Making the Most of Your Time

To get the most out of your visit to Mesa Verde, stop first at the Far View Visitor Center (open spring through fall only, 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.) or the Chapin Mesa Museum (open all year). From the park entrance on U.S. Hwy 160, the Far View Visitor Center is located 15 miles (25 km) into the park. Chapin Mesa Archeological Museum, Park Headquarters, and Spruce Tree House are 21 miles (34 km) from the park entrance. The route into the park is a steep, narrow, winding mountain road. Depending on weather, traffic, and road construction, plan at least two hours just to drive into and out of the park. The drive is scenic with pull-offs and overlooks that provide spectacular views into four states. The elevations in the park range from 6,900 feet to 8,572 feet. Watch for rocks that may have fallen onto the road.

Use the following tips to plan a late spring, summer, or early fall visit. Although the Chapin Mesa Archeological Museum and Spruce Tree House are open all year, many areas including Wetherill Mesa, Far View Visitor Center, and overnight accommodations are closed during the winter months. Be sure to check the park’s Visitor Guide or www.nps.gov/meve/ for details on services available during your visit.

The First Cultural National Park

Mesa Verde National Park is the premier archeological park in the United States and a World Heritage Site. The cultural and natural resources in the Mesa Verde region are significant both nationally and internationally.

Mesa Verde, Spanish for “green table,” rises high above the surrounding countryside. Mesa Verde National Park was established in 1906 to preserve sites built by Ancestral Puebloans, an ancient Native American culture that lived on the mesa tops and in the canyon alcoves. Today, 24 Native American nations regard Mesa Verde as the home of their ancestors.

Mesa Verde was the first national park set aside “to preserve the works of man.” The park is 52,073 acres, 8,100 of which has been designated as wilderness. The continued preservation of these sites will allow future generations a glimpse into an ancient past and into the lives of a people that inhabited the mesa for eight centuries.

Ancestral Puebloans occupied the Colorado Plateau region for 1,300 years and moved into Mesa Verde by 550 A.D. From the many sites located here and in the surrounding Four Corners area, archeologists have compiled one of the most significant chapters in the story of prehistoric America.

There are over 4,800 known archeological sites in the park dating from approximately 550 A.D. to 1300 A.D. About 600 of these sites are cliff dwellings built from the late 1100s to 1300 A.D. Unoccupied for many centuries, the sites have been weakened by natural forces. Some were badly damaged by looters before the area became a national park. Preserving these dwellings for future generations is the park’s mission. To this end, visitors can enter cliff dwellings ONLY when accompanied by a uniformed park ranger. Depending on the season, at least one and up to five cliff dwellings are open for visitation. Many others can be seen from overlooks.

Although the cliff dwellings are certainly the most spectacular sites, the mesa top pithouses and pueblos are equally important. There are over 20 mesa top sites and overlooks which can be visited on your own. Seen in chronological order from pithouses to cliff dwellings, the sites reveal the architectural and cultural development of the Ancestral Puebloans of Mesa Verde.
Charcoal and firewood are available at the camp store. (Coin-operated laundry, gasoline, and an RV dumping station. Single convenient access to restrooms, hot showers, food and supplies, entrance, is open May through mid-October. Sites are available to the provisions of the pass until expired, lost or stolen.)

Passports. All existing passes will continue to be honored according to the date of sale. The Interagency Senior Pass is a lifetime pass for U.S. citizens or permanent residents with permanent disabilities. They provide access to, and use of federal recreation sites that charge an entrance or standard amenity fee. The Interagency Passport is available only at the park entrance. U.S. citizens or permanent residents age 62 or over, and has a one-time fee of $10.00. The Interagency Access Pass is a free, lifetime pass for U.S. citizens or permanent residents with permanent disabilities. Passports are available only at the park entrance. (Note: The new interagency pass program replaces the National Parks, Golden Eagle, Golden Eagle Hologram, Golden Age, and Golden Access Passports. All existing passes will continue to be honored according to the provisions of the pass until expired, lost or stolen.)

For commercial vehicle fees, call the park at (970) 529-4465 or visit the website at www.nps.gov/meve/.

Backpack and Hiking

There is no overnight backpacking or cross-country hiking in the park. Hiking is allowed only in developed areas and on designated trails described in the Visitor Guide and at www.nps.gov/meve/. Hikers must register at the trailhead for the Petroglyph Point and Spruce Canyon trails. All trails are closed by snow in the winter, but some opportunities exist for snowshoeing or cross-country skiing.

Pets

Pets are not allowed on trails, in archeological sites, or in buildings (service dogs, excepted). Pets can be walked along paved roads, in parking lots, and at the campground. Pets must be leashed at all times when outside a vehicle. Leaving pets unattended or tied to any object within the park is prohibited. There are no kennels in the park, but boarding facilities are available in the local communities. Do not leave your pet inside a closed and locked vehicle, the heat build-up can kill them.

Weather

Mesa Verde National Park generally has mild weather during the summer months and during some winters. Snow storms can occur as late as May and as early as October, but usually both of these months are pleasant. Summer days (June through September) are generally warm to hot, with cool evenings. Afternoon thundershowers are common during July and August.

Accessibility

Mesa Verde National Park has accessibility limitations for people with vision, hearing, or mobility impairments. Visitors encounter rugged terrain at an elevation of 7,000 to 8,500 feet. Steep cliffs, deep canyons, and narrow trails can be a danger to all visitors. Persons with heart or respiratory ailments can have breathing problems at this altitude. Wheelchairs with wide rim wheels are recommended on trails.
