that is the intent, they have recently extended the deadline for employee and citizen comment on the proposed changes.

Anyone interested in this issue should visit the NPS Planning, Environment and Public Comment website at http://park planning.nps.gov/. You can read the draft management plan at the site and offer your comments and opinions.

The Rumors are True...

On a personal note, after 36 years of service to the National Park Service, I have decided to hang up my ranger hat and retire. It'll probably take place around February, depending on how soon we find a house to buy. The good news is that we are staying in the Golden Isles community, moving onto the mainland. It will give me the time and opportunity to work on my model railroad, grow the budding business I have associated with that, and train for more marathons and Ironman competitions.

I will miss the National Park Service, but I look forward to a whole new chapter in life.

Have a wonderful visit at your park!

Mike Tennent
Superintendent

Fort Frederica Cooperating Association
An Important Park Partner

If it wasn’t for the Fort Frederica Association, Fort Frederica National Monument wouldn’t even exist. The Fort Frederica Association was formed in 1940 for the purpose of acquiring and developing the site of the 18th century town and fort of Frederica. Thanks to their efforts, on August 30, 1945, Fort Frederica was officially established as a national monument under the management of the National Park Service.

For over 60 years the Fort Frederica Association has participated in the development of Frederica and has created and administered the park’s bookstore. Profits from the association’s bookstore help fund special projects at Fort Frederica National Monument.

In 2005, the association provided the following assistance, totalling over $10,000:

- the park curator attended much-needed archival training
- the education coordinator attended a museum conference
- several park interpreters attended training and conferences
- reproduction of an original map on display at the Visitor Center
- entrance into parades and a parade banner
- living history uniforms and equipment
- tabby demonstration supplies
- supplies for archeology education program
- refreshments and entertainment for numerous special events

Without the continuous strong support of the Fort Frederica Association a lot of the interpretive programs that visitors enjoy would not be possible. The National Park Service and Fort Frederica National Monument truly appreciate and thank Association members for all that they do.

The Book Nook

A Primary Source History of the Colony of Georgia is a new addition to the Fort Frederica bookstore. The book provides a good overview of the history of the colonial period and includes letters, maps, and historic images that illustrate the transformation from colony to state. It is a wonderful sourcebook for teachers interested in teaching with primary sources.
Maintenance Matters

The name of this column seems especially relevant when you consider a major project scheduled to begin at Fort Frederica during January. After years of planning and review, we have been given approval to proceed with the much-needed replacement of the Visitor Center roof! The project begins January 9, and we hope to have it finished within sixty days.

A visitor center is an integral part of any national park complex that attempts to educate and inform the visiting public. Planners situated our building at a strategic location outside the cultural zone so that incoming guests could be greeted and prepared for the educational experience that lies ahead. The story of Frederica is not well known, yet after exploring the Frederica town site it seems that most folks walk away from Fort Frederica National Monument wondering why or how they ever missed the teachings of its story during their youth. It is at the visitor center that interpretive rangers begin to tell that story. It’s the responsibility of me and my staff to maintain the building so you can hear the beginnings of the Frederica story in a safe, comfortable environment.

National Park Service architects designed and built our visitor center in the mid-1950s, so it has provided visitor support with a half century of service. It not only houses facilities for public use; the east wing houses administrative and management offices. The 10,300 square-foot roof is original dating back to the 1950s, and is at the end of its useful life. Most folks assume it’s a wooden roof, and, by design, they’ve been fooled! Designers recognized the rural and wooded environment surrounding the building, yet knew a durable roof was needed under our huge, majestic live oak forest. The roof is actually clay tiles, with an etched, dark, stained appearance that gives the impression of a wood shake from a distance. These “sustainable design practices” result in award-winning building construction in the national park system.

Projects of this size go through a rigorous planning and review process that culminates in the awarding of a contract. Our goal is to maintain the architect’s original intent to meld the building into the landscape. Research revealed the original tile manufacturer was still in business, but had moved operations from their original plant in Ludowici, GA, to a new location in Ohio where they found a vein of red clay similar to that found in Georgia. Luck prevailed when we learned the original tile specification was still available and identical clay tiles could be produced. Subsequently, office staff from our regional office in Atlanta worked up contract specifications and a few months back awarded the work to a local contractor, Allen and Graham Inc., of Brunswick. We are happy that their expertise and skills were chosen and look forward to their work so roof integrity can be extended another fifty years or more.

Work is expected to take up most of the first three months of the year. We have worked with Allen and Graham to ensure that work can proceed on schedule without interfering with visitor services. The building will remain open for your use during the construction phase. Visitors will continue to have access to the Visitor Center, although there may be times where your safety is protected with short, minimal delays to assist the workers. The park entrance will be open for visitor traffic daily at 9 a.m. The park will continue to be open until 5 p.m. We hope you view any inconvenience as a minor disturbance toward a very good long-term gain. In the end, it’s our hope that you agree that your tax dollars have been spent wisely for a worthwhile project.

The entire National Park Service staff at Fort Frederica National Monument has a strong commitment to maintain the national monument so you have a safe and well kept facility for your entire family to enjoy. Whether it is the repair, rehabilitation, or upkeep of building assets, the preservation of the cultural landscape and grounds, or the protection of the natural environment, we strive to provide you with an educational experience that broadens your understanding of our cultural past. Let us know how we’re doing. Your suggestions may help us improve for those who follow in your footsteps.

Thanks for visiting with us today!

(Tree Gottshall has 25 years experience working for the National Park Service. He has worked in various park locations throughout the country and has been at Fort Frederica for two and a half years.)

Name the Artifact Answers

A. The blade of a hoe.
B. A musket bayonet that has been bent to form a hook. Possibly used for cooking or some other chore.
C. The head of a European Halberd. The halberd is a type of pole-arms that was used as a symbol of rank for sergeants of foot regiments. (George C. Neumann’s “Battle Weapons of the American Revolution”)
D. The head of a Joiner’s Axe. (Eric Sloane's “Museum of Early American Tools”)
Fort Frederica National Monument is a premier historical and archaeological site that shares and preserves the history associated with the British settlement of the Colony of Georgia and the struggle with Spain for control of the region. The National Park Service values working with partners and the public to bring this special history to life.

Can you guess what these artifacts are or were? They are all in Frederica’s collection. They are all made of iron (or mild steel). One of the objects will be tricky because it has been altered from its original form.

Metal artifacts are difficult to keep in good condition because they tend to rust when they get wet, or if it is really humid, which are the conditions we have here in coastal Georgia. Another problem with ferrous (iron-based) metal is that the oils and salts on a person’s hand will also cause rust and deterioration. Curators wear gloves to prevent damage.
