INTRODUCTION

This thematic framework is a revision of "History and Prehistory in the National Park System and the National Historic Landmarks Program," 1982. Thematic classification of the United States' historic resources is much older, however. It was urged in 1929 by the Committee on the Study of Educational Problems in National Parks, the predecessor of the National Park System Advisory Board. The first theme outline was adopted by the Board in 1936. It was well understood by the scholarly community represented on these bodies, that classification of resources is intrinsic to an understanding of a body of knowledge about those resources and is fundamental to the comparative analysis necessary in making judgments of relative significance.

The outline is used to show the extent to which units and cultural resources of the National Park System, affiliated areas, and National Historic Landmarks reflect the Nation's past. Parks and Landmarks are assigned to all themes, subthemes, and facets in which they are found to be nationally significant. By this process the comprehensiveness of the Survey of National Historic Landmarks and the representativeness of the National Park System can be gauged and planning for further study guided.

The framework guides those involved in historical survey at national, regional, state, park, or local levels, since the theme structure is a comprehensive outline of United States history, prehistory, and cultural endeavors, rather than a structure biased by existing or estimated numbers and concentrations of Landmarks and other historic resources.

The purpose is to cover all areas of United States history without excessive detail and minutiae. To that end, the 1982 framework has been changed in some important ways. Some theme titles like "VII. America at Work," "VIII. The Contemplative Society," and "IX. Society and Social Conscience" were judged not to be adequately meaningful and were discarded. In their place, the subject titles previously subordinated to them, such as architecture, engineering, and conservation, were raised to the theme level. This brings those and other major fields of endeavor more into balance with the more traditional themes of political and military history and westward expansion. The Major American Wars and Political and Military Affairs themes were not necessarily exclusive of each other and are easily merged into one larger, essentially chronological theme. This covers, in essence, American governmental history along with the Nation's major military conflicts. While the number of themes has therefore been increased from 9 to 34, the latter number is roughly equal to the previous number of subthemes and does not represent new areas for study. By raising previous subthemes to theme level, the lowest echelon, the subfacets, are eliminated leaving only three levels to consider --- theme, subtheme, and facet. An example of the three levels is as follows:

XIII. SCIENCE (Theme Level)
   A. Physical Sciences (Subtheme Level)
      1. Astronomy (Facet Level)
To cover more thoroughly the various aspects of United States history, the subtheme Transportation and Communication, for example, has been separated into its two individual components while the Science and Invention subtheme was newly arranged so that Science becomes a separate entity and Invention was combined with the Engineering subtheme to form a new expanded theme under the new heading of Technology. Other subthemes have been added and facets raised to the subtheme level so that more important components of certain historical themes receive greater recognition. The facet levels have been refined, condensed, or enlarged where needed, so that more precise and significant coverage of all aspects of the subthemes is provided.

There is a significant change in Theme I, previously entitled, The Original Inhabitants. This outline, traditionally understood to cover archeological sites, has been expanded to reflect greater detail and currency in archeology and to provide a broader range for ethnohistory. Revised assignments of National Park System Units and National Historic Landmarks to categories within this theme is absent from the outline (pp. II-1 and III-1). These are being prepared and are expected to appear in a supplement which will be incorporated into a later edition of this publication. It was not thought worthwhile to reproduce the assignments of the previous (1982) outline in this theme.

In the previous (1982) edition, many subthemes specifically excluded aspects covered in other subthemes. Under this scheme, western mining in the 19th century was excluded from Commerce and Industry, even though no one doubts that resources of national significance relate to both areas. These exclusions have been eliminated.

The dates given for various themes or subthemes will bracket specific times, as is the case for wars, or with other classifications that are accepted by the professional community, such as architectural periods. There are, however, precursors and later phenomena to be found outside of any given time frame. Therefore, the dates given in this document are not meant to be rigidly imposed, but to be used as general guides to placement.

With the above changes, it is hoped that the users of this revised theme structure will find that it offers them greater flexibility, clarity, and direction in classification and survey, thus, making it more convenient to use. This thematic outline is an evolving framework; it will change as our understanding of history and prehistory changes and National Historic Landmarks are designated and de-designated. Readers are invited to comment on this publication so that it might receive continuous review for successive revision.

THE THEMATIC FRAMEWORK

I. CULTURAL DEVELOPMENTS: INDIGENOUS AMERICAN POPULATIONS

A. The Earliest Inhabitants

This subtheme deals with the earliest prehistoric inhabitants of areas now making up the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, and U.S. possessions who subsisted by various methods of hunting, fishing, and gathering. In general, the subtheme covers the earliest entry of humans into these areas when previously unoccupied, any subsequent migrations that may have taken place, and later social, economic, and other cultural developments. The period began in many areas with early hunters and gatherers, and includes later peoples who practiced more variation in their hunting, fishing, and gathering techniques. Agriculture was unknown or not intensively practiced, and pottery making appeared only toward the end of the period.

The New World was settled prior to 12,000 years ago—when, exactly, is not certain. The first inhabitants are believed to have entered North America from Asia via a land connection that once existed between the two continents. The populating of more southerly sections of North America and the islands of the Pacific and Caribbean occurred later (the Hawaiian Islands of the Pacific, for example, are believed to have been first settled within the last two millennia). Some of the early hunters and gatherers in North America hunted a variety of big game animals, many of which are now extinct. This hunting pattern continued to approximately 8,000 years ago. The peoples that followed were oriented to a more diversified subsistence base, still using large game animals when available, but often engaging in specialized fishing, small mammal hunting, and plant collecting activities as well. This period, referred to in many regions as the Archaic, continued to approximately 3000 years ago, but in some areas persisted into historic times. It was during the later stages of the Archaic that the shift to cultivation of agricultural crops began, and the expanded development of sedentary communities. The following facets are intended to cover a majority of pre-Archaic and Archaic cultural developments and adaptations:

1. The Early Peopling of North America
2. The Early Peopling of the Pacific
3. The Early Peopling of the Caribbean
4. Archaic Adaptations of the Arctic
5. Archaic Adaptations of the Subarctic
6. Archaic Adaptations of the Northwest Coast
7. Western Archaic Adaptations (California Area)
8. Plateau (Columbia/Colorado) Archaic Adaptations
10. Archaic Adaptations of the Southwest
11. Archaic Adaptations of the Plains
12. Archaic Adaptations of the Mississippi Valley Region
13. Archaic Adaptations of the Southeast (including the Cumberland Region)
14. Archaic Adaptations of the Caribbean
15. Archaic Adaptations of the Northeast (Including the Ohio Valley Region)
16. Archaic Adaptations in Montane Regions
17. Archaic Adaptations in Arid Lands
18. Archaic Adaptations in Riverine Zones
19. Early Man and Late Pleistocene Environmental Adaptations
20. Human Factors in Terminal Pleistocene Faunal Extinctions
21. The Big Game Hunters
22. Human Osteological Evidence of Early Inhabitants
23. Domestication of the Dog
24. Other

B. Post-Archaic and Pre-Contact Developments

This subtheme is concerned with the appearance of domesticated plants (and in some cases animals) and development of hunters and gatherers into farmers in many areas of North America following the Archaic. It also covers development of specialized maritime, riverine, and other adaptations in select areas that allowed for growth of a sedentary way of life that was not specifically agriculturally based. Its culmination is seen in large sedentary communities that developed in areas favorable to agriculture, such as the Southwest, but can also be seen in communities that developed as a result of the use of specialized fishing and hunting techniques or a combination of these and other practices. Maritime and agricultural practices, for example, formed the foundation for cultural developments in both the Hawaiian and Caribbean islands, and specialized maritime technology supported cultural developments that took place in the Arctic, along the Northwest Coast, and elsewhere. Of course, relatively large, sedentary communities did not develop everywhere and a modified Archaic adaptation survived in many areas into the historic period. This theme covers the period from the end of the Archaic to initial historically recorded contacts of indigenous peoples with nonindigenous peoples. The following facets are intended to cover a majority of post-Archaic cultural developments and adaptations:

1. Arctic Hunters and Gatherers
2. Subarctic Hunters and Gatherers
3. Hunters and Gatherers of Western Littoral and Sierra Regions (California)
4. Northwest Coast Collectors, Hunters, and Fishermen
5. Plateau (Columbia/Colorado) Hunters, Gatherers, and Fishermen
6. Great Basin Hunters and Gatherers
7. Southwestern Hunters and Gatherers
8. Southwestern Farmers
9. Post-Archaic Adaptations
10. Plains Hunters and Gatherers
11. Plains Farmers
12. Post-Archaic Adaptations of the Mississippi Valley
13. Post-Archaic Adaptations of Great Lakes Coastal Regions
14. Hunters and Gatherers of the Eastern Woodlands
15. Eastern Farmers
16. Post-Archaic Adaptations of Eastern Coastal Regions
17. Caribbean Adaptations
18. Post-Archaic Adaptations in Montane (High-Altitude) Regions

I-2
19. Post-Archaic Adaptations in Arid Lands
20. Post-Archaic Adaptations in Riverine Zones
21. Late Prehistoric Adaptations in the Western, Central, and Eastern Pacific
22. Physical Anthropology of the American Indian, Eskimo, and Aleut
23. Other

C. Prehistoric Archeology: Topical Facets

The following facets are intended to provide topical aspects from which to assign significance to prehistoric period sites. They can be used singly or in combination with the subthemes and facets listed above. This list is by no means complete and will need to be revised, as necessary, to identify themes and facets that reflect the nation's important prehistoric period archeological resources. The list is provided to identify certain aspects of native life depicting activities not readily assignable to one or more of the other subthemes and facets listed above.

1. Prehistoric Architecture/Shelter/Housing
2. Prehistoric Technology
3. Prehistoric Social and Political Organizations
4. Prehistoric Science/Intellectual Developments
5. Prehistoric Arts/Handicrafts
6. Prehistoric Communication
7. Prehistoric Diet/Health
8. Prehistoric Economics/Trade
9. Prehistoric Warfare
10. Prehistoric Religion, Ideology, and Ceremonialism
11. Prehistoric Social Differentiation
12. Prehistoric Settlements and Settlement Patterns
13. Prehistoric Urban Development
14. Prehistoric Rural Development
15. Prehistoric Transportation and Travel
16. Prehistoric Agriculture/Plant Domestication/Horticulture
17. Prehistoric Animal Domestication/Husbandry
18. Prehistoric Demographics
19. Prehistoric Cultural Change
20. Submerged Prehistoric Period Archeological Resources
21. Major Contributions to the Development of Culture Histories
22. Major Contributions to the Development of the Science of Archeology
23. Paleoecology
24. Prehistoric Human Physical Remains
25. Other

It must be noted that archeological values do not end with the prehistoric period but continue into the historic period as well. Many, if not all, of the historic period themes, subthemes, and facets in the framework can have associated nationally significant archeological remains. In some cases archeology is the key discipline that can shed additional light on the historical record concerning a specific theme or its sub-elements. Thus, significant archeological values associated with the themes that follow can and should be identified and classified by the appropriate theme; that is, the specific archeological values that contribute, in whole or in part, to the assignment... of the theme(s) to a specific site should be identified. An initiative that deserves special attention, and not adequately included in the following themes, is the identification of nationally significant submerged historic period archeological resources, particularly shipwrecks and other remains of maritime activities.

D. Ethnohistory of Indigenous American Populations

Considered here is the period from the earliest historically recorded contacts between indigenous and non-indigenous people until contemporary times. Evidence for the assignment of ethnohistorical themes may require the integration of archeological findings with ethnographic analysis of documentary materials, ethnographic oral histories, and ethnographic interviews.

A dynamic approach to indigenous experiences in the colonial system and the evolving nation necessitates new orientations to theme categories. As a result, themes, subthemes, and facets better reflect the dimension of change in native cultures and, to a lesser degree, in the lifeways of colonists who interacted with native peoples. The proposed concepts still inadequately capture the spirit of either stability or change, of processes and products of human action in and reaction to new natural and cultural environments, and may require additional refinement.

1. Native Cultural Adaptations at Contact

This facet provides baseline markers of representative cultural adaptations evolved by native peoples in response to local habitats and adjacent groups at the time of historically recorded contact, immediately before non-native cultures have had demonstrable structural impact. Emphasis is on the relationships among native technology, resource use, demographic features and settlement patterns. Family and community organization, economics, including division of labor and economic exchanges, political patterns, religious beliefs and practices, and intertribal relations are considered, too. This facet applies to cultures of the continental United States, including Alaska, as well as the Pacific and Caribbean. It ranges temporally from the 15th to the 20th centuries, when contact with Hawaiians and Alaskans became widespread.

a. Native Adaptations to Arctic Environments
b. Native Adaptations to Subarctic Environments
c. Native Adaptations to Northwest Coast Environments
d. Native Adaptations to the Western Littoral and Sierra Environments (CA)
e. Native Adaptations to Southwestern Environments
f. Native Adaptations to Plateau Environments
g. Native Adaptations to Great Basin Environments
h. Native Adaptations to Plains Environments
i. Native Adaptations to Northeastern Environments
j. Native Adaptations to Southeastern Environments
k. Native Adaptations to Caribbean Environments
1. Native Adaptations to Micronesian Environments
   m. Native Adaptations to Polynesian Environments

2. Establishing Intercultural Relations

   This facet emphasizes bases for early interactions between native and non-native cultures in the continental United States, Hawaii, Alaska, and in the Caribbean, Micronesia, and Polynesia. It considers economic, political, and religious bases in addition to the individuals or groups responsible for intercultural contact.

   a. Trapping and Fishing for Newcomers
   b. Whaling and other Maritime Activities
   c. Military Scouts
   d. Guiding Explorers Across New Territories
   e. Defending Native Homelands
   f. Defending Native Religious Systems
   g. Introductions to Foreign Religious Systems
   h. New Native Military Alliances
   i. Trade Relationships
   j. Cash Cropping
   k. Helping Foreigners Survive: Providing Food, Clothing, and Shelter

3. Varieties of Early Conflict, Conquest, or Accommodation

   This facet considers the effects of British, French, Spanish, and other colonists and newcomers, including Blacks, on native peoples and cultures. It focuses on consequences for the native economy, including resource use and technology; family and community life; religious aspects; and intertribal relations. Demography is considered, too, because the depopulation of customary native areas as a result of disease, military, or other hostile encounters, relocation, resettlement, and population decline also triggered modification of customary culture patterns. This facet begins with the contact period and continues until native peoples are about to be incorporated, by treaty, legislation, land purchase, or other means, into the United States' political apparatus. The period ends sooner for groups in the continental U.S. than those on Hawaii or in Alaska.

   a. Transfer of Technology to Native Peoples
      1. Domestic Plants and Animals, Cultivation, and Husbandry
      2. Military Culture, e.g., Organization, Values, Technology, and Materials
      3. Fermentation, Alcoholic Beverages, Tobacco, Drugs, and Medicines
      4. Communication Systems
   b. Forced and Voluntary Population Movements
      1. The Establishment of Indian Territory
      2. The Changing Cultural Geography of the Southeast, Northeast, etc.
      3. New Inter- and Intragroup Alliances
      4. Military Removal and Concentration
   c. The New Demographics
      1. Disease and Massacres: Their Cultural and Biological Effects
2. Depopulation of Terrain
3. Captives, Slaves, and Refugees
d. Changing Settlement Types
   1. Mounted Hunters
   2. Sedentary Villagers
   3. Townspeople
   4. Plantation Laborers
   5. Missionized Settlements
   6. Reservations
   7. Maritime Trade Centers
   8. Pastoralists and Ranchers
   9. Urban Neighborhoods

4. Native Contributions to the Development of the Nation's Cultures

This facet addresses native contributions to the evolving and distinctive national cultures either by the direct transfer of native technology to newcomers, by syncretisms that reflect native or non-native ingenuity in combining materials or concepts from the two traditions, by inspiring non-natives to adapt traditional native cultures to new needs, and by otherwise contributing to the nation's creative pool.

a. Transferring Native Technology to Newcomers: Food, Clothing, Drugs, Medicines, and Means of Transportation
b. Native Roles in Decorative and Fine Arts, Literature, and Music
c. Native Roles in the Development of Humanism, the Social Sciences, and the Law
d. Native Roles in the Changing Images of America: the West, Hawaii, Alaska, etc.

5. Becoming Native American

This facet considers the processes leading to incorporation of native peoples as ethnic subcultures of a more inclusive national economic, social, and political system.

a. Treaties and Laws Formally Defining Native American Statuses and Roles
b. Federal Education programs to Assimilate Native Americans
c. The Role of Missionaries in Assimilation
d. Native Responses to New Economic, Political, and Territorial Arrangements
e. Native Statuses in New Stratification Systems
f. The Bureau of Indian Affairs
g. Co-existing Political Bodies: Chiefdoms, Monarchies, and Nations within the Nation

6. The Myth of the Vanishing Native

This facet considers contemporary American Indians, Eskimos, Aleuts, Micronesians, and Polynesians as demographically recovering and culturally viable populations. Evolving adaptations of contemporary peoples are considered, including orientations to mechanized agriculture, timbering, fishing, non-native extractive industries, tourism, and urban living.
a. Ethnic Revitalization
   1. Changing Tribal Statuses, Political, and Religious Systems
   2. Ethnic Associations (including Pan-Indian Groups)

b. Resource Use
   1. Commercial Timbering, Fishing, Agriculture, and Ranching
   2. Extractive Industries
   3. Subsistence Cultivation
   4. 20th-Century Hunters and Herders

c. Tourism

d. Large and Small Industries

e. Contemporary Reservations and Villages

f. Urban Subcultures

g. The New Professionals

II. EUROPEAN COLONIAL EXPLORATION AND SETTLEMENT

This theme covers related activities of European nations as colonial powers within the present territory of the United States from the earliest recorded voyages until 1917.

A. Spanish Exploration and Settlement

   This subtheme includes all activities by Spain within the present continental and overseas territory of the United States from Columbus' landing on St. Croix in 1493 until the conclusion of the Spanish-American War in 1898.

   1. Caribbean
   2. Southeast
   3. Southwest
   4. California
   5. Pacific

B. French Exploration and Settlement

   This subtheme deals with the activities of France within the present territory of the United States from her initial explorations in the 16th century until the transfer of Louisiana to the United States in 1803.

   1. Atlantic
   2. St. Lawrence and Great Lakes
   3. Mississippi Valley
   4. Gulf Coast

C. English Exploration and Settlement

   This subtheme addresses the activities of Great Britain within the present territory of the United States from Cabot's voyage in 1497 through colonization of the 13 original colonies, as well as later exploration related to present United States territory in the Pacific.
III. DEVELOPMENT OF THE ENGLISH COLONIES, 1688-1763

This theme focuses on the physical, military, and political development of Great Britain's North American colonies during the 18th century. The period was marked by the defeat and occupation of New France; by a significant increase in population and wealth; and by a growing independence of thought and action stimulated by the distinctive environment of a new continent.

A. Physical Development:
1. Growth of Urban Areas and Previous Settlements
2. Territorial Expansion

B. Political and Diplomatic Affairs:
1. Intracolonial Matters
2. Relations with Parliament and Crown

C. Military Affairs:
1. French
2. Spanish

D. Social and Economic Affairs
1. Intellectual and Religious Affairs
2. Economic Affairs and Ways of Life

IV. THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

This theme embraces the political and military conflict between the "thirteen United States of America" and Great Britain, 1763-1783. In addition to the military campaigns and engagements, it focuses on the political events leading up to the revolution and the diplomatic moves by the various parties to the conflict, as well as political and social events during that era that were not directly related to the Revolution.
A. Politics and Diplomacy, 1763-1783
B. The Declaration of Independence
C. War in the North
D. War in the South
E. War on the Frontier
F. The Naval War

V. POLITICAL AND MILITARY AFFAIRS, 1783-1860

This theme addresses the related activities during that period in which the United States developed from a weak confederation into a stable and growing nation—a nation capable of coping with most of its major domestic problems, of defending its interests by military action on land and sea, and of holding its own in international diplomacy. There was also a greater democratization of political institutions during this period. This theme also deals with the affairs of government during the three decades preceding the Civil War. The end of this period witnessed the general extension of suffrage to include all white males and expression of the dynamic concept of Manifest Destiny; but these developments were ultimately overshadowed by the increase of sectionalism that led to disunion and the Civil War.

A. Confederation Period, 1783-1789
B. The Constitution
C. Early Federal Period, 1789-1800
D. Jeffersonian Period, 1800-1811
E. War of 1812, 1812-1815
F. Post-War Nationalism, 1816-1828
G. Jacksonian Democracy, 1828-1844
H. Manifest Destiny, 1844-1859
I. Mexican War, 1846-1848
J. The Rise of Sectionalism, 1840-1859
K. The Army and Navy

VI. THE CIVIL WAR

This theme focuses on the epic struggle between the North and the South that eliminated both slavery and the right of secession as a consequential political theory. Included are all military, political, and diplomatic activities related to this first of the "total" American wars, and all other political and social activities of this era not related to the war.

A. The Nation Divides, 1860-1861
B. War in the East
C. War in the West
D. Naval Action
E. Political and Diplomatic Scene
VII. POLITICAL AND MILITARY AFFAIRS, 1865-1939

This theme treats related activities from the end of the Civil War until the beginning of the conflict that became World War II. The period was characterized by the reconstruction of the South, the increasing influence of big business and the efforts of "Progressive" political reformers to counteract it, a "war" with Spain, the increasing stature of the United States as a world power, especially with the entry of the country into World War I. The period was also characterized by massive immigration and isolationism after the war, the tremendous rise in the standard of living, the Great Depression that followed the 1929 crash of the stock market, and the subsequent increase in the role of the national government in economic and social affairs.

A. The Reconstruction Era, 1865-1877
B. The Republican Era, 1877-1900
C. The Progressive Era, 1901-1914
D. America Becomes a World Power, 1865-1914
   1. Military Affairs (including the Spanish-American War)
   2. Politics and Diplomacy
E. World War I, 1914-1919
F. Military Affairs Not Related to World War I or World War II, 1914-1941
G. Republican Prosperity, 1920-1929
H. The Great Depression and the New Deal, 1929-1941

VIII. WORLD WAR II

This theme deals with the political, military, and diplomatic activities of the United States on the eve of and during the global struggle against the Axis powers from 1939 to 1945, and other political and military events of the era not associated with the war.

A. War in Europe, Africa, and the Atlantic, 1939-1945
B. War in the Pacific, 1941-1945
C. Politics and Diplomacy During the War
D. The Home Front

IX. POLITICAL AND MILITARY AFFAIRS AFTER 1945

This theme focuses on post-World War II events in United States history. It covers such facets as the aftermath of the war, the formation of the United Nations, the restructuring of world systems, the Korean Conflict, the "Cold War" between the United States and its allies and the Soviet Union and the emergence of the United States as the leader of the Free World. (Because this time period is so recent, individual facets will need to be determined and reevaluated with the perspective that will inevitably come with greater distance in time from these events.)
X. WESTWARD EXPANSION OF THE BRITISH COLONIES AND THE UNITED STATES, 1763-1898

This theme embraces the expansion of the British colonies and the United States from the crest of the Appalachians across the North American continent and into the Pacific Ocean, between the Proclamation of 1763 and the end of the Spanish-American War.

A. British and United States Explorations of the West

Included in this subtheme are the activities of military and civilian explorers west of the Appalachians from the 1760s to the early 1870s.

1. Early Pathfinders, 1763-1807
2. Lewis and Clark Expedition, 1804-1806
3. Scientific and Topographic Surveys

B. The Fur Trade

This subtheme encompasses the history of the American fur trade west of the Appalachians from the days of the "long hunters" in Kentucky in the 1760s through the activities of the fur seal and sea otter trappers in Alaskan waters during the late 1890s.

1. Old Northwest and Mississippi Valley Fur Frontier, 1763-1815
2. Fur Trappers and Mountain Men as Pathfinders
3. John Jacob Astor and the American Fur Company, 1808-1840
4. Rocky Mountain Rendezvous Era, 1824-1839 (including Rocky Mountain Fur Company, 1822-1834)
5. Southwest Fur Trade
6. Hudson's Bay Company and the Northwest Coast Fur Trade
7. Alaska Fur Trade

C. Military-Aboriginal American Contact and Conflict

This subtheme covers the relations between the British colonies and the United States with the aboriginal peoples west of the Appalachians (including military confrontations and conflicts) from 1763 to 1891.

1. East of the Mississippi, 1763-1850s
2. The Southern Plains
3. The Northern Plains
4. The Southwest
5. The Western Mountains
6. The Pacific Coast

D. Western Trails and Travelers

Included in this subtheme are the development of commercial and migratory trails westward and the history of their use and users.

1. First Westward Trails East of the Mississippi
2. Santa Fe Trail
3. Oregon Trail and Settlement of Oregon
4. California Trails and Settlement of California
5. Mormon Migration and Settlement of the Great Basin

E. The Mining Frontier

This subtheme treats all phases of the history of mining west of the Appalachians from the mid-18th century until the end of the 19th.

1. California Gold Rush
3. Southwest: Arizona and New Mexico
4. Great Basin: Nevada, Utah, and Eastern California
5. Rockies: Colorado and Wyoming
6. Black Hills of South Dakota
7. Alaskan Gold Rushes

F. The Farmers' Frontier

This subtheme addresses the extension of agriculture from the Appalachians to the Pacific coast between the end of the French and Indian War and the close of the 19th century, when most cheap land suitable for farming had been appropriated.

1. Farming Frontier of the Old Northwest, 1763-1820
2. Settling and Farming the Eastern Prairies, 1820-1861
3. Later Settlements and Farming in the California Valley, Oregon, and Washington
4. Settling and Farming in the Great Plains, 1862-1900

G. The Cattlemen's Empire

This subtheme is concerned with the history of the cattle industry west of the Appalachians, which reached its apogee in the Great Plains during the latter half of the 19th century. Major phases include the large open Texas ranges of the 1860s and the transition to the enclosed holdings of the large cattle companies in the 1880s.

1. Great Trail Drives, 1866-1885
2. The Cow Towns, 1866-1885
3. Ranches

XI. AGRICULTURE

This theme deals with the practice of plant and animal husbandry within the present territory of the United States. Emphasized are the development of various farming techniques and the varieties of crops, livestock, and implements employed over time and in differing regions.

A. Era of Adaptation, 1607-1763
B. Plantation Agriculture, 1607-1860
C. Era of Subsistence Agriculture, 1763-1820
This theme is concerned with the development of commerce, industry, and domestic and international trade within the present territory of the United States. Included are practices, methods, organizations, and techniques associated with these activities.

A. Extractive or Mining Industries
   1. Iron and Ferro Alloys
   2. Petroleum and Related Resources
   3. Other Metals and Minerals
   4. Timber and Lumber
   5. Fishing and Livestock

B. Manufacturing Organizations
   1. Food, Beverages, and Tobacco
   2. Transportation Equipment
   3. Machinery and Instruments
   4. Fabricated Metal and Glass Products
   5. Thread and Needle Industries
   6. Paper, Printing, and Publishing
   7. Chemicals and Allied Products
   8. Home Furnishings and Furniture
   9. Other

C. Construction and Housing
   1. Commercial
   2. Private
   3. Public

D. Trade
   1. Export-Import
   2. Wholesale
   3. Retail
   4. Advertising
   5. Commodity Markets

E. Finance and Banking
   1. Commercial Banks
   2. Savings and Loan Associations
   3. Mutual Savings Banks
   4. Credit Unions
   5. Finance and Personal Loan Companies
   6. Credit Companies (Credit Card Industry)
   7. Public Regulatory Institutions
   8. Stock and Other Market Exchanges
   9. General Finance
