national parks & landmarks
areas administered by the national park service and related properties as of January 1, 1972

Congress has designated 1972 as National Parks Centennial Year and established a National Parks Centennial Commission to celebrate the beginning of the national park idea with appropriate ceremonies, culminating in the Second World Conference on National Parks. This international conference will be held in September 1972 in Yellowstone and Grand Teton National Parks. Delegates representing many countries will examine the role of parks in a time of deepening environmental crisis and look for ways to strengthen and extend the national park idea throughout the world.

2. Comprises 720 reservations within the District of Columbia, Virginia, and Maryland.
3. Without national designation.

NOTE: Areas identified as Living Farms conduct appropriate farming operations all year. Areas identified as Living History areas conduct appropriate historical and cultural activities. Depending on the area, these demonstrate Indian, Hawaiian, colonial, pioneer, frontier, and military life, crafts, and transportation methods, generally using costumes and techniques of the historical periods.

This new park concept is exemplified by Wolf Trap Farm Park, the first national park for the performing arts. Cultural parks are a response to the critical need to preserve significant elements of the American cultural heritage which may soon disappear. The traditional life styles and customs of Indian people, as well as existing cultural patterns of other groups, are eminently worthy of preserving.

Cowpens National Battlefield, S. C., changed from a national battlefield site and enlarged to 846.24 acres under Public Law 92-272, April 11, 1972.

Note: The total number of national battlefields now stands at 7; national battlefield sites at 2; national historic sites at 46; national parkways at 6; national river, a new classification, 1.
As the Nation's principal conservation agency, the Department of the Interior has basic responsibilities for water, fish, wildlife, mineral, land, park, and recreational resources. Indian and Territorial affairs are other major concerns of America's "Department of Natural Resources." The Department works to assure the wisest choice in managing all our resources so each will make its full contribution to a better United States—now and in the future.
