Welcome to Ford’s Theatre National Historic Site!

Hello! You are at Ford’s Theatre National Historic Site (NHS), managed by the National Park Service (NPS), a bureau of the United States Department of the Interior. Over a million people visit this park each year, just a portion of over 250 million people that go to National Parks annually.

The National Park Service was founded in 1916 by an Act of Congress signed into law by then President Woodrow Wilson. That act charges the NPS to “promote and regulate the use of the Federal areas known as national parks, monuments and reservations... to conserve the scenery and the natural and historic objects and the wild life therein and to provide for the enjoyment of the same in such manner and by such means as will leave them unimpaired for the enjoyment of future generations.” These are the core values of the National Park Service.

In 1933, 56 nationally important sites managed by the Forest Service and the War Department were transferred to the National Park Service. It eventually grew to a network of almost 400 natural, historic, and recreational sites covering over 84 million acres in 49 states, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico, Saipan, and the Virgin Islands. The current mission of the NPS is “to preserve the natural and cultural resources and values of the national park system for the enjoyment, education, and inspiration of this and future generations.”

Funding for this booklet was provided by the National Park Foundation, the official charity of America’s National Parks. The National Park Foundation supports the National Park Service’s Junior Ranger program as part of a nationwide effort to connect children to America’s heritage and ensure the future of its national parks for all children’s enjoyment and enrichment.

This booklet was produced by the National Park Service and created by Student Conservation Association (SCA) Junior Ranger Ambassador Michael Chornesky. Special thanks to Wendy Davis, Tom Davies, Corky Mayo, Rae Emerson, Gloria Swift, Jeff Leary, Ford’s Theatre Society Education staff Nicole Murray and Sarah Jencks, Terry Adams, and others, whose efforts assured swift completion.

Did You Know?

- California has the most national parks of any U.S. state: 23.
- Delaware is the only U.S. state that does not contain a national park.

Park Mission:
The mission of Ford’s Theatre National Historic Site is to protect and conserve the historic site and associated artifact/museum collection (including Petersen House---the House Where Lincoln died). We also seek to promote and preserve by formal and informal interpretation the legacy, assassination, and final hours of Abraham Lincoln, along with nineteenth century theatre.

This image is the National Park Service logo. The trees, mountains and buffalo represent the natural resources that NPS manages. The arrowhead stands for historical and cultural resources. Arrowhead courtesy NPS.

Safety Tip 1: Rangers and park volunteers wear uniforms to identify themselves to you. Some have nametags. They wear either a gray and green uniform with an NPS arrowhead (see pages 2 and 14) on the sleeve or a shirt with a Ford’s Theatre logo. Along with your family, friends and teachers, these people can help you finish this booklet during your visit. Please stay close to your parent or guardian at all times.

Park History: The building that is now Ford’s Theatre dates all the way back to 1834, when it was opened as the First Baptist Church of Washington, D.C. John T. Ford purchased it in 1861 and transformed it into a theatre, which opened with the performance of an opera on November 19, 1861. In December 1862, a bad fire gutted the building, but the Fords rebuilt it and it was reopened as Ford’s New Theatre in August 1863. President Abraham Lincoln attended over a dozen shows here between 1863 and April 14, 1865.

Actor John Wilkes Booth shot and killed Lincoln as he watched the play Our American Cousin here that night. The Fords tried to reopen the Theatre in July of 1865, but public pressure forced them to close it for good. Ford sold the building to the War Department in 1866. It was used as government offices until June 9, 1893, when the filled-in upper floors collapsed, killing 22 and injuring another 68.

Following the collapse, the building became a warehouse and Lincoln Museum. Meanwhile, in 1896, the U.S. government purchased Petersen House, where Lincoln died. The National Park Service acquired Ford’s Theatre in 1933. With the help of Ford’s Theatre Society, founded in 1967 by Frankie Hewitt, NPS restored Ford’s Theatre to its 1865 appearance and reopened it as a working theatre and historic site on January 30, 1968. Further renovations started in 2007, and the Theatre reopened on February 12, 2009, the 200th anniversary of Lincoln’s birth.

What is Here For Me to See?: Tickets to visit Ford’s Theatre NHS are available online and in person at the box office. The site is open daily, and tickets are free of charge. Visitors can see three separate attractions:

Museum: Reopened on July 15, 2009, this state-of-the-art museum features videos and historical artifacts such as the suit Lincoln wore to the Theatre and Booth’s Deringer pistol.

Ford’s Theatre: This working theatre is open from 9:00 am to 4:30 pm every day except Christmas and performance nights. They can involve either a presentation by a Park Ranger or volunteer, a walkthrough, or sometimes even a short play.

Petersen House: Narrated walkthroughs of “The House Where Lincoln Died” are available from 9:30 am to 5:30 pm daily. Park visits can run up to 90 minutes.
How Do I Become a Junior Ranger?

Welcome to the Junior Ranger Program!

Now that you know about what went into creating this booklet and the important places you can explore while visiting Ford's Theatre National Historic Site, it is now time for you to become an official Junior Ranger with the National Park Service!

The checklist below can help you track the activities you have finished and the amount you need to complete to achieve your goal. There are eleven activities in all. If you are nine years old or less, complete three activities to receive a Ford's Theatre Junior Ranger badge and certificate and a total of five to also get a National Park Service patch. If you are over nine years old, finish five activities for a badge and certificate and seven total to get a patch. The table of contents on the page two lists each activity and their locations to help you find the tasks you want to do.

Walk the Past

The effects of the Lincoln assassination on April 14, 1865 were felt not only at Ford’s Theatre and inside Petersen House, but all over Washington. This activity will enable you, and the people with you, to explore the past by seeing other places that played a part in the events of that night. Below and on the next page, you have a map of the nearby area, a list of places to visit, some information about each of them, and a question to answer at each stop. Visit three of the six sites on the map to complete the activity. Make sure to read the safety tip on the next page before you go. Have fun!

Mary Surratt’s Boarding House: This house, located at 604 H Street, belonged to Mary Surratt, who was executed along with conspirators Lewis Powell, David Herold and George Atzerodt on July 7, 1865. The house played host to many involved in the plot during 1864 and 1865. Be sure to look for the small plaque on the building’s front and a blue signboard near the street created by Cultural Tourism DC, as both give interesting information about the house’s history.

Question: What business now occupies the Surratt Boarding House?

2. Old Patent Office/Smithsonian National Portrait Gallery Building: On March 6, 1865, Abraham Lincoln held his Second Inaugural Ball in this building, which was then home to the U.S. Patent Office. He may have walked exactly where you are standing now! To learn more about this building, read the Cultural Tourism DC signboard on the sidewalk on F Street between 7th and 9th.

Question: What museum is directly across the street from the Old Patent Office building?

3. Herndon House: In 1865, the southwest corner of 9th and F Streets was home to Herndon House, a small hotel. At 8:00 pm on the night of April 14, 1865, John Wilkes Booth and fellow conspirators David Herold and Lewis Powell, who were staying at the hotel, met to plan their attacks on Lincoln, Vice President Andrew Johnson, and Secretary of State William Seward.

Question: What hotel occupies the site of Herndon House today?

4. “Baptist Alley”: Further down F Street toward 10th, you’ll see a long alley. Down this alley and to the right is the back of Ford’s Theatre, where Booth fled after he shot Lincoln. It is known as “Baptist Alley” because Ford’s Theatre’s building was originally home to the First Baptist Church of Washington. For more information, see the Cultural Tourism DC signboard on F Street just outside the alley.

Question: How many doorways do you see in the back of the Theatre? What do you think they were used for? What are they used for today?

5. Kirkwood House: At 12th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue (diagonal from the Old Post Office tower) is where Kirkwood House (a hotel) stood in 1865. Andrew Johnson slept here as the assassination was happening. One of Booth’s accomplices, George Atzerodt (who stayed here), was supposed to shoot Johnson, but could not bring himself to do it. Booth also stopped by that morning looking for Johnson.

Question: What kind of building stands on the site of Kirkwood House today?

6. National Theatre: This building on Pennsylvania Avenue between 13th and 14th housed what was Grover’s National Theatre in 1865. It remains a working theatre to this day. Lincoln watched a number of productions here during his Presidency. On the night of April 14, 1865, Lincoln’s son Tad watched a play, Aladdin and the Magic Lamp here as John Wilkes Booth shot his father at Ford’s Theatre. For more, download Cultural Tourism DC’s podcast (CulturalTourismDC.org) on this and other downtown sites.

Question: Go to Freedom Plaza across the street from National Theatre. Look toward the Theatre. Now look to your right (east). What important building do you see looking down Pennsylvania Avenue?

Safety Tip 2: Remember as you visit the park that you’re in a busy urban area. Stay with your parents or group at all times and be careful crossing streets around the city. Be aware on Tenth Street (between the Theatre and Petersen House) especially, as it is a high traffic area for cars, trucks, and tour buses.

This drawing of Booth escaping the stage of Ford’s Theatre (background) appeared in the April 29, 1865, issue of Harper’s Weekly, an important newspaper during the Civil War period. Image courtesy Library of Congress.
What is the Keyword?

In this activity, you will see a series of questions about the history of Ford's Theatre and President Lincoln’s assassination at the bottom of the page. Answer them using what you learn from the exhibits and listening to Park Rangers here. Each answer contains one letter of a keyword, which is inside the box at the center of the page. Several hints about the keyword are also given to help you. Hints to help you answer the eight questions can be found in the museum tour, theatre presentation and at the house where Lincoln died.

Question Bank:
1. This doctor cared for Booth’s broken leg as he fled through Southern Maryland.
2. State that seceded from the Union in 1861, Booth died there 12 days after shooting Lincoln.
3. This man stabbed Secretary of State William Seward on the night of April 14, 1865.
4. The Northern states were collectively known by this name during the Civil War.
5. Lincoln’s assassin belonged to this acting family, along with his brothers Edwin and Junius.
6. A family deeply involved in the plot, both mother and son were later tried in different courts.
7. Lincoln was taken to this house across the street shortly after being shot in the theatre.
8. This Civil War era photographer took pictures of the Theatre just after Lincoln’s death.

Hints (about the keyword):
Many members of this group lived in Washington during the Civil War, helped close the Theatre permanently late in 1865 and brought to justice many involved in the assassination.

Wanted!

It is the night of April 14, 1865. You are a detective of the Washington City Police Department. You hear a commotion from down the street at Ford’s Theatre and the crowd outside tells you that the President was just shot, his assassin escaped. You are charged to find and bring to justice those who helped John Wilkes Booth plan and carry out the assassination. You will be given the names and photographs of six people. Some of them are guilty, others are not. Using museum exhibits, ranger presentations, and your detective skills, discover and circle or mark those who aided Booth in his crime.

In the background is a wanted poster from April 20, 1865. It offers a reward for the capture of Booth and accomplices John Surratt and David Herold. Images courtesy National Park Service and Library of Congress.
What is the Secret Message?

During the Civil War, people often used codes to communicate important information. These codes created messages that could not be read without a key, which the person for whom the message was written usually knew beforehand. For this task, you will be given a list of numbers that seem random, but which contain a secret message about the park. Using the key below, decode the message. Also check out the bonus question and an interesting fact about John Wilkes Booth and codes further down the page.

Key:  M = 1     I = 2     C = 3     H = 4     A = 5     E = 6     L = 7     O = 8     R = 9     N = 10
      S = 11     K = 12     Y = 13     U = 14     D = 15     P = 16     T = 17     Z = 18     Q = 19
      B = 20     F = 21      J = 22      G = 23      V = 24      X = 25     W = 26

Bonus Question:
Three other U.S. Presidents were assassinated in office. Name as many of them as you can.

Did You Know?
Police discovered coded letters in John Wilkes Booth’s room at the National Hotel shortly after he fled Washington. Many think these letters and several meetings Booth may have had in Canada with Confederate agents show that there was a much larger conspiracy to kill President Lincoln. And while no direct evidence has yet been found of a link between Booth, the conspirators, and the Confederate government, historians continue to debate the issue.

Who Were Lincoln and Douglass?

As you go through the park, you will hear much about the sixteenth president of the United States, Abraham Lincoln. A related figure from his time was Frederick Douglass, a former slave who, like Lincoln, rose to fame using his skills as a public speaker. Using what you know and what you can gather from exhibits and Park Rangers, fill in the provided Venn diagram (below) with what these important men shared in common and where they differed from one another. A video about them plays in the museum if you need help.

What is a Venn Diagram? A Venn diagram is made up of two overlapping circles (see above). This Venn diagram is meant to display similarities and differences between Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass, with traits they share going where the two circles overlap and traits one has that the other doesn’t going in that person’s circle.

Bonus Question: Name a key change that occurred in post-Civil War America that both Lincoln and Douglass helped to effect.

Who Am I?

Plays and theatre are important to Ford’s Theatre National Historic Site. Lincoln was shot here, in a theatre, and his assassin was an actor. In this activity, the name, photo, and a short biography of four people who attended or were involved in theatre at the time of Lincoln’s assassination are listed out of order. Using the park’s exhibits and listening to Park Rangers and volunteers, match each name to the correct picture and biography. Clues about each person can be found in the museum and in the theatre presentation.

Tad Lincoln

I was a regular actor at Ford’s Theatre and starred in many plays there. I was on stage as Asa Trenchard in Our American Cousin when I heard a loud pop come from the President’s box. The shooter soon rushed by me, a large knife in his hand, shouting “Sic Semper Tyrannis.”

Laura Keene

I was an important stage actress during the Civil War. I was a star and producer of Our American Cousin. I was at Ford’s Theatre performing that play on the night Lincoln was shot. The shooter hurried by me carrying a large knife as I prepared for the next scene offstage.

John Wilkes Booth

I was not at Ford’s Theatre on the night of the assassination. Instead, I went to see another play, Aladdin and the Magic Lamp, at the National Theatre. I was rushed to the White House after being told of the assassination. I died in 1871 at the age of eighteen.

Harry Hawk

I was a regular actor at Ford’s Theatre and starred in many plays there. I was on stage as Asa Trenchard in Our American Cousin when I heard a loud pop come from the President’s box. The shooter soon rushed by me, a large knife in his hand, shouting “Sic Semper Tyrannis.”

Lincoln, Booth, and Shakespeare

Theatre played a major role in the events of April 14, 1865. Not only was it the setting for the assassination, it also shaped the personalities of Booth, the assassin and Lincoln himself. An important figure in the history of theatre was English playwright and poet William Shakespeare (1564-1616). This activity will help teach you about Shakespeare by giving you examples of his plays and how these ideas influenced Lincoln and Booth. Questions will be asked throughout so you can show what you learned.

William Shakespeare: Shakespeare is one of the most widely read authors in the English language. Born and raised in England in the town of Stratford-upon-Avon, Shakespeare rose from unknown beginnings to become London’s most important dramatist and playwright by 1600. During his life, Shakespeare wrote 38 plays and countless poems. He mostly penned works of history, comedy, and tragedy, and his plays covered the range of human experience. Many still look to Shakespeare for words of guidance today.

Question 1: Other than Macbeth and Julius Caesar, what are two other Shakespeare plays that you know of? Why do you think his works are so well remembered today?

Shakespeare and Abraham Lincoln: Lincoln greatly enjoyed Shakespeare’s works and loved going to the theatre, which he saw as a relief from the difficult-to-bear duties of the Presidency. Lincoln read Shakespeare in his youth and quoted it in for guidance in his personal and political life.

In early 1864, when the Civil War looked bleak, as did Lincoln’s chances to win a second term as President, he expressed his feelings by quoting a line from Shakespeare’s play Macbeth to his cabinet:

“Out, out, brief candle!
Life’s but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage
And then is heard no more. It is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury
Signifying nothing.” (Act V, scene v)

Shakespeare and John Wilkes Booth: Shakespeare’s works also made a strong impact on John Wilkes Booth. A rising actor in the American theatre, Booth performed the plays of Shakespeare many times, and became engrossed in one of them in particular: Julius Caesar.

Julius Caesar is a historical play about Caesar’s life as military hero and Emperor of the Roman Empire, and his death at the hands of a group of assassins on March 15, 44 BCE. Booth saw Lincoln as more dangerous than Caesar. As Booth wrote during his escape, “I am here in despair. And why? For doing what Brutus (one of Caesar’s assassins) was honored for... [I struck] down a greater tyrant than they [the Romans] ever knew.”

Question 2: What are some ways that Shakespeare’s plays relate to things in your life today?

Where Did Booth Go?

It is April 24, 1865, and you are a soldier in the 16th New York Cavalry, stationed in Washington. Your captain, Edward Doherty, has tasked you with tracing the steps of and capturing Lincoln’s assassin John Wilkes Booth and his accomplice David Herold as they flee toward Confederate Virginia. Using the maps below and a pen or pencil, trace Booth’s path through Washington and Booth and Herold as they trek through Maryland into Virginia. Hint: On the Maryland-Virginia map, look at the dates listed at each dot; they will help you to figure out the correct order of Booth and Herold’s movements.

This image of Lincoln’s assassin John Wilkes Booth appeared on the front page of Harper’s Weekly on April 29, 1865, the issue in which they first broke the news of the assassination. Image courtesy Library of Congress.
What Do You See?

Ford’s Theatre National Historic Site is made up of many different buildings, exhibits, and historic artifacts, all preserved and presented for you—the visitor. Here, we invite you to play the role of artist and historian, discovering and thinking about the past for public understanding. There are two spaces below. In the first, we invite you to draw your favorite thing here at the park and explain it. In the second, there are images of two historical flags and some brief questions to help you understand their meaning.

In this white space, draw or sketch the favorite thing you saw on your trip to Ford’s Theatre.

Down here, describe this favorite thing; what makes it special to you? What did you learn about/from it?

Union (United States) Flag, 1865

Question: How many stars are there on this flag?

Bonus: The American flag now has 50 stars. Why does the 1865 flag have fewer stars than today’s?

What is a Park Ranger?

During your visit to Ford’s Theatre National Historic Site, you will meet people who are not here visiting; they work here as park rangers and volunteers. They are here to talk to you, other members of your group, and other visitors who come to the park about the amazing events that unfolded here and the history of the buildings you are visiting.

Below are questions about Petersen House (where Lincoln died), located across the street from Ford’s Theatre. To answer the questions, speak with and listen to the park rangers and volunteers as you visit Petersen House. One will greet you at the entry door to the house (see background photo) and another will welcome you as you look at the rooms inside. They can answer any questions you have.

Questions:

1. Why was Abraham Lincoln brought to Petersen House on the night of April 14, 1865?

2. How was Petersen House used before Lincoln died there?

3. Was the furniture now in the house there that night? Where is Lincoln’s death bed now?

4. What does it say on the plaque (not the sign on the railing) at the front of the house?

Bonus Questions:

5. What two people used the rooms at the front of the house while Lincoln was there?

6. What man living in Petersen House called to the soldiers carrying Lincoln to bring him there?

In this photo (background), Park Rangers and volunteers in period dress stand on the steps to Petersen House. Abraham Lincoln was carried up these same stairs the night of the assassination. Photo by NPS/Terry Adams.
What Did Lincoln’s Assassination Mean?

After Confederate General Robert E. Lee’s army surrendered to Union General Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Court House on April 9, 1865, many believed the Civil War had ended. Celebrations erupted across northern cities, and Washington D.C. put on light shows and fireworks (called “illuminations”) as part of the festivities. Reactions to the news differed. Five days later, Lincoln’s assassination at Ford’s Theatre drastically changed things. On these pages, you will be given quotes and images from people reacting to these two major events. Questions will then let you respond to each image or quote.

“During the drive [a carriage ride the Lincolns took] he was so gay, that I said to him, laughingly, ‘Dear husband, you almost startle me by your great cheerfulness,’ he replied, ‘and well I may feel so, Mary, I consider this day, the war, has come to a close’—and then added ‘We must both, be more cheerful in the future—between the war and the loss of our darling Willie [their son, who died in 1862]—we have both been very miserable.’”

--- Mary Todd Lincoln, talking about her husband’s state of mind on the afternoon of April 14, 1865

“After four years of arduous service, marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude, the Army of Northern Virginia has been compelled to yield to overwhelming numbers and resources... You each take with you the satisfaction that proceeds from [knowing] your duty [was] faithfully performed, and I pray that a merciful God will extended [sic] to you His blessing and protection.”

--- General Robert E. Lee, orders to his army after surrendering at Appomattox, April 9, 1865 [known as General Order(s) Number 9]

Questions:

1. What does Mary Todd Lincoln say about Abraham Lincoln’s reaction to Appomattox? How does this compare to the response of people in the Union? How do you feel when you read it?

2. How does Robert E. Lee’s order reflect the Confederacy’s frame of mind after Appomattox? How does Lee show the feeling of the Confederate army? How do you feel reading the order?
What Did Lincoln’s Assassination Mean?

This Thomas Nast illustration appeared in the April 29, 1865 issue of Harper’s Weekly. The woman at Lincoln’s coffin is Lady Liberty (who was also the model for the Statue of Liberty). Image courtesy Library of Congress/Civil War Newspapers Collection.

“For an enemy so relentless in the war for our subjugation, we could not be expected to mourn [the assassination of Abraham Lincoln]; yet, in view of its political consequences, it could not be regarded otherwise than as a great misfortune to the South.”

--- Jefferson Davis, writing of the violence that might come to former Confederate states and citizens in response to Lincoln’s assassination

Questions:

1. What does the Thomas Nast illustration say about the reaction of many people to Lincoln’s assassination? How does it compare to the response that followed Appomattox?

2. How does Jefferson Davis put his feelings about the Union President’s assassination? Is there anything surprising about what he writes? How else might former Confederates have reacted?
