The 234th Battle of Kettle Creek Celebration was a wonderful success. The weather was beautiful, with blue skies and warm sunshine falling on the participants and the crowd of visitors.

The Battle of Kettle Creek was fought on February 14, 1779. This three day celebration of that battle included colonial re-enactors recreating the lives of the inhabitants of colonial Washington, Georgia in 1779. Visitors were able to talk with historical figures like Nancy Hart, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and Elijah Clarke. They could see activities that demonstrated the frontier life, a colorful parade around the square, and a live skirmish in Washington Park between the Tory troops of Col. Boyd and the Patriot militia under the command of Gen. Pickens, Col. Elijah Clarke and Col. John Dooly.

In the afternoon, the activities moved to War Hill for the memorial ceremony for the patriots that fought at the Battle of Kettle Creek.
Friday, February 8th

Elijah Clarke’s Militia at Kettle Creek

Dr. Christine Swager conducted a presentation at Mary Willis Library on Elijah Clarke’s Militia at Kettle Creek. A large group of interested visitors attended and asked questions.

Saturday, February 9th

Parade & Living History
Saturday’s activities began with the award winning Georgia Society SAR Color Guard leading the parade from the Mary Willis Library and proceeding to the Washington Town Square. Participants consisted of patriots of the Continental Army, Georgia Militia, ROTC Cadets and local youth groups. Individuals portrayed George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Elijah Clarke, Nancy Hart, Continental Army soldiers, a backwoods trapper, spinner, weaver and others. Local children marched enthusiastically as part of the parade.
Can we be in the parade next year?

Battlefield Skirmish

The Elijah Clarke Militia conducted a dramatic portrayal of the Battle of Kettle Creek at Washington Park behind the Courthouse where Col. Boyd and his Tory troops suffered another dramatic defeat.

Chamber of Commerce

Jason Hardin, Regional Planner for the CSRA, held a discussion on the Kettle Creek Battlefield Master Plan with the public at the Chamber of Commerce. The discussion was very informative and many questions about the plan were answered.

Battleground Walking Tours

The steps of Patriots and Loyalists as they fought for three hours on February 14, 1779, were explained by Army historian, Walt Andrae, at Kettle Creek Battleground, 10 miles from Washington off SR 44.

Washington Little Theater Company

The Washington Little Theater Company presented thirty minute performances of “The American Revolution.” The performances by the children were a delight to the crowd of spectators.
Colonial Living History Characters
On the Washington Square and in the adjacent buildings, visitors were able to talk with living history characters as they described what life was like in 1779. Children were able to be part of a cannon firing demonstration and learned how to prepare furs for trading.

Battleground Memorial Ceremony
In the afternoon the pageantry moved to the Kettle Creek Monument at the Kettle Creek Battlefield. Continental Army, Georgia Militia, fife & drum music, musket volley and wreath laying ceremony were part of the continuing celebration.

Brief Annual Report
A Statement of Progress
Kettle Creek Battlefield Association, Inc.

Joseph B. Harris, PhD, Chair of the Board of Directors
February 9, 2013, Pope Center, Washington, Georgia

The Congressional Record, Vol. 138 No. 24 (February 14, 2012) includes A Resolution Commemorating the 233rd Anniversary of the Battle of Kettle Creek. This followed conversations with Jordan Chinouth, of US Rep. Paul Broun’s office in Athens. Chinouth presented a copy of the resolution at a board meeting.

On the battlefield site, clearing of a rough walking trail around the south side of War Hill has provided new access to the site. Underbrush had been cleared from most of the hill by Wilkes County and offers a new experience for visitors.

A grant from the Georgia Department of Community Affairs, originally valued at $50,000, for a Kettle Creek master plan was announced on May 29. This followed letters of appeal to state Senator Jackson and Representatives Channell and McCall, DCA Commissioner Michael Beatty and Governor Nathan Deal.

The Chair of the Board, Joseph Harris, was invited to the second annual Grillin’ with the Governor barbecue in Gainesville in July. He attended with GASSAR President Ed Rigel, MD.

The Battlefield Dispatch, the newsletter of the Kettle Creek Battlefield Association, was released by Walker Chewning, Editor, in September. The name of the publication had been suggested by George Thurmond, association president. A monthly release of the Dispatch was proposed.

The receipt of a $5,000 grant from Plum Creek Foundation was locally announced in November. This would cover cost of duplicating existing brochures and producing a two-panel rack card for wide distribution through state welcome centers. The grant proposal had been submitted by Larry Wilson, KCBA Funding Committee chair.

Grants are being sought from several sources. in November, a proposal for funding a recreational, half-mile walking trail around the base of War Hill was submitted by Wilkes County to the Georgia Department of Natural Resources, Parks, Recreation and Historic Sites Division. It was prepared by Anne Floyd, CSRA Regional Commission, Joseph Harris, and landscape architect Kurt Wolfe. $130,000 is being sought. Park use by public schools and other organizations are committed to trail use. A proposal to the American Battlefield Protection Plan was submitted in January. It would cover costs of a community consensus building event, estimated at $30,000, and was submitted by Larry Wilson. Wilson is also preparing a proposal to the Watson-Brown Foundation for signage. It would cover less than $10,000 in costs.

Major responsibilities for organizing the many events of Revolutionary Days in Washington have been assumed by Tom Owen, KCBA treasurer, and Walker Chewning, association president. For a number of years this event had been organized by GASSAR membership with Bob Galer of Columbus taking much of the initiative.

A resolution which recognizes the importance of the Battle of Kettle Creek and KCBA development efforts by the Georgia legislature is being pursued by Board member William deGolian, working primarily with Rep. Tom McCall.

An original pen and ink drawing of wounded Loyalist (Tory) Col. Boyd and Col. Pickens on War Hill was obtained through board member David Chesnutt. It was presented by the grandson of artist Wilbur G. Kurtz at a Washington Rotary Club luncheon. on February 7, 2013, to Joseph Harris, KCBA Chair, by Wilbur G. Kurtz III. It is on permanent loan in the Washington Historical Museum until a visitor center is established at the Kettle Creek Battlefield.

Projects which are in the early stages of development include map production of the location of Patriot graves, a public school student contest for a KCBA motto and the production of murals on the Battle of Kettle Creek for location in the new Wilkes County Comprehensive High School Building; finally, an organization of descendents of Kettle Creek Patriots.

Current KCBA membership includes 54 organizations and 138 individuals. As of December 31 our net income is slightly over $17,000.
