Every once in a while a piece of scholarship comes along that changes the way you look at a historical event. The prevailing wisdom about the Battle of Bunker Hill is that only a handful of African American soldiers were there. After almost three years of research George Quintal reports that there very likely were 103 "patriots of color" at Bunker Hill (and may have been as many as 150). If there were as many as 3000 American soldiers at that Battle, this would mean that men of color might have been five percent of the total, which makes the percentage almost as high as at the Battle of Monmouth, New Jersey, when an estimated 800 men of color were seven per cent of a likely army of 12,000 soldiers.

How come we did not know about these soldiers? In truth the clues were hidden in plain sight. John Trumbull's 1786 painting of the Battle portraying the deaths of General Joseph Warren and several British officers shows one black man standing behind an American officer holding his master's gun and still another among the many faces in the battle. It is perhaps the most famous painting of a Revolutionary war scene. Alonzo Chappel's mid-nineteenth century rendering of a similar scene puts a young black man in the center of the action wielding a gun on his own, by implication not a slave. Both paintings were widely reproduced.

Even after the rediscovery of black history in the wake of the civil rights movements of the twentieth century, the assumption was blacks were present only in small numbers. In 1961, Benjamin Quarles, then the dean of black historians, in The Negro in the American Revolution, could enumerate only six men (and for Battle Road he could list nine). In popular memory, it seems to have been taken for granted that there was Peter Salem (wrongly identified as the Negro in Trumbull's painting) and there was Salem Poor (singled out by fourteen officers in a petition as a "brave and gallant soldier"). On this same wave of tokenism, the poet Phillis Wheatley and the sailor Crispus Attucks, killed at the Boston Massacre, entered textbooks as representatives of black patriotism in Boston. In 1964, Ebony, the black popular magazine, named sixteen blacks at the Battle (half misidentified). When George Quintal accepted a contract from the National Park Service to research blacks at the Battle, he had documented two dozen and took a guess that further research might uncover another dozen.

Quintal is not an historian of black history. A native of rural Maine, he began his foray into common soldiers almost three decades ago in pursuit of twelve of his own ancestors who were in the Revolutionary War. He is a self-taught genealogist and military researcher, skilled as a computer specialist. Beginning with an interest in the expedition to Canada led by Benedict Arnold, he moved into the Battles of Bunker Hill and Saratoga. Then he began to read systematically the 2670 microfilm reels of pension applications filed by veterans in 1820 and 1832, a huge treasure trove of evidence about the ordinary soldiers, largely unmined by historians.

The scope of his research on the patriots of color at Bunker Hill and Battle Road is staggering. Some years ago the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington compiled lists of soldiers of color for each New England state based on the army's descriptive muster rolls—the one for Massachusetts listed 750. Not content with this, Quintal began with the United States Census for 1790 which designated every family of color. Armed with these names, he turned every page in the seventeen volumes of Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolutionary War and the comparable compilations for other New England states. With a data base enhanced by family and town histories, he hunted for evidence from primary sources for every "name" he had, and not for their military service alone but for their life histories. His results actually are on the conservative side; the large number of men in his "probable" category in fact are listed as members of military units known to be at Bunker Hill and therefore very likely there. He has still other names on a "maybe" list that may be verified by the sources. This is, we might say, "a work in progress."

The author's citation of Harriet Beecher Stowe in his subtitle seems particularly apt. In light of the fact that the nation did not "acknowledge them as citizens and equals," the novelist wrote, the bravery of the "colored patriots" indeed had "a peculiar beauty and merit." Abigail Adams said the same thing in 1782 about the "patriotism in the female sex;" because women were "excluded from honors and from offices," it was "the most disinterested of all."

Who were these men? They were almost all from Massachusetts. It may be hard to grasp two centuries later, but on the eve of the Revolution Massachusetts was a colony with about 5000 slaves. In Boston in 1765 there were about 800 Negroes in a population of 15,500. Some of the best patriot families—Bowdoin, Hancock, Otis, Rowe, Warren—held slaves at one time or another. Patriot leaders, moreover, did not welcome blacks who sometimes joined mob actions. And the patriots who dominated the Massachusetts legislature turned down petitions from slaves demanding abolition in 1773, 1774 and as late as 1777.

It is hard to pin down the precise status of each individual black soldier in April and June, 1775. Some were slaves (like Asaba, the black man in Trumbull's painting, a servant to Lieutenant Thomas Grosvenor of Connecticut); some had been freed in earlier years; many more were promised freedom in return for their military service; a large number were taking their own freedom. The soldiers at the Battle Road were all members of the militia from their home towns who turned out in response to the alarm, some of them "minute men." The soldiers at Bunker Hill were men who enlisted for a term of eight months in what was becoming the Continental Army.

Contrary to the comforting mythology, there was nothing automatic about the abolition of slavery in the "cradle of liberty." The Continental Army opened its doors only part way to blacks. The new state legislature did not abolish slavery; nor did the new state constitutions in 1778 and 1781. It was abolished, "by a legal process so obscure that historians continue to puzzle over slavery's demise," writes Ira Berlin in 2003 in Generations of Captivity: A History of African-American Slaves. There had to be lawsuits. But here the new knowledge Quintal has uncovered comes into play: undoubtedly the military service of so many blacks helped change the climate of opinion. After successful law suits of the early 1780s, slavery disappeared, and the census of 1790 counted 5463 "free persons of color" in the state and no slaves.

For the statistical-minded, the charts sum up the data about these soldiers. I took Quintal's recommendations under "Highlights" as to which stories were "especially interesting" and was not disappointed by his life stories about who was "probably the strongest man," who "had the longest service (8 years)" and who "probably served in the most battles (7)." As much as the life histories, I suspect many readers will also be as fascinated as I was by the fact that it was possible to reconstruct so much information about people who through their lives remained at the bottom of society.

We owe this report to the perseverance and skills of the compiler and the vision of Martin Blatt, Historian, Boston National Historical Park. The author's numerous acknowledgements suggest that a company of keepers of the past joined enthusiastically in his explorations. Reading between the lines, one can see our compiler and friends walking through overgrown cemeteries in search of gravestones, dusting off old town records, and sharing copies of worn documents. You can't do this kind of research without help. How fitting that Quintal should dedicate the book to David Lloyd Garrison (1906-2001), great-grandson of William Lloyd Garrison, Boston's most famous abolitionist, who literally gave him a roof over his head for two years of research. This clearly is a project whose time has come.

This report is dedicated to the thousands of Patriots of Color who served with honor in the War of the American Revolution. Of the just over one hundred soldiers in this study, at least sixteen lost their lives in the long struggle for freedom. All Americans, of all backgrounds, owe them our deep, enduring gratitude.

'In considering the services of the Colored Patriots of the American Revolution, we are to reflect on them as far more magnanimous, because rendered to a nation which did not acknowledge them as citizens and equals, and in whose interests and prosperity they had less at stake ...

Bravery, under such circumstances, has a peculiar beauty and merit.

Harriet Beecher Stowe, quoted in The Colored Patriots of the American Revolution by William C. Nell (1855)

This report is also dedicated to the memory of David Lloyd Garrison (1906-2001), great-grandson of abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison. David opened his home to me during the two years of research on this project. Without David’s gracious generosity, and that of his son Chris and daughter Edith, the Patriots of Color Project could not have been completed.
Any project like this is the result of hundreds of contacts and communications. I had the great privilege to work closely with some of the finest people, with the finest minds, that I have ever met. The many hours that we talked ‘shop’ were a great joy and helped me often to reflect and refine, with the ultimate goal of telling ‘untold’ stories while getting the facts of history right. It helped, too, to have dear family and friends who were always there when times were tough. The following people contributed greatly to the project by providing support, comments, additions, corrections, suggestions and encouragement:

Dr. Martin H. Blatt, Ph.D., Chief of Cultural Resources and Supervisory Historian for the U.S. Dept. of the Interior, National Park Service, Charlestown Navy Yard, Boston, Massachusetts, conceived and nurtured this project, from beginning to end, with tremendous vision and strong purpose. He placed faith in my research when very few others would. To him goes my warmest and deepest thanks.

Dr. Alfred Young, Historian and Author and friend, sent me copies of all of his files on soldiers of color and reviewed my work in several stages, offering the wise suggestions of an experienced writer. At a time when he was finishing his own book on Deborah Sampson, he still made time to edit this report. His inspiration and unwavering support throughout the entire project will always be remembered and cherished.

David Lloyd Garrison, who passed away in 2001, and his children Chris Garrison and Edith (Garrison) Griffin provided a home-away-from-home during the project. Without the security of a roof over my head and a warm place to live and work, I would have had to give up long ago.

Bob & Margaret Cunningham of Lincoln (MA), dear friends and long-time supporters, let me use their garage for storage of research materials and provided help in many other ways. Without their kind assistance, I would have most certainly been unable to maintain a Boston research presence.

Wayne Krauth, friend and cofounder of Workgroup Technology Partners Inc. of Westbrook (ME), provided technical support. Without a computer system donated by him, it would have been nearly impossible to assemble this database and create this report.

Bert Kessel of Lincoln (MA), WWII Marine and angel of kindness, helped me find a place to stay at the Garrisons’ at a time when I had no housing.

Catherine Cantrell, friend, nursed me through several extended sicknesses during the project.

Jonathan Donaldson, Lincoln (MA), extended my stay at the Garrisons’ after he purchased the property.

Bob Donovan, friend, allowed me the use of his home in Embden (ME) for ten days in order to complete work on the final report.

Mrs. Emma N. Kaplan of Northampton (MA), authority on African Americans in the Revolutionary War, graciously invited me to her home and opened all of her research files to me including her soon-to-be published manuscript entitled “African American Soldiers and Sailors in the Revolutionary War”. At a very late stage in the project, she provided the new names of Scipio Gray, Nathaniel Small, Prince Sutton and Tobias Wornton. Additional information was provided on John Ferrit, Cato Freeman, Cato Hart, Jeffrey Hemenway, James Huzzey and Titus Tuttle.

Mrs. Hazel Fuller Kreinheider, Genealogist at the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington (DC), and driving force behind the groundbreaking series called Minority Military Service, met with me to discuss this project and allowed the use of information from her publications.

Priscilla Draeger, friend, Genealogist, Historian of the Winchendon (MA) Historical Society and Historian of the Winchendon Historical District spent many long hours examining Massachusetts vital records for people of color and donated all of her careful research on Eden London;

Jean Gavin, who passed away in 2001, and who was Volunteer Archivist at the Lexington (MA) Historical Society, opened the archives many times personally for me and spent many hours of her own time in searching for Lexington families of color.
Bruce Harris, Park Ranger at Minute Man National Historical Park and Peter Salem reenactor, provided much insight through his own research into the life of Peter Salem and accompanied me on a trip to find the actual locations of Peter Salem’s cabin sites in Framingham and Leicester.

Alice Hinkle, Author and Freelance Journalist, first made me aware of the Burdoo family and provided inspiration through her own work in writing a book on the life of Prince Estabrook.

Jane Carolan, Consultant in Newburyport (MA), gave encouragement and consulting guidance in the earliest stages of the project.

Faith Davison, Archivist at the Mohegan Archives in Uncasville (CT), sent copies of all the material she has collected on Mohegans in the Revolutionary War and called many times after with follow-up information.

Carl Zellner, Historian, Charlestown (MA) Historical Society, gave me a personal guided tour of the Bunker Hill Museum, pointed out modern features overlaying the old battlefield and provided a considerable amount of copies of source material he has collected.

Helen Treat, my junior high school history teacher now long since passed away, inspired my great love of Revolutionary War history.

The staffs of many fine organizations lent their time and expertise: the New England Historic and Genealogical Society, the Belmont (MA) Family History Library of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the Maine State Library, the Maine State Archives, the New Hampshire Historical Society, the Vermont Historical Society and the Massachusetts Historical Society.

And finally, I want to thank my parents George and Frances Quintal of West Gardiner, Maine. At a very early age, my Mom instilled in me an abiding love of reading. As that reading matured it often took on the form of a history book, my Dad (a World War II vet and Purple Heart recipient) having instilled in me a deep love of history. My children have often wondered what Dad is spending so many long hours working on. They, too, contributed in critical ways to the completion of this report. My son, Si Quintal, lent me his own car for two months near the end of the project after my own finally disintegrated. My daughter, Sarah Quintal, took photographs of the grave of Cuff Chambers, developed them herself and also helped with image scanning. And my youngest, Susie Quintal, helped with research and with assembling the final report notebook.

Thank you all.

In his request for funding to the National Park Service, Dr. Marty Blatt described the proposed project as follows:

This project will provide funding to conduct research on the role of black combatants in the Battle of Bunker Hill and the conflict at Lexington and Concord. The project will provide basic information on an important untold story, the significant part played by blacks with the patriots in the Revolutionary War. The project results will contribute directly to new interpretive exhibits at both park units and will be available for researchers. The project will enhance the interpretation of African Americans at both parks and thus encourage greater minority visitation to these sites.¹

As a result of later discussions, the services of Native American participants were included. The project was approved for FY2001-2 as a 1000-hour study and work officially started in October of 1999. The 1000-hour mark was passed by Christmas 2000. All work in 2001 and 2002 has been a volunteer effort, now comprising approximately 2500 additional hours, for a final project total of 3500 hours.

The key phrase in Dr. Blatt’s proposal is ‘untold story’. While the stories of handfuls of soldiers of color (such as Peter Salem and Salem Poor) have been told, this project has restored those stories, added to them significantly and presented the new stories of many dozens of other men of color who served at Battle Road and Bunker Hill. Much has been learned during this project about the individual lives of these men such as what age they were, where they served, how they lived, who they married, where they resided and where they died.

Old stories were deconstructed and carefully rebuilt after the discarding of unreliable sources. For proof of service and for vital records, primary sources have been sought in each and every instance. When primary sources were not available, reliable secondary sources were accepted. When neither of these were available, inclusion of a name in this report has been accepted on the sole basis of participation in a company known to be at one or the other of the battles.

The men of color who fought at Battle Road were both militia men and members of the elite minute man companies. Some served as slaves. Others had long since been freed by their masters. Masters, slaves, free blacks and at least one Indian fought side-by-side in the running battle against the British on the memorable 19th of April 1775.

The men of color who fought at Bunker Hill were called eight-months’ men due to their term of service. Most had responded to the Lexington Alarm and had gathered at Cambridge to join the Siege of Boston. Significant numbers of the soldiers of color in this great mass of Patriots had the newly-minted status of ‘free man’. An irrepressible spirit of liberty was in the air. What a time to have been alive!

The well-known, stirring tales of Battle Road and Bunker Hill will not be repeated. The reader is assumed to be familiar with both events. But a new perspective will hopefully be gained due to the emergence from the long-lost past of the men of color portrayed herein.

This report is definitely not the final word on the matter. More names will be found and more will be found about the Patriots already discovered. As feedback trickles in, corrections and additions will be made. Much work still needs to be done in the areas of church, deed, court and probate research. But a foundation, hopefully strong and solid, has been laid. For men who possessed such dignity of purpose, a roll of honor has now been established. The memory of these men deserves no less.

PATRIOTS of COLOR

Methodology

A soldier was deemed to be a Patriot if he either claimed to have served, or is believed to have served, in opposition to the British forces at either Battle Road or Bunker Hill.

A soldier would be included in the Battle Road database if he, or his unit, actively engaged the British on 19 April 1775 anywhere along Battle Road, from Cambridge to Concord to Charlestown. Listing of the soldier’s name in Coburn’s Muster Rolls [COBU] is considered sufficient secondary proof.

A soldier would be included in the Bunker Hill database if he, or his unit, actively engaged the British on the Charlestown peninsula on 17 June 1775 by descending Bunker Hill toward the Breed’s Hill battleground area. No list comparable to Coburn’s exists for Bunker Hill although Frothingham’s list of units that served, in his History of the Siege of Boston [SOBO], is credible. A list of units that served at Breed’s Hill has been assembled by this compiler over nearly three decades of extensive research in the pension records and military rolls.

A soldier was deemed to be a soldier of color if he had any part African or Indian heritage. Determining factors indicating such a heritage were: names, descriptions and status indicators.

It has been determined by work of this compiler, over these many years, that the following given names are typically those of men of color circa 1775 (*=found to be exclusive to soldiers of color):

Mention of words of description such as ‘Negro’, ‘black’, ‘colored’, ‘of color’, ‘Indian’, etc. were also indicators of color, as were the descriptors of status, ‘slave’ and ‘servant’. Great care was taken to try to distinguish ‘servants’ who were actually African slaves from indentured ‘servants’ who were nearly always not persons of color. When doubt occurred on status (or any other single descriptor), an effort was made to find an indicator of color by other means.

The course of the project was the progression of work from goal to goal (not always consecutive but usually in parallel):

(1) Examine existing sources for names of soldiers of color (be skeptical)

As was stated above, lists by Coburn [COBU] and Frothingham [SOBO] are deemed to be credible. COBU was scanned soldier-by-soldier for potential names of soldiers of color. Nearly every (if not every) company roll of units listed in SOBO was scanned (or had already been scanned) by this compiler for names that might be names of men of color.

Known lists by Nell [NELL], Quarles [QUAR], Moebs [MOEB], Kaplan [KAPL] and in Ebony magazine [EBON] were also extracted. Caution had to be exercised since the claimed services in some of these sources were found not to be credible.

(2) Discover new sources for names of soldiers of color (pensions, etc.)

Every name in Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors of the American Revolution [MASS], as well as names in the counterpart publications for New Hampshire [NHSS] (1775 only) and Connecticut [CTSS] (1775 only), were scanned for potential names of soldiers of color.

Every name of men of color who were heads of household in the 1790 U.S. censuses of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut (Tolland, Middlesex, Windham and New London counties only) and Massachusetts were back-checked in the SS series above for 1775 service. Color is indicated by enumeration in categories 4 or 5:

1 - free white males of 16 and greater
2 - free white males less than 16
3 - free white females
4 - all other free persons
5 - slaves

Every name in the DAR's Minority Military series [DARM] was also scanned and checked for 1775 service in the SS series above.

The vital records of nearly (if not every) Massachusetts town east of Berkshire county were checked for names of persons of color and then back-checked for 1775 service in [MASS]. All 'negro' marriages in Boston from 1770 to 1790 were most carefully screened. The vital records of the Christian Indian 'Praying Towns' of Natick, Grafton, Dudley, Canton, Lowell/Dracut, Littleton, Marlborough, Hopkinton and Ashland were screened and distilled multiple times.

All names in the Hoyt collection at Saratoga NHP were checked for 1775 service.

Names provided by Alice Hinkle [HINK] were checked.

Mrs. Emma Kaplan let me scan her entire database for names. Selected names (attributed to her in the Acknowledgments) have been included.

Tens of thousands of pensions previously read by this compiler were rechecked for indicators of color and 1775 service.

(3) Upgrade proof of service to primary proof whenever possible.

An intensive effort was made in this study, by continuing research, to upgrade every probable source (?) to a secondary source (+) and every secondary source to a primary source (*).
(4) Assemble a roster of these names (database).
After names were accepted on the basis of either a probable (?), secondary (+) or primary (*) source, they were entered in one or both of the two master databases (one for Battle Road and one for Bunker Hill).

(5) Trace the lives of the soldiers in the database (follow paper trail).
Having names is fine but knowing, in depth, more about the soldiers' lives was the goal. To this effect, a paper trail was established for each soldier weaving material together, from sometimes dozens of sources per person, to create biographical sketches of every soldier. All discovered data was entered into appropriate fields in the database.

(6) Provide interpretive support.
Contact has been maintained for three years with staff at both NHP sites. Every known question sent my way by rangers and other staff has been fielded to the best of my ability and answered, in hopefully a timely and accurate manner, either by phone or by mail.

(7) Produce a well-documented report.
Every effort has been made to produce a clear, concise and readable report. Any errors are totally my responsibility and will be corrected as soon as humanly possible. It is by constructive feedback that this report can and will be refined.

Several dozen names could not be included in this report due to slightly insufficient evidence. Further work will be done voluntarily on these names for the rest of my life. Any new names sufficiently proven will be brought to the attention of the two NHP sites.

Some names from secondary sources have been disproven. It can be assumed that any name from any secondary work cited in this report that has not been included has been disproven.

This work will never be complete. Common names of Christian origin (such as James, John, Thomas, Peter) have been assuredly missed. Names of slaves accompanying their masters to battle may be irretrievably lost. And, a name or names in this report may in time be disproven.

As the project continues past this final report it is hoped that any reader who knows of any incorrectly-included name, or who discovers a new name that should be included, will share it with the compiler.
BATTLE ROAD

A total of 21 names were discovered, of which 13 were proven by primary sources and 3 by secondary sources. These men served in 12 different companies and resided in 11 different towns.

BUNKER HILL

A total of 103 names were discovered, of which 12 were proven by primary sources and 22 by secondary sources. These men served in 47 different companies and resided in 52 different towns.

In the entire study, there were 119 total soldiers. Five soldiers served in both battles.
Conclusions

(1) 1775 Patriots of Color served in integrated units:

This study confirms what the Revolutionary soldiers knew first-hand: the great mass of the 1775 army, excluding officers, was completely integrated. The one hundred-plus men of color in this study belonged to half that many different companies (for an average of two per company). This level of integration did not occur in the Civil War, or for that matter World War II, but only reached similar levels in the Vietnam Conflict nearly two hundred years later.

(2) Pay, equipment, bounties and duties were equal for men of equal rank:

The vast majority of men of color in this study were Privates. Regardless of color, all Privates received the same benefits and duties. Not a single instance has been found otherwise. Even nearly one hundred years later, in the afterglow of the Emancipation Proclamation, soldiers of the 54th Massachusetts Regiment were paid less than their white counterparts.

(3) There existed a glass ceiling for rank:

The highest ranking soldier in this study was a Corporal. While Native Americans reached the rank of Captain in local ranger units, no known African American soldier reached officer levels in any unit of the army.

(4) Bunker Hill had the second highest % of Patriots of Color of any known engagement in the War:

(5) The slaves, servants and free blacks of New England were staunch Patriots:

The overwhelming majority of African Americans in New England stood side-by-side with masters, former masters and fellow townsmen in supporting the Patriot cause.

(6) The native peoples of New England were staunch Patriots:

From the ‘Praying Towns’ of Natick and Grafton, to the villages of the Mohegans and Pequots on the banks of the Thames River in Connecticut, to the coastal settlements of the Mashpees on Cape Cod Bay, the Indians from New England were unswerving in their loyalty to the Patriot cause.

(7) Exceptional performance at Battle Road and Bunker Hill opened the door for soldiers of color:

On 26 September 1775 Edward Rutledge, a delegate from South Carolina, moved in the [Continental] Congress that Washington should discharge all blacks, whether slave or free, from the army. Rutledge was “strongly supported” by many of the Southern delegates, but most members, aware that Negroes had already played a brave part in the battles in Massachusetts, opposed the notion and it was defeated. Thus those blacks already in the army were allowed to finish out their terms of enlistment.\(^5\)

\[\text{In October [a] conference at the camp ... thought it proper to exclude [blacks] from the new [1776] enlistment; but Washington, at the crisis of his distress, finding that they [the black soldiers] were very much dissatisfied at being discarded, reversed the decision and asked the approval of [the Continental C]ongress. That body [had] appointed ... Samuel Adams [and others] to deliberate on the question; and, on the report of their able committee, they voted, “that the free negroes, who had faithfully served in the army at Cambridge, might be re-enlisted therein, but no others.” The right of free negroes to take part in the defence of the country having thus been partially admitted by the highest power, the limitation was lost sight of, and they served in the ranks of the American armies during every period of the war.}\(^6\)

(8) The people of color in this study, for the greatest part, lived in poverty:
Most of the men were either dirt farmers or laborers; there were only a handful of skilled artisans. A few could sign their own names, but most couldn’t, and illiteracy seemed to prevail. Many became town paupers but seem to have been adequately cared for through the welfare safety net of the time.

(9) New England, just after the events on Battle Road, may have enjoyed its zenith of racial harmony:
While undocumented, an awakened conscience in 1775 New England produced a seemingly massive release of slaves from bondage. With the spirit of liberty in the air and with a feared enemy on their doorstep, people of all colors and backgrounds set aside past grievances, joining with common purpose and uncommon unity.

By 1785 nearly 150 years of slavery was, de facto, abolished in Massachusetts and northern New England. By 1790 Massachusetts enumerated no slaves at all.\(^7\)

(10) The Revolution had special meaning to and effect upon people of color:
To African Americans, the Revolution was a cleansing agent which worked to wash away the institution of slavery in most of New England. To Native Americans, already beleaguered on many fronts, the Revolution resulted in losses that meant the near extinction of a people:

The Revolutionary War had a profound impact on both the Black and Indian populations of [New England]. It saw the beginnings of the end of slavery for Blacks, while the relatively small Indian population, which suffered a high percentage of casualties, was seriously diminished.\(^8\)

Data from USCE, Massachusetts, 8.
The population of African Americans in the colonies in 1775 can only be estimated:

On the eve of the war, among the population of two million six hundred thousand were five hundred thousand Negroes, both free and slave. With almost one of every six Americans being Black, they were of interest to both sides in the conflict. Their support could have meant the difference between victory and defeat.\(^1\)

Slavery was relatively widespread in Rhode Island, eastern Massachusetts and most of Connecticut; less evident in mid-Massachusetts and southeastern New Hampshire; and, nearly non-existent in western Massachusetts, northwestern Connecticut, northern and western New Hampshire, all of Maine and all of Vermont. The old, respected town histories of New England present a fairly uniform view of the treatment of slaves in the region:

... they were considered as servants rather than slaves, were kindly treated, cared for in old age and given a decent burial. They were loyal to those who owned them and patriotic when their country was in need of defendants.\(^2\)

In Massachusetts ... the marriages of slaves were protected by the Legislature and the Courts. Slaves might hold property; they were admitted as witnesses even on capital trials of white persons and on suits of other slaves for freedom; they might sue their masters for wounding or immoderately beating them, and indeed hardly differed from apprentices or other servants except in being bound for life. Before the Declaration of Independence they were usually taxed as \textit{property}, always afterwards as \textit{persons}.\(^3\)

The extreme caution taken by towns in general ... to prevent the settlement of paupers, obliged a person who desired to free his slaves, to give bonds that the freed persons should not become public charges. This requirement, no doubt, deterred some from giving freedom to their slaves, who were fully conscious of the injustice.\(^4\) ... The records show that several [ex-slaves] became dependent upon public charity. They were treated with as much consideration by those in charge of the poor as were their white companions in misfortune.\(^5\)

Most householders of the town were of too humble means to hire labor, much less purchase laborers. In fact their own children were often apprenticed, or put out to service for a term of years to those who possessed large means or who would teach them some handicraft. But with the increase of wealth and luxury in New England the Boston ship-owners engaged in the Southern slave trade began to find the home market for their commodity increasing; and soon not only the wealthy city families bought their domestic servants, but in the little country towns the squire, two or three of the most prosperous farmers, and often the minister, owned a "likely" colored boy or girl, usually bought when quite young ... The condition of those here held in involuntary bondage was in many respects quite unlike that of the slaves in more southern latitudes, and in fact differed little from that of the bound apprentices.\(^6\)

Despite gains in many areas, some disturbing practices persisted:

In 1766 it was voted that "All the English women in the Parish who marry or associate with Negro or Melatto-men be seated in the Meeting-House with the Negro-women."

A spirit of emancipation spread throughout New England after the events on Battle Road:

Typical of the prevailing sentiment during the Revolution were the words of Colonel Timothy Bigelow of Worcester, commander of the Massachusetts Fifteenth of the Continental Line, that "while fighting for liberty, I would never be guilty of selling slaves."\(^8\)

Enlisting a Negro slave, [and] receiving a state bounty for said Negro ..."9

Baroness Riedesel, wife of the General who was captured on the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne, sent a letter with these interesting (and controversial) observations:

Negroes are to be found on most of the farms west of Springfield. The black farmer lives in a little outhouse. The negroes here are very prolific, like the rest of the cattle. The young ones are well fed, especially while they are still calves. Moreover, the slavery is very bearable. The negro is to be looked upon as the servant of a peasant; the negress does all the coarse housework and the black children wait on the white children. The negro can take the field in place of his master, and so you do not see a regiment in which there is not a large number of blacks, and there are well-grown strong and sturdy fellows among them. There are also many families of free blacks who occupy good houses and have means and live entirely in the style of other inhabitants ..."10

The following letter [by Col. William Shepard of Westfield (MA)], burning with righteous indignation against injustice and inhumanity, shows how the gentle soul of a well poised man can flame forth on occasion. The matter treated is somewhat obscure. What seems probable is that the aged man addressed had sent his faithful slave into the army to earn money to purchase his freedom, and Shepard had secured his discharge.

A more appropriate tribute to the African American soldiers in the American Revolution could not be made than the words on the plaque commemorated to their counterparts who fought nearly one hundred years later in the Civil War:

Many men in this study resided in one of the Indian ‘Praying Towns’ established in the last part of the 17th century, by the Rev. John Eliot called ‘Apostle to the Indians’, and described in 1674:

Besides Natick, the most important of all, were six communities in Massachusetts, exclusive of Plymouth, which had long been denominated "praying towns;" namely, Pakemitt, or Punkapaog (now Stoughton); Hassanamesitt, or Hassananamisco (Grafton); Okommakamesit (Marlborough); Wamesit, or Pawtuckett (Tewksbury); Nashobah (Littleton); Magunkaquog (Hopkinton). There were also seven "new praying towns," where the Gospel had been favorably received about three years: Manchage (Oxford); Chabanakongkomun (Dudley); Maanexit (north part of Woodstock, at that time included in Massachusetts); Quantisset (southeast part of Woodstock); Wabquistset (southwest part of Woodstock); Packachoog (south part of Worcester); Waeuntug (Uxbridge). “There are two other Indian towns; viz., Weshakin [or Nashaway, now Lancaster] and Quabaug [now North Brookfield], which are coming on to receive the Gospel; and reckoning these, there are nine in the Nipmuck country.”

Eliot had worked very hard to encourage the European style of self-sufficiency to the Indians in these new towns, while at the same time securing their protection by the government:

At the outset of the eighteenth century, the Natick Indians, with the exception of a white miller, owned all the land and elected their own local government officials. Like any other New England townspeople, they held town meetings, laid out roads, hired schoolmasters, and collected taxes. Unlike white New Englanders, however, the Indians were under the guardianship of the General Court, which placed important restrictions on them. To protect them from unscrupulous whites, the court obliged the Indians to obtain permission before selling any land ... White guardians were responsible for providing relief for indigent and needy Indian proprietors out of funds raised through the leasing or sale of Indian lands and for acting as executors for deceased Indians under their protection.

All Native Americans in this study are assumed to have been free. However, as late as the early 18th century, there were a small number of Indian slaves in New England. Some had been sent to the Caribbean:

Colonial laws permitted the enslavement of Indians taken captive in war. But, skilled as they were in woodcraft, it was almost impossible to prevent their escape. They were accordingly exchanged for negroes from the West Indies.

The recollections of a surgeon in the Continental Army at Valley Forge tell the sad story of an all-too-often occurrence amongst the Indian troops:

I was call’d to relieve a Soldier tho’t to be dying — he expir’d before I reach’d the Hutt. He was an Indian — an excellent Soldier — and an obedient good natur’d fellow. He engaged for money doubtless as others do; -- but he has serv’d his country faithfully -- he has fought for those very people who disinherit his forefathers -- having finished his pilgrimage, he was discharged from the War of Life & Death. His memory ought to be respected ... There the poor fellow lies not Superior now to a clod of earth -- his Mouth wide open -- his Eyes staring. Was he affrighted at the scene of Death -- or the consequences of it? ... He has been an honest fellow -- has done his duty to his Maker and his fellow creatures as far as his Inclinations and Abilities would permit of, -- therefore we’ll suppose him happier now than ever.

Before the Revolution, rampant disease plus losses in the Colonial military had decimated the Indian populations of Natick and other New England Indian towns:

The Revolutionary War was Natick's final blow. Decades later, the few surviving Natick Indians would tell the General Court: "almost all that were able did go into the Service of the United States and either died in the service or soon after their return home. We your petitioners are their widows, there not being one male left now that was then of age to go to war."7

The same forces conspired against the Mohegan population:

During the revolution many of the Mohegans enlisted in the army of the Colonies, and seventeen or eighteen of them died in the service or were killed in battle, leaving several widows, some with young children. In May, 1789, some of the Mohegans presented to the legislature a remarkable memorial which should be preserved as a relic of history:

"We beg leave to lay our concerns and burdens at your excellencies feet. The times are exceedingly altered, yea, the times are upside down, or rather we have changed the good times chiefly by the help of the white people. For in times past our forefathers lived in peace, love, and great plenty. When they wanted meat, they would just run into the bush a little way, with their weapons, and would soon return, bringing home good venison, raccoon, bear, and fowl. If they chose to have fish, they would go to the river, or along the seashore, and they would presently fill their canoes with a variety of fish, both scaled and shell fish. And they had an abundance of nuts, wild fruits, ground nuts, and ground beans, and they planted but little corn and beans. They had no contention about their lands for they lay in common, and they had but one large dish, and could all eat together in peace and love. But alas! It is not so now; all our hunting and fowling and fishing is entirely gone, and we have begun to work our lands, keep horses and cattle and hogs, and we build houses and fence in lots. And now we plainly see that one dish and one fire will not do any longer for us. Some few there are that are stronger than others, and they will keep off the poor, weak, the halt and blind, and will take the dish to themselves. Yea, they will rather call the white people and the mulattoes to eat out of our dish, and poor widows and orphans must be pushed aside, and there we must sit, crying and starving, and die. And so we are now come to our good brethren of the Assembly, with hearts full of sorrow and grief, for immediate help. And therefore our most humble and earnest request is, that our dish of suckutash may be equally divided amongst us, that every one may have his own little dish by himself, that he may eat quietly, and do with his dish as he pleases, that every one may have his own fire."

A committee appointed to consider this curious and original memorial reported that the condition of affairs in Mohegan were in such order as to render further interference at that time unnecessary.8

The greatest loss suffered by any mother in America, in probably any war, was that of Rebecca Tanner of the Mohegan Tribe who sent off five sons to serve in the Revolutionary War:

Rebecca Tanner, widow, lost her 5 sons in ye Army.9

INDIAN MEETINGHOUSE
ON THIS SITE JOHN ELIOT HELPED HIS INDIAN CONVERTS TO BUILD THEIR FIRST MEETINGHOUSE IN 1651 WITH A "PROPHET'S CHAMBER" WHERE HE LODGED ON HIS FORTNIGHTLY VISITS TO PREACH TO THEM IN THEIR LANGUAGE. HIS DISCIPLE DANIEL TAKAWAMBATE SUCCEEDED TO THE PASTORAL OFFICE IN 1698.
 MASSACHUSETTS BAY COLONY TERCENTENARY COMMISSION
General Gage had desired knowledge of the land and people surrounding Boston. To this effect, two British officers were sent as spies, posing as countrymen, out toward Worcester in February 1775:

a little out of [Watertown] we went into a tavern, a Mr. Brewer's, a whig, we called for dinner, which was brought in by a black woman, at first she was very civil, but afterwards began to eye us very attentively; ... we observed to her that it was a very fine country, upon which she answered so it is, and we have got brave fellows to defend it, and if you go up any higher you will find it is so ... we resolved not to sleep there that night ..."2

On 19 April, the march of the British into the Middlesex County countryside caused great confusion and terror in the general population. In some cases, slaves helped to spread the warning.

At Concord, ... many terrified people hurried to the house of their minister, the Reverend William Emerson. [He] worked outside in the yard [of the Old Manse], moving among the women and children, and giving them bread and cheese and comfort. The minister’s wife, Phebe Bliss Emerson, was deeply frightened ... She had heard the alarm from her African slave Frank, who came running into her chamber with an axe in his hand, shouting that the Redcoats were coming. [She] ... fainted away on the spot.3

In “The Leg” [in Needham] the alarm was sounded by the trumpet of Abel, or Nero, Benson, a negro.4

It is related that Major John Pitcairn visited the home of one Captain Duncan Ingraham of Concord who had been a Surinam slave dealer and had ‘Tory proclivities’. One of Ingraham’s slaves, a man named Cato, was in the field behind the Ingraham house. Pitcairn went out of the back door of the house, and seeing one of Mr. Ingraham’s negroes standing by the large pear-tree in the rear of the house, with his hands behind him, commenced on him, as he did on the rebels at Lexington Common a few hours previously, by pointing a pistol at his head, and, in a loud tone of voice, ordering him to give up his arms; but as the unfortunate bondsman replied to the order by holding up both his hands over his head, and saying ‘Dem is all the arms I have, massa,’ the serious consequence of the Lexington order was not repeated in Mr. Ingraham’s backyard. At this moment the report of the firing at the North Bridge was heard, and the major precipitately left, having more important business to attend to the remainder of the day than making social calls and bullying half-scared negroes.6

Perhaps the intelligence reports of Gen. Gates, combined with the sight of Prince Estabrook on Lexington Common, had alerted Pitcairn to be especially cautious. For in New England, the black population overwhelmingly and unabashedly favored the Patriot side.

Women and children from Lincoln, as in all the towns along Battle Road, went into hiding. Many slaves remained behind as their masters went off to battle. Most residents knew full well that the British would return on their march:

The John Hoar household in northeast Lincoln also made preparations. There, according to tradition, silver and other valuables were hidden in the well ... John’s house was a gathering place for women and children from the surrounding neighborhood. Most reportedly hid in the nearby woods while fifteen-year-old Leonard Hoar and the slave Brister served as lookout.7

Fearing a slave revolt, many women and children of Framingham were terrified:

Soon after the men were gone, a strange panic seized upon the women and children living in the Edgell and Belknap district. Some one started the story that "the Negroes were coming to massacre them all!" Nobody stopped to ask where the hostile Negroes were coming from; for all of our own colored people were patriots. It was probably from a lingering memory of the earlier Indian alarms, which took this indefinite shape, aided by the feeling of terror awakened by their defenseless condition, and the uncertainty of the issue of the pending fight. The wife of Capt. Edgell, and the other matrons brought the axes and pitchforks and clubs into the house, and securely bolted the doors, and passed the day and night in anxious suspense.8

The noise of battle, the cries of men and the tales of destruction also caused great panic on the Menotomy (now Arlington, Massachusetts) section of Battle Road:

Vague rumors were afloat of plots and conspiracies. The report was spread abroad that the slaves were intending to rise, and finish what the British had begun by murdering the defenseless women and children. It excited great consternation, therefore, among the women gathered at George Prentiss's upon the hill, when they saw Ishmael, a negro slave belonging to Mr. Cutler, approaching the house. They thought their time had come, but one, a little braver than the rest, summoned up courage to ask, "Are you going to kill us, Ishmael?" "Lord-a-massy, no ma'am!" said the astonished black. "Is my missis here?" 9

There is no known recorded incident of any slave uprising in New England during the war. The 'New England conscience [which had] slumbered and slept'10 to the evils of slavery had been duly awakened.

The last Patriot casualty on Battle Road was a man of color:

A negro (the only one [who] was seen to fire at the King's troops) was wounded near the houses close to the [Charlestown] Neck, out of which the Rebels fired to the last.11

8 FRAM, 375.
9 ARLC, 50. This story was related to him by a Mrs. Lydia Pierce.
11 "Description of the Battle of Lexington, by Lieutenant Mackenzie of the Royal Welch Fusileers". MAHP, Second Series, V(1890):394. This man may well have been Caesar Augustus, who was taken prisoner by the British.
Thomas Davis, a soldier from Holden, Massachusetts, gave this deposition to the Directors of the Bunker Hill Monument Association:

Saw Gen. Putnam on Bunker Hill; he told a negro he would cut him down if he attempted to run; he tried to get past, and Putnam struck him down with his sword.¹

At the battle, a soldier named Aaron Smith was fighting at the rail fence behind a breastwork of fresh mown hay. He told the story of a man at his side, a negro, so crippled by a shot in the leg that he could not rise up to discharge his gun, but could load and re-load, which he continued to do, both Smith's and his own, and then hand them to Smith to fire, until their ammunition was expended, when he undertook to carry the negro off the field on his back, but was obliged to leave him to his fate ...²

On his way to the battle, a sixteen year-old named John Greenwood made an extraordinary observation of courage and individual initiative which he preserved in his journal:

Everywhere the greatest terror and confusion seemed to prevail, and as I ran along the road leading to Bunker Hill it was filled with chairs and wagons, bearing the wounded and dead, while groups of men were employed in assisting others, not badly injured, to walk. Never having beheld such a sight before, I felt very much frightened, and would have given the world if I had not enlisted as a soldier; I could positively feel my hair stand on end.

Just as I came near the place, a negro man, wounded in the back of his neck, passed me and, his collar being open and he not having anything on except his shirt and trousers, I saw the wound quite plainly and the blood running down his back. I asked him if it hurt him much as he did not seem to mind it; he said no, that he was only going to get a plaster put on it, and meant to return. You cannot conceive what encouragement this immediately gave me; I began to feel brave and like a soldier from that moment, and fear never troubled me afterward during the whole war.³

² Ward, Andrew H. History of the Town of Shrewsbury, Massachusetts from its Settlement in 1717 to 1829 ... (1847), 55-6. Thomas J. Fleming in his book Now We Are Enemies (1960), 321, names this man as Caesar Bason. Fleming states that Bason was taken prisoner but his name is not on the official prisoner list and no other supporting evidence has yet been found.
³ Greenwood, Isaac J. (ed.). The Revolutionary Services of John Greenwood of Boston and New York 1775-1783 (1922), 12-13. Greenwood was to serve again, notably at the Battle of Trenton with General Washington and, in later life, became his personal dentist.

Nothing is known of the early life of James Anthony.

He joined the eight month's service from Natick (MA) on 2 May 1775, in the company of Capt. James Mellen in Col. Jonathan Ward's regiment. He is also shown in the same unit on a 26 December 1775 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Dorchester'.

There is no record of 1776 service.

With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He enlisted on 14 March 1777 for three years in the Continental Army, in Capt. Reuben Slayton's company in Col. William Shepard's 4th Massachusetts regiment. This unit fought valiantly at both Battles of Saratoga and then spent the winter at Valley Forge. On a 30 January 1778 roll he is listed as 'sick at home'.

From July 1778 to April 1779, he was on duty in the same unit at Providence, the latter two months on command with Gen. John Glover. On 28 January 1780, he was at West Point. He was discharged 14 March 1780.

Jonathan Anthony was born on 21 January 1753 in Medford (MA), the son of Jonathan and Catherine (George) Anthony. He is described as a ‘free negro’.

He joined the eight month’s service from Medford on 24 April 1775, in the company of Capt. John Wood in Col. Samuel Gerrish’s regiment. He is listed on a 1 June 1775 order for advance pay, on the 1 August 1775 muster roll, and on a 10 August 1775 return of men sick and absent dated Medford. He served out the end of 1775 in Capt. Joseph Pettengill’s company, Col. Loammi Baldwin’s regiment, being listed on a 27 September 1775 roll dated Sewall’s Point. He is shown in the same unit on a 19 November 1775 ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money, dated Camp at Sewall’s Point’.

There is no record of 1776 service.

Responding to an alarm at Rhode Island, he arrived at camp 9 May 1777, enlisting in the company of Capt. Stephen Dana in Col. Josiah Whitney’s regiment. After two months and eight days service, he was discharged on 10 July 1777.

In 1778 he enlisted for a nine-month term, in Capt. Brooks’ company in Col. Thatcher’s regiment, serving at Fishkill (NY). The descriptive roll lists him as:

- age: 25
- stature: 5 ft. 6 in.
- residence: Medford

The 1790 census of Medford lists him as head in a household of two free people of color.

He married Lois Way of Lexington on 6 March 1777.

Joseph Anthony was born on 24 December 1753 in Grafton (MA), the son of Joseph and Abigail (_____) Anthony.¹

He joined the eight month’s service from Grafton (also Alstead NH) on 29 April 1775, in the company of Capt. Luke Drury in Col. Jonathan Ward’s regiment. There is no record of 1776 service.

With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. At the time, he was serving in the 6th Worcester County regiment in Capt. Joseph Warren’s company.³ From this regiment, he was transferred to the Continental Army on 24 March 1777 for a three-year term in the company of Capt. John Blanchard, in Col. James Wesson’s 9th Massachusetts regiment. This unit fought valiantly at both Battles of Saratoga and then set off for winter quarters at Valley Forge. It was probably there that he died on 26 December 1777.⁴

With thousands of others who appeared at Cambridge after the Alarm, he joined the eight month’s service in the company of Capt. Benjamin Bullard, in Col. There is no record of 1776 service.

On 3 May 1777 he enlisted into the company of Capt. Samuel Fisher, in Col. Jonathan Titcomb’s regiment. This service was for two months, 10 days of which was in Rhode Island.³ We next find him in Capt. Sabin Mann’s company from which he was transferred to and enlisted into the Continental Army for three years on 8 September 1777, in the company of Capt. Moses Knapp and the regiment of Col. William Shepard⁴. This unit served at Saratoga⁵ and Rhode Island⁶.

He next served at the Hudson Highlands in the same regiment (Shepard’s 4th) but in Capt. David Holbrook’s company, where he is listed on a descriptive roll⁷ as follows:

- age: 23
- stature: 6 ft.
- complexion: black
- hair: black
- residence: Medfield

A large percentage of Battle Road veterans did not bother to mention that service in their pensions, though through independent sources that service could be proven to be absolutely certain. A smaller but still significant number of Bunker Hill veterans did the same. The reason was probably that three years of 1777-1780 Continental service was a sure ticket to a pension - no other service need be mentioned.

Caesar Augustus was the servant of Mr. Tileston of Dorchester (MA).¹

He was taken prisoner on 19 April 1775 and was exchanged on 5 June 1775 with the other American prisoners.²

The last Patriot casualty on Battle Road was a man of color:

It is very probable that this man was Caesar Augustus.

Peter Ayres was born circa 1753. The respected historian Nourse describes him as ‘colored’.

He was a minute man from Lancaster who marched on the Alarm of 19 April 1775, in the company of Capt. John Prescott. He joined the eight month’s service from Lancaster on 27 April 1775, in the company of Capt. Andrew Haskell in Col. Asa Whitcomb’s regiment. He is also listed on the 1 August roll and on a 6 October 1775 return.

On 22 July 1776 he marched to reinforce Washington’s Army in New York, in Capt. Samuel Sawyer’s company in Col. Jonathan Smith’s regiment. ‘They participated in the unfortunate affair at Kips Bay’. He was discharged on 1 December 1776.

On 21 July 1778 he enlisted into the Massachusetts militia, in the company of Ebenezer Belknap in Col. Nathaniel Wade’s regiment. He was stationed at North Kingston (RI) until his discharge on 1 January 1779. This service was at the time of the Battle of Rhode Island.

Caesar Bailey was born circa 1749. The first known record of him is from the Hampshire County (MA) court records and is related as follows:

The ... case involved John Williams and Cesar, slave to Nathaniel Dickinson. George Sheldon relates that John Williams charged Cesar on November 10, 1771 with stealing one gallon of West Indian rum belonging to John Williams. John Williams requested that a warrant be issued for Cesar “that he may be apprehended and dealt with according to law & as in duty bound.” The warrant was issued on December 2, and Cesar was arrested the following day. At his trial, “Titus negro” served as one of two witnesses in the case. The identity of Titus is unknown ... it is unclear as to whether the slave or the master paid the fine and court costs.²

Caesar remained the slave of Nathaniel Dickinson, a Tory, until ‘Caesar passed into the possession of Nathaniel’s brother, Samuel, when Nathaniel’s property was confiscated due to his Tory activities’.³

He served at the Lexington Alarm from Deerfield in Capt. Jonas Locke’s company of Minute Men in Col. Williams’ regiment. With thousands of others who appeared at Cambridge on the Alarm, he joined the eight month’s service in the company of Capt. Oliver Parker, in Col. William Prescott’s regiment. This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt.

There is no record of any service from 1776 to 1780. On 3 April 1781 he enlisted and is shown on a descriptive roll⁶ as follows:

- age: 32
- stature: 5 ft. 7 in.
- complexion: black
- hair: black
- occupation: farmer
- residence: Deerfield
- enlisted: April 3, 1781
- term: 3 years

For this term of service he is listed as ‘Baley, Caesar’, the change of name indicating the distinct possibility that he had become free sometime between 1778 and 1781. The company and regiment are not listed. This is perhaps because he died in the service soon after this enlistment.⁷

Caesar married Hagar in Deerfield MA on 16 January 1778. They are both listed as ‘servants to Samuel Dickinson’. There is no record of any children.

Little is known of Caesar Bason except that he was from Westford (MA) and was 'a colored man' and 'perhaps the servant of James Burn'.

His first service was at the Lexington Alarm in the company of Capt. Jonathan Minot, in Col. James Prescott's regiment. This unit served at Battle Road. He afterward enlisted into the eight month's service in the company of Capt. Abijah Wyman, in Col. William Prescott's regiment, and was present at the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt, where he was killed. Historian Rev. Edwin Hodgman had the following anecdote related to him 'on good authority', describing the last moments of Caesar Bason's life:

In the battle he found his powder was nearly gone, and putting in his last charge, he exclaimed, "Now, Caesar, give 'em one more." He fired and was himself shot, and fell back into the trench.

With other Americans who were killed, he is probably buried on or near the grounds of the Bunker Hill Monument.

Pompey was born circa 1755. He was known as either Pompey Fortune or Pompey Blackman until 1785 when he was known as Pomp Freeman.

He joined the eight month’s service from Concord in the company of Capt. John Baker, in Col. Samuel Gerrish’s regiment. He served out the end of 1775 in Capt. Joseph Pettengill’s company, Col. Loammi Baldwin’s regiment. The need for reinforcements just before the fortification of Dorchester Heights was probably the reason for a stint of four days service at Roxbury in early March 1776 in Capt. John Bridge’s company, Col. Eleazar Brook’s regiment.

As the attack on Canada crumbled, the call went out for reinforcements for the Northern Department. He responded by enlisting in Capt. Charles Miles’ company, in Col. Jonathan Reed’s regiment. This unit served at Ticonderoga during the time of the defeat of the American fleet on Lake Champlain under Gen. Benedict Arnold.

Upon his return home in early 1777, he rejoined the local militia in Capt. Bridge’s company. With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He joined the Continental Army on 10 March for a three-year term in the company of Capt. Edmund Munroe, in Col. Timothy Bigelow’s 15th Massachusetts regiment. Probably due to his new commitment to the military service, on 2 April 1777 he appointed Amos Fortune of Woburn, his ‘Trusty Friend’, as his lawful attorney to tend to his financial matters. Bigelow’s regiment served at Saratoga, Valley Forge and Monmouth, where his Captain was killed. His new Captain was named Bowman and he served faithfully until his discharge on 10 March 1780, part of this tour being at Providence during early 1779. He once again enlisted for Rhode Island service in the company of Capt. William Green, in Col. Cyprian How’s regiment. His final discharge was on 1 November 1780.

On 27 October 1782, he was ‘Baptized & Admitted’ into the First Congregational Church of Lexington. A side note states ‘A Negro Man in Private He being sick’. By 1785, he had removed to Jaffrey, New Hampshire to work in the tanning business of his old friend Amos Fortune. This work he did faithfully until his death in Jaffrey on 20 May 1790. He is presumed to be buried in the Jaffrey Center Burying Yard near the Amos Fortune lot.

Jack, a servant to Joseph Briant Jr. of Stoneham, was born circa 1735 and was also called Jack Thare.¹

A Jack Briant of Stoneham, most probably the same man, enlisted on 1 June 1775 in the company of Capt. Samuel Sprague, in Col. Samuel Gerrish’s regiment.² On 13 June 1775 he, with others at the Camp at Cambridge, took an oath required by Congress.³ His Colonel was cashiered because of behavior at the Battle scene and Lt. Col. Loammi Baldwin took over. Bryant was at Chelsea on 2 October 1775⁴ and still there on 30 December 1775 when he received an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money’. He was one of a group of men who agreed to serve one extra month in January 1776.⁵

On 14 March 1776, his name appears in a run-away slave ad⁶:

Ran away from the subscriber, on the 24th of February, a Negro fellow, named Jack, of a [---] stature, has lost his upper teeth; had on when he went away, a blue coat, with large white buttons. Whoever will take up said Negro, and convey him to the subscriber in Stoneham, shall have three dollars reward.

Joseph Briant, jun.

Jack (Thare) married (‘with his masters consent?’) Mary Oliver, free mulatto of Lincoln (MA), at Concord (MA) on 3 September 1761.⁸ There is no known record of any children.

Nothing is known of the early life of Micah Bumpo.

He responded to the Lexington Alarm in the Waltham company of Capt. Abraham Pierce, in Col. Thomas Gardner’s regiment.¹ This unit did not receive proper notice and arrived on the scene too late to engage the British.²

He enlisted on 7 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Abijah Child, in Col. Thomas Gardner’s regiment. His Colonel was mortally wounded at the Battle of Bunker Hill and Lt. Col. William Bond took over command. His unit was stationed at Prospect Hill from September to December. On 25 December 1775 he received an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money’.³

The 1790 U.S. Census lists a ‘Mike’ Bumpo, head of a family of five of color from Hardwick (MA), who is undoubtedly the same man.⁴

Eli Burdoo was baptized at Lexington (MA) on 20 July 1775, the son of Moses and Phebe (Banister) Burdoo.²

In the Lexington town history, his name appears on a list of soldiers who served in Capt. John Parker’s Lexington militia company ‘in the morning and in the afternoon of the memorable 19th of April’.³ He served in a special detachment of Capt. John Parker’s Lexington militia from 6 to 10 May 1775, ‘on command at Cambridge ... by order of the Committee of Safety’. He was called out in the same manner for two days on 17 and 18 June 1775.⁴

There is no record of 1776 service.

In 1777 he was a private in Col. Eleazar Brooks’ regiment of Middlesex County militia. With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He was transferred on 29 September 1777, enlisting in Capt. Samuel Farrar’s company in Col. Jonathan Reed’s regiment, ‘to reinforce Northern army under Gen. [Horatio] Gates’.⁵

Silas Burdoo was born in Lexington (MA) on 14 February 1748, the son of Philip and Mary (______) Burdoo. He 'resided at Lexington & Cambridge alternately until near the close of the Revolutionary War'.

No military record could be found to prove his presence on Battle Road, yet he clearly claims that:

he volunteered in the service of the United States on the nineteenth day of April, seventeen hundred and seventy five, in Capt. Boardman's company, and was in the Battle at Lexington Mastts on the same day, and after following the British for us back from Lexington to Boston, was dismissed.

He enlisted from Lexington on 23 May 1775 into the eight months' service, in the company of Capt. John Wood in Col. Samuel Gerrish's regiment. Though portions of his regiment forged on to the Battle of Bunker Hill under Adj. Christian Febiger, his Colonel did not and was later court-martialed for cowardice. Silas himself remained stalled at Charlestown Common [now Sullivan Square] with his company. He describes the events thus:

the Regiment took up a line of march for Bunker Hill in Charlestown and Capt. Wood's Company, to which he belonged, proceeded as far as Charlestown Common, in plain sight of Bunker Hill, where the celebrated Bunker Hill Battle was then raging. That at Charlestown Common, they received several volleys of cannon & grape shot from the enemy, and after the American Troops were driven from Bunker Hill, he returned in s'th Woods company to Cambridge and after refreshing, immediately proceeded to Prospect Hill, near Bunker Hill, where he stood on guard during the night whilst the American Troops were entrenching and fortifying the place. That he occasionally guarded at Inman's Point in Cambridge, and the remainder of the time, until Gen. Washington took command, encamped on Prospect Hill. That after Gen. Washington arrived and took command of the Army, he went in Capt. Wood's company to Mistick (now called Medford) and was occupied as a guard at that place and Chelsea, on the opposite side of the river. That whilst at Mistick he once stood guard at General Sullivan's quarters at the "Bishop house" ...

His name appears on the 1 August 1775 muster roll, on the August pay abstract, on the September pay abstract 'dated Chelsea', on the October company return, on a 22 December 'list of men who declined to serve the month of Jan. 1776' and on a 28 December 1775 'receipt for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Medford'.

On 15 September 1781 he enlisted in Capt. John Hayward's company in Col. Webb's regiment. He describes this tour of duty as follows:

That in seventeen hundred and eighty one, the town of Lexington aforesaid was required to furnish eight militia men to join the Army of the United States at Gallows Hill, on the bank of the Hudson River south of West Point, in the state of New York, and to serve three months. That he volunteered for this service, and started from Lexington, according to his best recollection, in the fore part of September 1781, in company with William Diamond traveled by the way of Springfield Mass[16] crossed the height of the green mountains at Mount Tom, near the west line of Mass[18] passed through Fishkill in the state of New York and arrived at Gallows Hill in about eight days. That he embodied under Major Porter, Capt. Gilbert, Serj. French and encamped on Gallows Hill in the rear of Col. Jackson’s Regt. That he was for a while employed on fatigue in making and repairing Roads, but that he subsequently volunteered with about ten or fifteen others, to go to Danbury in the state of Connecticut and receive one hundred and five head of Cattle designed to be driven to the American army under the command of General Washington then besieging Cornwallis. That the party took charge of said Cattle at Danbury, crossed the Hudson river at King’s Ferry, landed the cattle on the Jersey shore, and proceeded with them to Morristown in the state of New Jersey, when he returned to Gallows Hill.

That while at King’s Ferry he saw Capt. Calender of the Regular Troops whom he knew and who commanded a company of Artillery at the battle of Bunker Hill in 1775. That he remained at Gallows Hill but a few days only, when he was stationed at the Barracks in Fishkill, where he remained the remainder of the three months for which he volunteered. That he was in Fishkill on the day of General rejoicing for the taking of Cornwallis.\textsuperscript{13}

He was discharged on 4 December 1781.\textsuperscript{14}

Fortune Burnee was born on 24 March 1757 in Grafton (MA)

1, the son of Fortune and Abigail (_____) Burnee.2

He was a minute man from Grafton who marched on the Alarm of 19 April 1775, in the company of Capt. Aaron Kimball in Col. Artemas Ward's regiment.3 He joined the eight month's service from Grafton on 26 April 1775, in the company of Capt. Luke Drury in Col. Jonathan Ward's regiment. He is listed on an October roll and on a 3 November 1775 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money'.4

It is undoubtedly the same man who married Phylis, negro servant of Rev. Mr. Frost of Mendon, on 31 July 1778 in Grafton.5 It is also undoubtedly the same man who married second to Sarah Hector, of Sutton, on 8 November 1781 in Grafton.6 There is no known record of children.

Cuff Chambers

Age: 37
Occupation: N/A
Residence: Andover, MA
Description: ‘Negro’
Status: ‘Servant’
Religion: Congregational
Rank: Private
Unit: Bridge / Furbush
Stationed: redoubt

Cuff, of African descent, was born to parents named Chambers. The date of his birth is unknown but is placed at circa 1738.¹ The place of his birth is also unknown but was undoubtedly Massachusetts. While Cuff died before the general pension act of 1818 and while his widow never claimed his pension during her lifetime, much of what we know about him is due to statements in the pension application² of his only-surviving daughter made after the death of her mother.

Nothing is known of Cuff’s early life. The first record we have is of his marriage in Andover, Essex county, Massachusetts on 16 September 1762 to Bette _____, wherein both are listed as ‘Negro Servants’.³ Before the war, Cuff was owned by Samuel Blanchard of Andover and took on his last name. He was known as Cuff Blanchard until the end of the war, when, obtaining the freedom promised to him by Blanchard if he served, he changed his last name to Chambers in honor of his mother.⁴

Six weeks after the outbreak of hostilities at Lexington and Concord, Cuff enlisted into the Andover company of Capt. Charles Furbush in the 27th Massachusetts regiment of Col. Ebenezer Bridge.⁵ This unit of what was called ‘eight month’s men’ (due to the term of their enlistment) marched to Cambridge and became part of the army encircling Boston. Cuff was one of at least five men of color who served in Bridge’s regiment.

No primary record exists to detail his battle service. It is certain though that elements of Bridge’s regiment went on to Breed’s Hill on the night of 16 June 1775 in order to build the redoubt that became the tomb of so many Americans the next day. It is also certain that a large portion of Furbush’s company was on the hill during the battle of 17 June 1775. Capt. Furbush himself was severely wounded early in the action and had to be carried off the field.⁶ Based on this knowledge and on the statement by Cuff’s daughter in 1849 that her father ‘was in the Battle at Bunkers Hill’⁷, the presence of Cuff Blanchard at the battle is accepted as proven.

True to his promise, Samuel Blanchard set Cuff free, though no instrument of manumission has yet been found. The progression of events is best described by Cuff’s daughter Elizabeth in 1849:

She also states that she has heard her late said Father say that his name was originally Chambers, but enlisted into the service by the name of Cuff Blanchard because he went by that name because his master was called Blanchard, & that all other colored servants went by the sir name of their Masters, and also that after he obtained his freedom he again went by his original name Cuff Chambers.⁸

At some point the family moved from Andover to Amherst, New Hampshire and then to Leeds, Maine.\textsuperscript{9} They were in Leeds by at least 1808 as is evidenced from this extract from the records of the Leeds Baptist Church:

\begin{quote}
Lords day August 7\textsuperscript{th} 1808 ... Sister Elizabeth Chambers a black woman made a public declaration of her faith in our dear Saviour & love to his precious cause: to the satisfaction of the church, & was baptized\textsuperscript{10}
\end{quote}

In 1814, one of the Overseers of the Poor in Leeds contacted his counterparts in Andover to ask for support for Cuff, 'a pauper ... claiming settlement in the town of Andover'. An overseer from Andover made the trek to Maine to prove that the Cuff Chambers requesting support was indeed the same Cuff Blanchard who had lived in Andover. Proof made, and choosing not to require the family to remove to the almshouse in Andover, the overseers of Andover granted over $100 in assistance during the three years between 1814 and 1816.\textsuperscript{11}

Cuff Chambers died in Leeds on 8 June 1818, at the probable age of 80, and his wife also died there nearly twenty-one years later, at the age of 94:

\begin{quote}

He is buried in the Dead River Cemetery in Leeds on a bluff overlooking the river. His grave, marked by a government stone, is honored by the Sons of the American Revolution.\textsuperscript{13} The inscription reads:

Nothing is known of the early life of John Chowen.

He was a minute man from Lancaster who marched on the Alarm of 19 April 1775, in the company of Capt. Benjamin Houghton in Col. John Whetcomb's regiment. He joined the eight month's service from Lancaster on 26 April 1775, in the company of Capt. Benjamin Hastings in Col. Asa Whitcomb's regiment. He is also listed on the 1 August roll, on an August receipt for wages and on a 6 October 1775 roll 'dated Camp at Prospect Hill'. Shortly after he deserted. A newspaper printed a wanted description:

Deserted from Prospect Hill, late of Bolton, in the county of Worcester, ... John Chewen, of Capt. Hill's company, in Col. Phinney's regiment, in the new establishment, but of Capt. Hasting's company, in Col. Whitcomb's regiment, in the old ... John Chewen is a mulatto, but calls himself Indian, about 5 feet 5 inches high, had on a dark coloured-coat, and a pair of breeches something lighter; has a wife at Holden, a proper Indian squaw; he loves a good deal of rum ...

In 1776 he served at Hull (MA), probably as a coastal observer, in the company of Capt. William Warner in Col. Josiah Whitney's regiment.

In 1777 he was a member of the militia from Bolton, in Capt. Jonathan Houghton's company in Col. Josiah Whitney's regiment. From this unit he transferred into the Continental Army for three years, in the company of Capt. Moses Brewer in Col. Samuel Brewer's regiment.

He was married, as is stated above, to an Indian woman whose name is unknown.

Age: N/A
Occupation: N/A
Residence: Cape Ann, MA
Description: 'colored'
Status: N/A
Religion: N/A
Rank: Corporal
Unit: Prescott / O. Parker
Stationed: redoubt

Nothing is known of the early life of Sampson Coburn. A town history describes him as 'colored'.
By reaching the rank of Corporal (and if we accept the assertion that he was indeed a man of color), he was the highest ranking soldier in this study.

He joined the eight month's service from Cape Ann on 20 May 1775, as a Corporal, in the company of Capt. Oliver Parker, in Col. William Prescott’s regiment. This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt, after which command fell to Lt. Nathaniel Sartwell. On 18 June 1775, one day after the Battle, he was listed on an order ‘for cartridge boxes dated Camp at Cambridge’. This is a strong sign of participation in the Battle. On 22 June 1775, he served on the main guard under Lt.
Col. Loammi Baldwin. He is also listed on the 1 August 1775 roll and was recorded as ‘absent’ on the October 1775 roll of the company under Capt. Ephraim Corey. On 31 October 1775 his name was on an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Camp at Cambridge’.

On 2 January 1776, he was on a list of men ‘who delivered firelocks’. He was one of a group of men who agreed to enlist to serve until 1 April 1776.

1 There was ‘Samson Coburn’ b. 19 July 1745, the son of Ezra and Thankful Richardson, ‘a Revolutionary soldier in 1776’ recorded in Genealogy of the Descendants of Edward Colburn (1913), 44. This man does not seem to be a man of color - some intensive checking could not produce a definitive answer on whether there were two men by the same name or on whether one or both is truly a man of color.

Smith Coburn was born circa 1740.¹ He was the servant of Mr. Robert Coburn of Dracut.²

He joined the eight month’s service on 6 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Oliver Parker, in Col. William Prescott’s regiment.³ This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt. On 18 June 1775, one day after the Battle, he was listed on an order ‘for cartridge boxes dated Camp at Cambridge’.⁴ This is a strong sign of participation in the Battle. He was also recorded as ‘sick and absent’ on the October 1775 roll of the company under Capt. Ephraim Corey.⁵ On 3 January 1776, he was on a list of men ‘who delivered firelocks’.⁶

The 1790 census of Dracut lists him as head in a household of four free people of color.⁷

He married Peg Connor, ‘Servant of Mrs. Deborah Coburn’, on 10 July 1766 in Dracut.⁸ ‘They lived on the Fowler Road, a few rods from the highway leading to Nashua, where the cellar may be seen’.⁹

Titus Coburn was born circa 1745.2

On the Lexington Alarm he marched from Shirley (MA), in Capt. Henry Haskell’s minute man company in Col. James Prescott’s regiment. He joined the eight month’s service on 6 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Oliver Parker, in Col. William Prescott’s regiment.3 This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt. On 18 June 1775, one day after the Battle, he was listed on an order ‘for cartridge boxes dated Camp at Cambridge’.4 This is a strong sign of participation in the Battle. He served on the main guard under Lt. Col. Loammi Baldwin on 22 June 1775.5 On the 1 August 1775 muster roll he was serving under Lt. Nathaniel Sartwell.6 He was also recorded on the 7 October 1775 roll of the company under Capt. Ephraim Corey. On 31 October 1775, his name appeared on an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Camp at Cambridge’.7

On 17 December 1776 he marched ‘to reinforce army in the Jerseys under Gen. Washington’, in Capt. Fortunatus Eager’s company in Col. Josiah Whitney’s regiment. His unit returned on 27 March 1777.8

He had just enlisted in Capt. Samuel Hill’s militia company when, with Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He enlisted on 14 April 1777 for three years in the Continental Army, in Capt. Joshua Brown’s company in Col. Timothy Bigelow’s 15th Massachusetts regiment. This unit served at Saratoga, being stationed at Van Schaick’s Island just before the battles. the 15th then spent the winter at Valley Forge. Titus Coburn died there on 14 April 1778, most probably of smallpox.9

He filed, at Harvard (MA) on 12 November 1771, intentions to marry Peggy Whittemore. At the time his residence was listed as Camden (NH).10

Isaac Comecho was baptized on 27 October 1745 in Natick, Massachusetts, the son of Hezekiah and Elizabeth (George) Comecho.

It is undoubtedly the same Isaac who marched from Dedham on the Lexington alarm in the company of Capt. William Ellis, in Col. William Heath’s regiment. He joined the eight month’s service on 4 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Joseph Guild, in the 36th (Heath’s former) regiment. This company served at Roxbury during the Battle of Bunker Hill. On the 5 October 1775 roll, he was serving at Fort No. 2.

Samuel Comecho² was born in Natick (MA)³.

He joined the eight month's service on 24 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Benjamin Bullard, in Col. Jonathan Brewer's regiment.⁴ This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill on the diagonal between the redoubt and the rail fence. He was also recorded on the October 1775 roll of the company, dated Prospect Hill.⁵

On 1 January 1776, he enlisted into the company of Capt. William Hudson Ballard, in Col. Asa Whitcomb's regiment, to reinforce the Army in Canada. The 27 November 1776 roll, dated Camp at Ticonderoga, reported that he 'died March 14, 1776'⁶, most likely of smallpox.

² LOVE, 95 states that this name was originally Sokomecho.

³ MAVR, Natick, Births. Three males by the name of Samuel were born in Natick during the time period.

⁵ Ibid 3:857, listed as 'Comechew'.

⁶ Ibid 3:863. The exact position of this regiment in March is currently unknown, but reinforcements were headed to the Northern Army all through that winter. It is very plausible that this unit had indeed made it to Ticonderoga by March. Smallpox was then rampant in the American Army and it is of the highest probability that any man who died at Ticonderoga at that time had the disease.
There is no known record of Porter Cuddy's birth.

He enlisted from Sudbury, Massachusetts on 31 May 1775 into the company commanded by Capt. Aaron Haynes, in Col. Jonathan Brewer’s regiment. On the roll he is listed as a ‘negro’. He had 62 days continuous service to 1 August 1775 when a new roll was taken. He is also listed on a company return dated Prospect Hill (in what is now Somerville, Massachusetts and where a fort had been built by the Patriots) on 6 October 1775. An order for a bounty coat was dated ‘Cambridge’ on 25 October 1775. The key document is a 10 June 1776 order issued ‘for money allowed for loss of a coat at battle of Bunker Hill’.

On 18 June 1776, three months and a day after the British evacuation of Boston, he enlisted for a short second term in Col. Thomas Marshall’s Plymouth County regiment, in Capt. Andrew Haskell’s company. He served one month and thirteen days until 1 August 1776. This tour took him to Hull, Massachusetts, probably as a coastal observer.

Robert was the 'negro' slave of Eliphalet Currier of Amesbury (MA).\(^1\)

Enlistment papers (probably dated May 1775) place him in Capt. John Currier’s company in Col. James Frye’s regiment.\(^2\) It is probably the same man, listed as 'Robin Currier', who marched from Salisbury (MA) on the Lexington Alarm, in Capt. Henry Morrill’s company in Col. Caleb Cushing’s regiment.\(^3\) It is also probably the same man, also named 'Robin Currier', who was listed on a receipt for pouches dated Cambridge on 19 June 1775, on a 1 July 1775 receipt for advance pay and on an October 1775 company return, all in Capt. Currier’s company.\(^4\) Another man by the same name is also listed on the 6 October 1775 roll of Capt. Jonathan Evans’ company, in Col. James Frye’s company.\(^5\) It would seem that he transferred from Capt. Currier’s to Capt. Evans’ company in early October. Two orders for ‘bounty coat or its equivalent in money’ also exist: one, on 13 November 1775, for 'Robert Curer' in Capt. Evans’ company; the other, on 16 November 1775, for 'Robin Kier' in Capt. Currier’s company.\(^6\)

Once again it is probably the same man who enlisted on 17 June 1776, in Capt. William Hudson Ballard’s company in Col. Asa Whitcomb’s regiment, for reinforcement of the Northern Army. His name still appears on a 27 November 1776 'muster roll dated Camp at Ticonderoga' under Capt. Ballard though he re-enlisted in Capt. John Drew’s company in Col. Thomas Poor’s New Hampshire regiment on 13 November 1776.\(^8\)

Joseph Demas was born circa 1759.¹

He joined the eight month’s service from Newbury on 1 June 1775, in the company of Capt. Timothy Barnard in Col. Moses Little’s regiment. On a 9 October 1775 roll in which he is described as²:

age: 16

There is no record of 1776 service.

With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. Demas enlisted in the Continental Army on 1 February 1777 for a three-year term in the company of Capt. James Varnum, in Col. Michael Jackson’s 8th Massachusetts regiment.³ This unit fought valiantly at both Battles of Saratoga, suffered through winter quarters at Valley Forge and then fought at Monmouth in June 1778.

Continental pay accounts name him from 1 January 1780 until 3 April 1780, at which time he deserted. A list of deserters dated 25 January 1781 describes him as follows⁴:

age: 27
stature: 5 ft. 8 in.
complexion: negro
hair: black
residence: Amesbury
enlisted: during war

² MASS 4:659, listed as 'Demas'.
³ Ibid 4:670, listed as 'Demus'; a 28 February 1778 list shows him as a resident of Salisbury (MA) - see MASS 4:659.
⁴ Ibid 4:670. A controversy developed in 1780 concerning length of service. Large numbers of Continental soldiers had signed up for 'three years or during the war'. Most soldiers interpreted this to mean the former; most officers interpreted this to mean the latter. Many 'desertions' resulted.
Scipio (sometimes called Dodge and sometimes Lee) was born circa 1741.\(^1\)

He joined the eight month's service on 1 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Richard Dodge, in Col. Samuel Gerrish's regiment. On 11 August 1775, he was reported sick and absent, a possible sign that he may have been wounded. He was also recorded on the October 1775 roll of the company, dated Chelsea. From January to June 1776, he served with his old Captain's company in Col. Loammi Baldwin's regiment. During his military service he was also known as 'Sipps Lee'.\(^2\)

It is very likely that the 'Scipio' who died April 1811 of dropsy in Wenham at age about 70, a 'pauper', is the same man.\(^3\)

On 18 June 1775, one day after the Battle, he was listed on an order ‘for cartridge boxes dated, Camp at Cambridge’. This is a strong sign of participation in the Battle. He was also recorded on the October 1775 roll of the company.

There is no record of 1776 service.

On 16 August 1777, he enlisted in Capt. Joseph Winch’s company, in Col. Samuel Bullard’s regiment of militia. This unit served in the Saratoga campaign. He was discharged on 7 October 1777, the date of the 2nd Battle of Saratoga.

‘After the war he traveled about the country with a violin strapped upon his back; and at musters and trainings, when well filled with cider, which was then a “legal” beverage, made much sport for the assembled multitude. The writer has heard two venerable persons of 80 years of age, relate a few years ago, with much gusto, the sport they had in smashing poor Tom’s fiddle by pelting it with apples.’

Nothing is known of the early life of Abel Ephraim.

Enlisting from Hopkinton (MA), he joined the eight month’s service on 27 April 1775 in the company of Capt. James Mellen, in Col. Jonathan Ward’s regiment. On 18 June 1775, one day after the Battle of Bunker Hill, he was listed on an order ‘for cartridge boxes dated Camp at Cambridge’.² This is a strong sign of participation in the Battle. He was also recorded on the October 1775 roll of the company.³

There is no record of 1776 service.

He joined the Continental Army on 1 January 1777, enlisting from Dedham (MA), in the company of Capt. Nahum Ward, in Col. James Wesson’s regiment.⁴ This regiment suffered casualties at Saratoga and was at Valley Forge. His Captain died in March 1778⁵ and Lt. William Watson took over command. Abel Ephraim himself died in the service on 20 June 1778, just eight days before the Battle of Monmouth.⁶

Enlisting from Worcester (MA), he joined the eight month’s service on 1 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Jonas Hubbard, in Col. Jonathan Ward’s regiment. He was also recorded on the October 1775 roll of the company.²

There is no record of 1776 service.

He enlisted in the Continental Army on 1 January 1777, again from Worcester, in the company of Capt. Simon Learned, in Col. William Shepard’s 4th regiment. Prince Estabrook was born circa 1740. He lived ‘in the family of Benjamin Estabrook’ of Lexington on the Estabrook farm which stood just south of the town center on land bounded by Vine Brook on the northwest, what is now Massachusetts Avenue on the south and what is now Woburn Street on the southeast.

With upwards of 87 other men of Capt. John Parker’s Lexington militia, he stood on Lexington Green in the early dawn of 19 April 1775. There he was wounded and, as such, became the first African American to be wounded in the Revolutionary War. Joseph Estabrook, Benjamin’s oldest son who had also stood on the Green, helped some of the wounded including Prince to the Estabrook home where they were treated by Dr. Joseph Fiske. Having sufficiently recovered, he was called to service on 17 June 1775 from Concord (MA) for two days at Cambridge ‘by order of the Committee of Safety’. There is no known record that he joined the eight months’ service.

As the American attack on Canada crumbled in early 1776, the call went out for reinforcements for the Northern Department. He responded by enlisting in Capt. Charles Miles’ company, in Col. Jonathan Reed’s regiment. This unit served at Ticonderoga during the time of the defeat of the American fleet on Lake Champlain under Gen. Benedict Arnold. In a 16 February 1777 pay abstract he was allowed mileage home from Ticonderoga. Two days later his name appeared on a ‘company receipt for mileage and travel allowance from Ticonderoga home, dated Lexington’.

On 6 November 1777 he enlisted in Capt. Simon Hunt’s company in Col. Eleazer Brooks’ regiment of militia. He was discharged on 3 April 1778 after serving nearly five months, his company having been ‘detached from militia and stationed at Cambridge’.

He entered the six months’ service on 28 July 1780 in Col. John Greaton’s 3rd Massachusetts regiment, arriving at Springfield (MA) under the command of Ensign Boardman on 2 August 1780. A descriptive roll lists him as:

| age: 39 |

Caesar Ferrit was born circa 1720.¹ ‘He was born on one of the West India islands, and was accustomed to boast, that the blood of four nations run in his veins; for one of his Grandfathers was a Dutchman, the other a Frenchman; and one of his grandmothers an Indian, and the other an African’.² A well-researched book on Eastern Massachusetts Indians states:

He was raised in an English family in Milton and “Taught Husbandry-business,” he moved to Boston, but, driven by high unemployment and the cost of living in the city, he had “a desire to dwell at Natick among his own Nation the aboriginal Natives” [and ...] purchased land there in 1751 ...³

He marched from Natick (MA) on the Lexington Alarm, in Capt. Joseph Morse’s company in Col. Samuel Bullard’s regiment.⁴ An 1830 town history describes the actions of Caesar and his son on that memorable day:

Caesar Ferrit and his son John arrived at a house near Lexington meeting house, but a short time before the British soldiers reached that place, on their retreat from Concord. These two discharged their muskets upon the regulars from the entry, and secrete[ed] themselves under the cellar stairs, till the enemy had passed by, though a considerable number of them entered the house and made diligent search for their annoyers.⁵

He enlisted from Natick into the eight months service on 24 April 1775, in Capt. Joseph Morse’s company in Col. John Paterson’s regiment, and is listed on the 1 August 1775 muster roll.⁶ An October 1775 return lists him as ‘Eleazar’.⁷ On 17 November 1775, his name is listed on an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money’.⁸

On 20 December 1776, he was drafted (along with his son John) into Capt. Sabin Mann’s company of Medfield militia ‘to reinforce Continental Army at or near New York’. For this service he was paid £15 by the Selectmen.⁹

He enlisted on 10 March 1781 into Capt. Staples Chamberlain’s company in Col. Dean’s regiment. The ‘company marched to Rhode Island by order of His Excellency John Hancock ... on a 40 days expedition’. He was discharged on 14 March 1781, for a service of eight days (travel included).¹⁰

Caesar Ferrit died in Natick on 23 May 1799.¹¹

¹ An assumed marriage date of 1738 (see birth of daughter Lydia) would imply a 1712 birthdate, per BD-M. This, however, would have made him 63 and ineligible for the militia (maximum age 60). Therefore, his estimated birthdate has been set at 1720, a compromise which places his age of marriage as 18 and his approximate military age as 60 in early 1781 during his last tour of duty.

'He married a white New England woman, and they had several children, in whose veins, if Caesar's account of himself be true, flowed the blood of five nations'. An old Natick newspaper gives the account in more detail:

[Caesar] had been coachman for a wealthy gentleman in Boston. The ward of this gentleman had fallen in love with Caesar. Another choice had been made for the lady, and the wedding day appointed, when this affection for Caesar was discovered. The alternative was given -- wealth, and a husband of her guardian's choosing, or poverty, and a black husband. The girl chose Caesar, and himself and wife took up their lot in this home for the outcast -- Natick.

The Milton (MA) vital records show his wife's name as Naomi. Caesar and Naomi had at least seven children:

1. Lydia b. 15 July 1739 in Milton
2. Patience b. 23 June 1741 in Milton
3. David b. 25 March 1743 in Milton

John Ferrit was born circa 1753, the son of Caesar and Naomi (____) Ferrit. It was stated that he had the blood of five nations flowing through his veins - Caucasian, African, Indian, Dutch and French.

He marched from Natick (MA) on the Lexington Alarm, in Capt. Joseph Morse's company in Col. Samuel Bullard’s regiment. An 1830 town history describes the actions of John and his father Caesar on that memorable day:

Caesar Ferrit and his son John arrived at a house near Lexington meeting house, but a short time before the British soldiers reached that place, on their retreat from Concord. These two discharged their muskets upon the regulars from the entry, and secreted themselves under the cellar stairs, till the enemy had passed by, though a considerable number of them entered the house and made diligent search for their annoyers.

He enlisted from Natick into the eight months service on 24 April 1775, in Capt. Joseph Morse’s company in Col. John Paterson’s regiment. He is listed on the 1 August 1775 muster roll, on an October 1775 return and on a 30 October 1775 ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money’.

On 20 December 1776, he was drafted (along with his father Caesar) into Capt. Sabin Mann’s company of Medfield militia ‘to reinforce Continental Army at or near New York’. For this service he was paid £15 by the Selectmen.

On 29 September 1777 he marched on a secret expedition to Rhode Island, in Capt. Daniel Eame’s company in Col. Benjamin Haws’ regiment. This service lasted 1 month and 3 days.

He enlisted on 10 March 1781 into Capt. Staples Chamberlain’s company in Col. Dean’s regiment. The ‘company marched to Rhode Island by order of His Excellency John Hancock ... on a 40 days expedition’. He was discharged on 14 March 1781, for a service of eight days (travel included). On 9 April 1781 he was paid a bounty ‘by a committee of the town of Natick to serve in the Continental Army’.

The historian Biglow stated that John was a pensioner but this could not be independently verified.

He married Mary Graves in Natick on 6 May 1779.

Thomas Ferrit was born circa 1751. He was undoubtedly the son of Caesar and Naomi Ferrit.

He served on the Lexington Alarm from the 4th Parish of Dedham, in Capt. Ebenezer Battle’s company, for two days. This unit served at Battle Road.

In Dedham, Thomas Ferrit published his intentions on 18 April 1777 to marry Lydia Fagins of Natick. They were married in Natick on 8 May 1777. He undoubtedly married second in Boston to Susannah Patten on 4 November 1788.
Pompey Fisk was described as ‘colored’.¹

He joined the eight month’s service on 17 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Oliver Parker, in Col. William Prescott’s regiment.² This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt.

On 31 October 1775, he was in Capt. Ephraim Corey’s company in receipt of an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money’.³ On 1 December 1775, he reenlisted serving in Capt. James Perry’s company, in Col. Paul Dudley Sargent’s regiment. On 3 January 1776, he received a ‘firelock’.⁴

Cato was born circa 1756.¹

He enlisted in the eight months' service from Andover in May 1775 in Capt. Benjamin Farnum’s company, in Col. James Frye’s regiment.² His name appears on a 26 June 1775 receipt for advance pay as Cato and that name remains on the 6 October 1775 company return 'dated Cambridge' in which he is 'reported a negro'.³ However, by the 13 November 1775 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Cambridge' he had changed his name to Cato Liberty.⁴

There is no record of 1776 or 1777 service.

By 1778 he was in Capt. Samuel Johnson’s company in the Essex county militia. From this unit he transferred into the Continental Army on 17 February 1778, enlisting from and residing in Andover. His enlistment was to expire on 1 January 1780.⁵

His name next appears as Cato Freeman on a return ‘of recruits sent by State of Massachusetts as a portion of her quota of the Continental Army subsequent to Jan. 1, 1781, who were reported unfit for duty’⁶:

Caesar Frye was the ‘Negro servant’ of Col. James Frye of Andover (MA).¹

He ‘was with [Col. Frye] at Bunker Hill’, probably serving as the Colonel’s waiter.² There is no record of any kind listing him in the service.

The 1790 census of Andover lists him as head in a household of three free people of color.³

‘He lived last down in the Moose country, ... near the Shawshin and where it is crossed by a bridge called Boise’s Bridge from a negro Boise about whom I could glean no more’.⁴

Caesar Frye died 12 September 1820 at Andover.⁵

Ezra Fuller was born circa 1757 at Lynn, Massachusetts. He joined the eight months' service in the company of Capt. Ezra Town, in Col. James Reed's 3rd New Hampshire regiment of foot. The descriptive roll of the company lists him as follows:

- Stature: 5 ft 8 in.
- Complexion: black
- Eyes: black
- Occupation: farmer
- Birthplace: Lynn
- Residence: New Ipswich
- Enlisted: April 23, 1775

On 29 June 1775 he was transferred and promoted (a possible sign of respected battle service). He became a matross in Col. Richard Gridley's artillery regiment, in Col. Edward Burbeck's company. He served in this company until 27 September 1775 when a man named Florence Crowley was 'reported as serving in place of Ezra Fuller, who was discharged on account of sickness'.

Cato, a slave ‘belonging to Dea. Green’ and son of Simon, was baptized on 11 August 1751 in Stoneham (MA).¹

'At the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed’s Hill) a slave of Lieutenant Thomas Grosvenor of Pomfret fought beside his owner against the British. This action was incorporated into the painting John Trumbull made of that battle.'

In the 1790 Census of Pomfret, Thomas Grosvenor lists in his household one free non-white person and two slaves.

The vital records of Pomfret mention a man named Asaba, a ‘negro’, who had a son James Peter who was a slave in the Grosvenor household in 1794 at which time he was freed on his 25th birthday. Asaba is most probably the slave who stood by his master at Bunker Hill and who was the free man of color living in the Grosvenor household in 1790.

1 WHIT, 27. Many sources name this man as Peter Salem but there is no known linkage between the two men. AMHP, 36 states that the painting resides at the Yale University Art Gallery, New Haven (CT), in The Mabel Brady Garvan Collection. 'The Battle of Bunker's Hill, painted in London, records an event Trumbull had watched through field glasses while with his regiment at Roxbury.' The oil painting was memorialized in a stamp issued on by the U.S. Post Office.

Blaney Grusha was at one time owned by Col. Micah Stone of Framingham (MA). He was ‘named in the tax list of 1757’. The records list him also as Blinney Gerusha, Brinney Gerusha, Brinney Grusha and Brin.

He enlisted from Framingham, Massachusetts on 4 May 1775 into the company commanded by Capt. Thomas Drury, in Col. John Nixon’s 5th Massachusetts Regiment. Twelve days before the Battle of Bunker Hill he, with others in his company, signed a petition to Gen. Artemus Ward stating that they had enlisted to serve in Col. Nixon’s regiment, but had been shifted to Col. [Thomas] Gardner’s regiment, and requesting that they might be permitted to continue in Col. Nixon’s regiment. Their protest was evidently heard since we find him listed on the 1 August 1775 roll as still being in Drury’s company, in Nixon’s regiment. Temple in his respected history of Framingham stated that Blaney ‘was in the Battle of Bunker Hill’. Since Temple was privy to personal records that seem to no longer exist, his authority for Blaney’s involvement in the battle is accepted.

He is listed on a company return dated Winter Hill (one of a series of Patriot fortifications surrounding Boston in the area now called Somerville) on 30 September 1775. The last service record is an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money’, also dated Winter Hill on 23 December 1775.

He died on 7 February 1820 in Framingham.
Jude Hall was born circa 1747 in Exeter (NH). ‘He was a powerful man and could lift a barrel of cider and drink from the bunghole’. It was said ‘that the parts of his ribs which are usually cartilaginous were of solid bone, so that his vital organs were enclosed in a sort of osseous case’. A newspaper article provides more details of his life:

Slaves were kept, in pre-Revolution times, on the old Blake homestead where the writer was born in 1840 and the story of one slave in particular is preserved in the family traditions even after the days of the Revolution. This slave was old Jude Hall, and I remember the feeling of childish awe and wonder when the spot was shown me, in the old garden, behind the “bee-hives” where the little pickaninnies who had died were buried perhaps a hundred years before. Jude, himself, was sold by my ancestor, Philemon Blake, to a townsman, Nathaniel Healey, before the Revolution. He was not “old” Jude then and resented being sold and ran away from his new master. When the War of the Revolution broke out, he enlisted and fought on the Colonial side. After the war ended and the slaves were automatically freed, he came back to this vicinity, built a cabin in the Exeter woods, settled there and raised a family. I do not, of course, remember Jude, but I distinctly recall seeing one of his sons, who lived in or near Exeter for years. He was George Hall and I remember the impression made on my youthful mind by his enormous nose, that was so flattened out as to seem to cover half his face.

He enlisted on 10 May 1775 into Capt. Jacob Hinds company, in Col. James Reed’s regiment. With his company he was at the Battle of Bunker Hill where he ‘was thrown headlong by a cannon ball striking near him’. On 4 October 1775 he received four dollars for a ‘regimental coat’.

In 1776, he was in the same unit. He never mentioned any engagements in which he served but we can assume that he was at Ticonderoga with his company and even possibly at Trenton.

In April 1777 he enlisted from Kensington, out of the 3rd NH regiment of militia, into the company of Capt. Elijah Clayes in Col. Nathan Hale’s 2nd NH Continental regiment. This service was for three years. His regiment suffered heavy casualties at the Battle of Hubbardton (VT), on 7 July 1777, where his Colonel was captured. It also served at both battles at Saratoga in the fall of 1777, under Col. George Reid. A ‘Size Roll of Absentees’ describes him as a ‘Negro’ from Kensington and as follows:

- complexion: black
- hair: black
- eyes: black
- left at: Albany

His regiment also served at Valley Forge, at the Battle of Monmouth on 28 June 1778 and on Sullivan's Expedition against the Iroquois in the summer of 1779. In December 1779 he reenlisted into Capt. William Rowell's company in the 2nd NH regiment of Col. George Reid, for a term 'during the war'. He served in 1780 and was listed on a February 1781 return. He was discharged in 1783.

Local tradition gives us these stories:

... in one battle [he] stood behind a tree and escaped unhurt. He said that he cut the tree down the next day and obtained a basinful of bullets.

One Sunday morning, as he found a man washing out his cider-barrels at the brook, the man, who seemed ashamed of his Sabbath-breaking, said that he looked every way to see if any one was coming, when Jude replied with his characteristic shrewdness, "Brother, did you look above?"

He 'lived in a small house near Jude's Pond [named after him] on the old road to Exeter'. 'He was the chief witness of the government in the trial of John Blaisdell for the homicide of John Wadleigh'.

The 1790 census of Exeter lists him as head in a household of five free people of color.

A statement by Jude Hall's son-in-law gives the sad details of the enslavement of Jude's three sons:

AFFIDAVIT OF ROBERT ROBERTS, OF BOSTON.

An account of the kidnapping of James Hall, son of Jude Hall, Exeter, New Hampshire:

JAMES HALL was born in Exeter, New Hampshire, and at the age of eighteen years, was kidnapped by a man named David Wedgewood of Exeter, but now resides at Greenland [NH]. By him (D.W.) he was taken, tied and carried to Newburyport jail, and the next morning was put on board of a vessel bound for New Orleans, and sold as a slave. The Captain of the vessel's name was Isaac Stone. The vessel belonged to Johnston & ______, of Newburyport. He was taken from his father's house at Exeter, in the absence of his father, by D.W., who said that he owed him four dollars. His mother said that he was a minor, and forbid him from taking him. Regardless to what she said, he bound and carried him to Newburyport. He was seen, not long since, at New Orleans, by George Ashton, a colored man, from Exeter; he said he was chained up in the calaboose or jail, at New Orleans, as a run-away; and, in the mean time, his master (a Frenchman from Kentucky) came, and commanded him to be punished severely, and carried him back.

His father was born at Exeter, (N.H.) and was a soldier during the old revolutionary war, under General Poor. His mother was granddaughter of Esquire Rollins, of Stratham. She is now living and will testify to all that is written here concerning her son, and more if wished.

AARON, another son of Jude Hall, in 1807, was kidnapped by some villain at Providence, Rhode Island, and has not been heard of since. At first, he went from this city to Providence, in order to get ready for sea; he went into a clothing store, and gave a due bill for a suit of sea clothes, which was twenty dollars; and, being unable to read or write, he made his cross for $200 instead of 20. And when he returned from sea, he started from Providence to carry his money to his father, and was overtaken at Roxbury (Mass.), on his way home, and carried back, sent to sea, and has not been heard of since.

WILLIAM, a third son, went to sea in the barque Hannibal, of Newburyport. After arriving at the West Indies, was sold there as a slave; and, after remaining in slavery ten years, by some means run away, and is now in England, a captain of a collier from Newcastle to London. About three years ago, his mother heard of him, the first time for upwards of twenty years. His father was a pensioner of the United States.

Pero Hall was born circa 1720, making him the oldest soldier in this study.¹

He joined the eight month’s service from Newbury on 17 May 1775, in the company of Capt. Jonathan Evans, in Col. James Frye’s regiment. This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt. His own service there is confirmed due to a return of articles lost in the Battle.² He also is listed on a 28 June 1775 receipt for advanced pay³ and in an order for a bounty coat on 13 November 1775.⁴

There is no record of 1776 service.

On 24 August 1777 he enlisted into the company of Capt. John Noyes, in Col. Samuel Johnson’s regiment. This unit served in the Northern Department and participated in the second Battle of Saratoga. He was discharged on 30 November 1777 and allowed pay for 240 miles travel home. Once home, he served a short four-month stint at Winter Hill (Somerville MA) in Capt. Caleb Kimball’s company.⁵

On 1 June 1778, he enlisted for service in the Hudson Highlands, in the company of Capt. Stephen Jenkins in Col. Thomas Poor’s regiment. After its arrival at Peekskill (NY), the unit marched to Fort Clinton (NY) and served there until September 1778. The winter of 1778-1779 was served at King’s Ferry (NY). Hall was discharged 16 February 1779 and was allowed 260 miles travel home.

In 1779 a call went out in Essex County for men to join the Continental Army for nine months. Hall entered the service on 22 July 1779 in Capt. Hunt’s company, was mustered at Boxford (MA) on 8 December 1779 and discharged on 22 April 1780. A descriptive list states⁶:

- age: 59
- stature: 5 ft. 4 in.
- complexion: black
- engaged for: Newbury

In late 1780 another call went out in Essex County for men to join the Continental Army. Hall was engaged on 30 January 1781 for a term of three years or during the war. He received a bounty on 20 September 1781.⁷

He married Catherine Small of Ipswich on 14 August 1746 in Newbury (MA).⁸

Cato Hart was born circa 1752 and honorably served his country for eight years, one of a select group of men to do so. His is the longest service of any man of color in this study.

He enlisted on 4 May 1775 from Framingham in the company of Capt. Thomas Drury, in Col. John Nixon’s regiment. He was stationed at Prospect Hill in July and Winter Hill in September. In 1776, he was engaged in the New York campaign in Capt. Micajah Gleason’s company, in Col. Thomas Nixon’s 4th Regiment, at North Castle (now Mt. Kisko NY) and was probably involved in the Battle of White Plains.

In 1777, he enlisted in the Continental Army in Capt. Robert Allen’s company, in Col. Ichabod Alden’s regiment. This unit served in the Saratoga Campaign.

In 1778, the regiment was ordered to protect the New York frontiers. Upon continued assaults on border families by the Iroquois in the Cherry Valley area of New York, the regiment was ordered there to protect the inhabitants. The fort at Cherry Valley was attacked on 10 November 1778 and his Colonel was killed. Major John Brooks took command. In February 1779 he was stationed at Fort Herkimer. He was still in service in 1780 but his exact whereabouts is unknown.

From February 1781 to June 1781, he was at West Point in Capt. Benjamin Warren’s company, in Col. John Brooks’ regiment. In July 1781, he was transferred to Capt. William Mills’ company at York Hutt and remained there through the end of the year. He was reported ‘sick in quarters’ in October and November 1781. By December 1781, he was ‘sick and absent’, an indication that his sickness had gotten worse. During this time Gen Benedict Arnold, commanding at West Point, defected. He was still sick in January 1781 but his health must have improved as he is listed on a descriptive roll on 20 February 1782:

| age: 30 yrs (also given as 33)   |
| stature: 5 ft. 3 in. (also given as 5 ft. 8 in. and 5 ft. 4 in.) |
| complexion: black |
| hair: black |

Upon his discharge in June 1783 at the disbandment of the Army by Gen. Washington, he was awarded a Badge of Merit ‘for faithful service’, being ‘entitled to 1 and 2 stripes’.

Temple, in his respected history, tells us a little more about him:

... His residence in 1805 was Mendon [MA]. He received a deed dated Aug. 6, 1805, of 200 acres of land, being lot No. 12, in Mars Hill near the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick, “for patriotic services rendered in the Revolutionary War.” He assigned the deed to Jona. Maynard Esq. The grant was included in the tract which was surrendered to Great Britain by the Ashburton Treaty of Aug. 20, 1842. This lot, and the other granted lots and townships included within the said surrendered territory, were recently surveyed and located, and the titles obtained in some way, by a sharp claimant, who received from the United States Government large sums of money in payment for the same."11

Jeffrey Hartwell, born circa 1751, was the slave of Joseph Fitch of Bedford (MA). A bill-of-sale, dated 6 July 1756, records the transfer of Fitch's ownership to Joseph Hartwell, also of Bedford:

Know all men by these presents that I, Joseph Fitch of Bedford in the County of Middlesex, in the Province of Massachusetts Bay, in New England, gentleman for and in consideration of the sum of £24 lawful money of New England, done, in hand paid at and before the sealing and delivery of these presents, by Joseph Hartwell of Bedford, above said yeoman, the receipt I do hereby acknowledge, have bargained and sold and by these presents do bargain and sell unto the said Joseph Hartwell a negro boy about 5 years old, called Jeffru, now living at the said Joseph Hartwells, to have and to hold the said negro boy by these presents bargained and sold unto the said Joseph Hartwell, his executors, administrators and assigns forever, and I the said Joseph Fitch for myself etc do warrant the above said Negro boy unto the said Joseph Hartwell, his heirs etc against me the said Joseph Fitch my heirs etc, all and every other person and persons whatsoever, shall and will warrant and defend by these presents of which negro boy I, the said Joseph Fitch have put the said Joseph Hartwell in full possession by delivering said negro at the sealing hereof unto the said Joseph Hartwell.

There is no record of 1775 service for Jeffrey Hartwell, as he came to be known, but the obituary of his daughter Frances gives us insight into that service:

... Her father, Jeffrey Hartwell, was in the battle of Bunker Hill, having gone on a three-months term as a substitute for his master, as he called him. Returning home, his master instead of allowing him his pay, took the money away and put it in his own pocket, upon which Jeffrey went off and enlisted until the close of the war. ...

He did indeed enlist on 29 September 1777 in Capt. Edward Framer’s company, in Col. Jonathan Reed’s regiment. This unit marched to reinforce the Northern Army and is believed to have been at Saratoga. His discharge was dated 8 November 1777.

On 16 June 1778 he reenlisted, joining Lieut. John Flint’s company, in Col. Thomas Poor’s regiment. This unit marched to White Plains to fortify the passes of the Hudson (then called North) River at the time that Gen. Washington was attacking the British at Monmouth (NJ). From June to August 1778, he was in Capt. Asa Lawrence’s company at Fort Clinton (NY). From September to December 1778, he was in the same company and regiment stationed at West Point (NY). By 1779, he was free and residing in Dracut as is evidenced by this journal entry:

4 March 1779 One Stephen Hartwell here to advise relating to a Neagro named Jeffrey Hartwell. Spent considerable time with him at his request relating to said Neagro’s freedom. He would have given me a fee. I refused to take one (in a Neagro cause).

More information is obtained from a Dracut town record:

John Varnum notified the town that he had received a laborer, a negro, who calls himself Jeffrey Freeman about twenty eight years old from Joseph Hartwell in Bedford. Jeffrey appears to be an able bodied laboring man and says he expects to earn his living at husbandry work.

The only artifacts known to exist, of any one of the soldiers in this study, are three pewter plates once owned by Jeffrey Hartwell and now in the collection of The Bostonian Society [see photograph].

Jeffrey Hartwell died in Dracut on 22 July 1816, at the age of 75. He is buried in Hamblett (formerly called Garrison House) Cemetery on Jordan Avenue in Lowell. The family plot also contains the graves of his wife, two of his sons and his two daughters.

He married Maria, once a slave, who ‘was born in the old Royal Exchange in Boston, and was sent when a child to Dracut. There she lived in the Varnum family, and on her marriage ... received for her wedding present two acres of land on which the present homestead stands’. Maria ‘was employed for many years by Joseph Butterfield Varnum’, the man who made her the bridal gift of land. This land, located at the corner of Breakneck Hill Road [now Donahue Road] and Meadow Road [now Phineas Street], was where they built a house and where [their daughters Violet and Frances] made their home in later years. Their house ‘was once burned down and rebuilt’. Maria died on 6 January 1839 at the age of 90.

Jeffrey and Maria had four sons and two daughters:

Unlike her brothers and only one sister, she spent a good deal of her life in travelling. When quite young she came to Boston and lived with some of its first families. With some of them she went to St. Petersburg, Rio Janeiro, the East Indies, France and England... | Age: N/A | Description: 'negro' | Rank: Private |
| Occupation: N/A | Status: N/A | Unit: Doolittle / A. Wilder |
| Residence: Acton, MA | Religion: N/A | Stationed: N/A |

Titus Hayward was a 'colored' soldier from Acton (MA) 'hired by Simon Tuttle'\(^1\), and was also called Titus Tuttle.

He enlisted from Acton in the eight month's service on 29 April 1775, in Capt. Abel Wilder's company in Col. Ephraim Doolittle's regiment. He is listed on a 26 June 1775 receipt for advanced pay, on the 1 August 1775 muster roll\(^2\) and on a 6 October 1775 company return.\(^3\)

On a list dated July 1776 'of men hired to perform turns of service on Crown Point expedition', he is named only as 'Titus', 'a negro'. By September 1776, he was in Capt. Adam Wheeler's company in Col. Thomas Nixon's regiment.\(^4\) Pay receipts continue for October and November 1776.\(^5\) A 9 November 1776 regimental return places him at North Castle (NY). It is highly likely that he was engaged in the Battle of White Plains (NY). He was discharged on 20 November 1776.\(^6\) By 14 December 1776, he was back home and enlisted from Concord in Capt. John Hartwell's company in Col. Nicholas Dike's Massachusetts militia regiment.\(^7\)

On February 1777 he was 'reported sick in hospital'.\(^8\) With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. From his militia unit, he joined the Continental Army on 14 March 1777 for a term of three years or during the war, in the company of Capt. Edmund Munroe in Col. Timothy Bigelow's 15th Massachusetts regiment. This unit served at Saratoga and at Valley Forge. On a 14 December 1777 pay account he is 'reported deceased', most probably at Valley Forge.\(^9\)

It is probably his son Titus who filed intentions to marry Phillis Lawrence at Littleton on 13 December 1794. They eventually were married on 6 January 1797.\(^{10}\)

Jeffrey Hemenway was born circa 1737. He was a foster child of Ebenezer Hemenway Jr. of Framingham.

During 1761 and 1762, the closing years of the French and Indian War, he served in Capt. John Nixon's company.

He marched on the Lexington Alarm on 19 April 1775 'to Concord and Cambridge' as a minute man in Capt. Simon Edgell's company, serving for four days. On 24 April 1775 he enlisted from Framingham into the eight months' service in Capt. Thomas Drury's company in Col. John Nixon's regiment. His name appears on a 20 June 1775 receipt for advance pay dated Cambridge, on the 1 August 1775 muster roll and on a 30 September 1775 company return dated Winter Hill. The obituary of a granddaughter claims that he fought at Bunker Hill.

In September 1776 he enlisted in Capt. Micajah Gleason's company in Lt. Col. Thomas Nixon's regiment, serving in the New York campaign. His unit served at the Battle of White Plains where his Captain was killed. By November he was stationed at North Castle (NY). His last pay receipt was dated Peekskill (NY) on 27 December 1776.

There is no record of 1777 service. He removed to Worcester in 1778, where he 'bought a small place on ... May street'.

On 1 April 1778 he enlisted in Capt. Ebenezzer Belknap's company in Col. Nathaniel Wade's regiment. His name appears on a 15 July 1778 roll dated North Kingston (RI), at which time he reenlisted in the same unit which later fought at the Battle of Rhode Island. By the end of 1778 he was stationed at North Kingston and then at East Greenwich (RI), where he was discharged on 1 January 1779.

On 26 October 1779 he enlisted in the Worcester County militia in Capt. Francis Wilson's company in Col. Samuel Denny's regiment. His unit was sent to Claverack (NY) to reinforce the Continental Army. He was discharged on 23 November 1779.
In 1780 another call went out for reinforcements for the Continental Army. He joined the company of Capt. Benjamin Warren, marching to camp at Springfield (MA) on 20 July 1780 where a descriptive roll was taken14:

- age: 40
- stature: 5 ft. 4 in.
- complexion: negro
- eyes: black
- engaged for: Worcester

On the same date as this roll he enlisted in Capt. Lt. Peter Clayes’ company in Col. Thomas Nixon’s 6th regiment.15 From August to December he served in Capt. Lt. Benjamin Pike’s company. On 25 October 1780 he was stationed at Camp Totoway (NJ).16 He served until 19 December 1780.17

On 20 August 1781 he marched from his home in Worcester in Capt. John Cutler’s company in Col. Luke Drury’s regiment. His company joined their regiment at West Point on 28 August 1781. He was discharged on 28 November 1781, having served a term of three months.18

The 1790 census of Worcester lists him as head in a household of five free people of color.19

‘His will was dated [Worcester] May 20, 1809, proved Sept. 7, 1819, bequeathed to wife Hepsibah and children ...’ his meager estate.20 He applied for a U.S. Pension on 14 April 1818, stating his age as 81 and his length of service as 2 1/2 years.21 The pension was awarded for $96.00 per year.22 A deponent described him as ‘a person of colour’.23

He died on in Worcester on 15 August 1819, at the age of 82, and is buried at Hope Cemetery in Worcester.24

He married first Susanna Wright26, and they had two children:

1. Thaddeus b. 22 February 176127
2. Susanna b. 15 January 176828

Mother and daughter died ‘in a small pox epidemic’.29

He filed intentions to marry Hepsibeth Crosman on 13 December 1788 in Worcester.30 He married second the same Hepsibeth Bowman/Crosman31, on 3 November 1792 in Worcester.32 She applied

Prince Hull was born circa 1750.\(^1\)

He joined the eight month's service from Pittsfield (MA) on 15 May 1775, in the company of Capt. Oliver Parker in Col. William Prescott's regiment. This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt. He was listed on the 1 August 1775 muster roll and on the 7 October 1775 company return. On 31 October 1775, he was in Capt. Ephraim Corey's company in receipt of an 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Cambridge'.\(^2\)

On 1 January 1776, he reenlisted serving in Capt. James Perry's company, in Col. Paul Dudley Sargent's regiment, for three months. He was 'reported deserted' on 19 April 1776. At this point his name drops off the Massachusetts rolls.\(^3\)

His 28 March 1818 application for a U.S. Pension expands the knowledge of his service:

> that he first enlisted in April AD 1775 for eight months in Capt [Oliver] Parker's company & Col° [William] Prescott's Reg° of Mass\(^b\) troops & served through that campaign, was engaged in the Battle of Bunker Hill & at the expiration of his eight months viz in December 1775 he enlisted for one year at Cambridge in the Con't line, in Capt [William] Hull's company & Co° [Charles] Webb's Regt & at the expiration thereof he was enlisted again at Fishkill N. York for three years by Lieut. Smith but on account of sickness he did not join any Regt & does not now recollect to what one he belonged -- that in consequence of his sickness he was about six months afterwards discharged from the service. In August 1777 he again enlisted into Capt [Jonathan] Wadsworth's company & Col [Thaddeus] Cook's Regt for three months & was wounded at the battle of Saratoga & having faithfully served out his time was honorably discharged ...\(^4\)

Prince was probably wounded in the first Battle of Saratoga on 19 September 1777, as his Captain was killed in that engagement.

The 1790 census of Hartford lists him as head in a household of three free people of color.\(^5\)

On 26 August 1820, he had to reapply for his pension in order to prove need:

I am by occupation a laborer but unable to labor by reason of infirmity. I have a daughter who keeps my house ... I must be carried to the poor house of the town of Hartford.6

He was able to retain his pension of $96.00 a year.7

It was probably he who married Tryphosa Limbo, ‘free negro’ of Glastonbury (CT), at Middletown (CT) on 17 July 1794.8

He had one daughter, undoubtedly also the child of Tryphosa:

James Huzzey was born circa 1747. He probably lived on Cape Cod before the war.

He enlisted in the eight months' service from New Marlborough (MA) on 8 June 1775 in Capt. Moses Harvey's company, in Col. Jonathan Brewer's regiment. His widow stated that he 'was at the Bunker hill Battle'. On 24 June 1775 his name appeared on an order 'for cartridge boxes' dated Cambridge. He was listed on the 1 August muster roll, on the October 1775 company return and on a 26 October 1775 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money' dated Cambridge. His wife stated that 'he served two terms of service as a substitute for the sons of his master ... being at that time a slave'.

There is no record of 1776 to 1780 service.

He enlisted from Conway (MA) on 30 March 1781 into the Continental Army for three years, in Capt. Jeremiah Miller's company in Col. Joseph Vose's 1st regiment. A descriptive list of men raised in Hampshire county shows him as:

| age: 34 |
| stature: 5 ft. 7 in. |
| complexion: black |
| hair: black |

On 19 April 1775 a receipt for bounty paid to him by the selectmen of Conway (MA) was certified. Various rolls describe his service through the years of 1781 and 1782:

His wife stated that he ‘was gone most of the time during the war returning occasionally in the winter season & staying a short time at the close of the war’. He was honorably discharged in 1783 but his discharge was lost when his ‘house burnt’. After the war they remained in Upton (MA) for about a year, then moved to Northbridge (MA) for a year, then to Leicester (MA) for two years, then to Warwick (MA) for almost three years, then to Westmoreland (NH) ‘for a number of years’ and then finally to Vermont.

He applied for a U.S. Pension on 9 April 1818 when he verified that he served under Capt. Moses Harvey and stated that he was ‘between eighty and ninety years of age - very infirm - wholly destitute of property’. His pension was approved for $96.00 per year. He reapplied on 19 July 1820 when he listed his occupation as ‘laborer’ and stated that he was ‘dependent on the town and private charity for support’ and that his ‘wife Susannah is not healthy’.

James Huzzey died in Townshend (VT) on 11 March 1822 at the approximate age of 75.

His wife reapplied for the pension on 31 August 1837 and continued to receive it at the rate of $80.00 per year, seemingly for the rest of her life. On 28 March 1855, while a resident of Shaftsbury (VT) and at the age of 104, she applied for and was granted bounty land.

He married Susannah Tobey on 20 January 1776, probably in Barnstable (MA). They had at least one child:

Jamaica James was born circa 1754.¹

His name does not appear in the 1775 rolls, nor does he mention his 1775 unit in his pension application, yet he was at the Battle of Bunker Hill as was described by one of his 1782 officers²:

Jamaica James showed me the wound of a Ball in the left arm which he received at Bunker Hill 1775 but he has lost much of his recollection.

Jamaica James applied for his pension at Orange county (NY) on 4 February 1819, being described as a 'blackman aged sixty two years'. He further stated³:

that he ... Enlisted, in the year 1777 ... in the Town of Boston in the Company Commanded by Captain Lunts in the tenth Massachusetts Regiment Commanded by Colonel Tupper and that he continued to Serve in the said Company and Reg't for ... the Term of three years, and at the expiration of the three years aforesaid, he then Enlisted in the same Company and in the Same Regiment Commanded by Colonel Tupper — for and during the Revolutionary War — and he continued to Serve as aforesaid untill the Month of June 1783, when peace was made with Great Britain when he was Honorably discharged by General Washington at the Cantonment near New Windsor near Newburgh ... that he was in the battle at Trenton in the year 1776 in Dec. when General Washington Captured the Hessians — and that he is in reduced Circumstances and Stands in need of Assistance of his Country for Support ... I was at the taking and Capture of General Burgoine & his army & went to Guard the prisoners to Boston.

The pension was awarded at the rate of $96 per year. He reapplied for his pension on 31 May 1820, then 'sixty seven years' and still residing at Orange county. He further stated⁴:

when the 10 Regt was broken up or reduced I was transferred into Capt Marshalls company Colonel Voses Reg't it being the 1st Massachusetts Reg't ...

Charles Jarvis was born circa 1752.¹

He enlisted in the eight months' service from Newbury on 8 June 1775 in Capt. Benjamin Perkin's company, in Col. Moses Little's regiment. He is listed on the 1 August 1775 muster roll and on an October 1775 company return as:

age: 36

He is also listed on a 27 December 1775 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money'.²

There is no record of 1776 service.

In 1777, he served from Newburyport in the 2d Essex County regiment of militia. With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. Transferring out of his militia unit, he joined the Continental Army on 15 February 1777 for a three-year term in Capt. Moses Greenleaf's company in Col. Ebenezer Francis' company. His company served at the Battle of Hubbardton (VT), on 7 July 1777, where his Colonel was killed. His regiment, under Col. Benjamin Tupper, also served at Saratoga. A 25 January 1778 return reports him 'on command at Albany'.³ Tupper's regiment also served at Valley Forge and at Monmouth⁴. Pay accounts show him serving from 1 January 1780 to 31 December 1780.⁵ There was some confusion in the rolls⁶:

James, Charles. Certificate dated West Point Aug. 31, 1779, signed by Maj. James Pettengill, certifying that Paul Coffin, a soldier in Col. Wesson's regt., was in service before Aug. 15, 1777, but was left out of the roll through a mistake, said James being put in his place, that said James was transferred to Capt. Greenlief's (Greenleaf's) co., Col. Tupper's regt, and was made up in both companies; therefore said Coffin was entitled to $100 gratuity in lieu of said James; also, Private, Capt. Joseph Pettengill's co., Col. James Wesson's regt.; company return [year not given]; reported a transient. [See Charles Jarvis.]

On 10 January 1780 he engaged 'for the war' and his name appears on the descriptive list of the 10th Massachusetts regiment in Capt. Nehemiah Emerson's company⁷:

age: 27
stature: 5 ft. 8 in.
complexion: black
hair: black
residence: Newburyport engaged: November 1779 by Lieut. Col. Littlefield

¹ BD-R Age 27 in January 1780 would indicate a birth year of 1752, but the 1775 descriptive roll lists him as age 36. The later, more complete, description is used. NOTE: There is a very good chance that this man is the same man as Jamaica James.

Prince Johonnot was born in Boston on 6 July 1749.\textsuperscript{1}

He was a minute man in Methuen in 1774, in the company of Capt. John Davis\textsuperscript{2} and was formally enlisted on 14 February 1775\textsuperscript{3}. In his own words he described his training:

Caesar Jones was the ‘Negro servant’ of 2nd Lt. Timothy Jones of Bedford (MA). He was ‘freed before the Revolution and served in the war, doing duty in every campaign from the 19th of April to the end of the conflict’. Lt. Jones, in Capt. Jonathan Wilson’s Bedford Minute Man company, became second in command after his Captain was killed on Battle Road. Caesar, if present, would have been a volunteer attached to this company (his name is not listed in the official military records for 1775). A town history gives more detail:

Family tradition has proved that Caesar, a freed slave, went to Concord with his master on the morning of April 19 and stayed with him until he returned home. Although a freed man, Caesar was not a free man, and he entered the service after the battles at Concord with the approval of his master. His name appears on the Bedford treasurer’s lists for the years of the war for receipt of grain and money as “bounty”, or extra pay allowed by the Town of Bedford for enlistment.

No known military records list him from 1775 to 1781. On 1 May 1782, he did indeed enlist ‘to serve in the Continental Army for the term of three years’, as a Private in Col. Benjamin Tupper’s 10th regiment. Probably due to the disbandment of the armed forces after the War, he only served a term of eight months. He received a bounty from Bedford on 11 May 1782 for his enlistment. Town records show this bounty to be sixty pounds. He signed by an “X” mark with the note ‘A free negro’ appended.

He is buried in the northeast corner of the Old Burial Grounds on Springs Road in Bedford. A stone monument marks the spot:

1 BED2, 231. There is some disagreement on these points: BED1, 31 states that there ‘is no evidence that any of the slaves of this town were permitted to accompany their masters to Concord on April 19, 1775’. Therefore the proof level has been set at ‘?’ rather than ‘+’.

Plato Lambert was born in Framingham, Massachusetts on 1 December 1737. He 'was taken when an infant by Mrs. Martha Nichols of [Framingham]'. He later became 'the slave of Joseph and Hannah Taylor, who lived on the farm now occupied by Mr. Fairchild, on Pond street [and] was given his freedom by those people ... [he] was a man of gigantic stature'.

He joined the eight month's service on 1 May 1775 in the company of Capt. James Mellen, in Col. Jonathan Ward's regiment. On 23 May 1775, he was chosen to serve on picket guard under Major [Loammi] Baldwin and Captain Reuben Dickinson. On 18 June 1775, one day after the Battle of Bunker Hill, he was listed on an order 'for cartridge boxes to be delivered said Lomboard and others belonging to Capt. James Mellen's co'. This is a strong indication of participation in the Battle. On 26 December 1775, he was listed in an 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Dorchester'.

'After the Revolution, he used to roam around the country, accompanied by a large dog. Very soon they disappeared. In 1810, while constructing a road near Lake Cochituate, the workmen found the skeleton of a large man, and near by, the remains of a dog. From the double teeth, and the size of the frame, it was supposed to belong to Plato Lambert, who was probably murdered and buried there'.

David Lamson was probably born circa 1740. In the French and Indian Wars he served as a Private from Cambridge. In 1767 he lived in Medford (MA) and 'came to live at house of P. Tufts Jr.' The next year he was warned-out. By 1769 he was in Reading and described as a 'young man'. At some time after that he moved to Menotomy (also called West Cambridge and later Arlington), where he was on 19 April 1775:

Lord Percy’s reinforcement had been delayed for a little time at Brighton bridge, the planks of which had been taken up by the direction of the Committee of safety. But, unfortunately, they were simply piled up on the Cambridge side, and it was the work of but a few moments to replace them sufficiently to allow the troops to pass. When, however, a convoy of provisions and supplies in charge of a sergeant’s guard, following in the rear of the main body, came to the bridge, they could not cross so easily; and, in the delay incident to making it passable by the heavy wagons, and misled by false direction as to the road, they became so far separated from the troops that they could receive no protection from them. Meantime an express was sent post-haste from Old Cambridge to Menotomy, bearing the information that these supplies were on the way. Several of our men met at once in Cooper’s tavern ... to form some plan for capturing them. They were of the exempts, or alarm list as it was called, all old men ... in all about twelve. They chose for their leader David Lamson, a mulatto, who had served in the war, a man of undoubted bravery and determination. They took their position ... behind a bank wall of earth and stones ... The convoy soon made its appearance. As it came between them and the meeting-house of the First Parish, Lamson ordered his men to rise and aim directly at the horses, and called out to them to surrender. No reply was made, but the drivers whipped up their teams. Lamson’s men then fired, killing several of the horses, and, according to some accounts, killing two of the men and wounding others. One of the bullets passed through the front door of the church. The frightened drivers leaped from their places, and with the guards, ran directly to the shore of Spy Pond, into which they threw their guns ...

On 7 May 1775 Simon Tufts, a Loyalist, listed the names of thirty men who ‘made Solemn Oath that they were personally present with their Guns within about Ten Rods of the Carts yt. were filled wth. Stores for the King’s Troops, when they were first Fired upon near Menotomy Meeting on the 19th day of April last …’. On this list of names is ‘David Lampson’.

It was undoubtedly the same man who joined Capt. William Adam’s company in Col. Thatcher’s regiment for five days, marching ‘at request of Gen. Washington at the time of taking Dorchester Heights March 4, 1776’. Later that year he had enlisted from Lexington in Capt. Simon Hunt’s company in Col. John Brooks’ regiment, serving at Rye [NY] where he was ‘reported sick’. Once again, it is undoubtedly the same man who enlisted from Cambridge in Capt. Stephen Dana’s company in Col. Josiah Whitney’s regiment, serving at South Kingston (RI) for two months and five days from his arrival on 17 May 1777. With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New 1 He would have had to be 16 or older in order to serve in the French and Indian Wars (1756-1763). However, to be called a 'young man' in 1769 (see CHAR 539), he would probably not have been older than 29. The compromise birthdate is 1740.

Cornelius Lenox was born circa 1754.¹

He joined the eight month’s service from Woburn on 24 May 1775 in the company of Capt. John Wood, in Col. Samuel Gerrish’s regiment.² Just three days later, he was administered the oath ‘required by Congress to be taken by the Massachusetts army.’³ He was listed on the return of sick and absent on 10 August 1775 at Medford⁴ and on a pay abstract for September 1775 at Chelsea⁵. On the October 1775 return he is ‘reported a mulatto’.⁶ He declined to serve in 1776 and also declined on 28 December 1775 to receive a bounty coat, opting for the money instead.⁷

In 1776, he served from Lexington in the New York Campaign in Capt. Simon Hunt’s company, in Col. Eleazer Brooks’ regiment, and ‘lost articles in battle’ at White Plains.⁸

There is no record of 1777 service.

In the summer of 1778, he served in the Rhode Island expedition under Capt. John Dix, in Col. William McIntosh’s regiment and Gen. Solomon Lovell’s Brigade.⁹

From 1779 to 1781, he served in many successive three-month engagements as a guard in and about Boston under Capt. (and then Maj.) Nathaniel Heath. At the time of his discharge in March 1781, he was a guard in Watertown under Sgt. Samuel Richards.¹⁰ He was still in Watertown on 13 July 1781 when he received wages as a guard, still under Sgt. Richards.¹¹ He served in total approximately five years.

He was ‘from Boston, [and] settled about 1783 [in Newton (MA)], on the bank of Charles River, near the Watertown line’.¹² The 1790 census of Newton lists him as head in a household of seven free people of color.¹³

He was married in Boston on 4 April 1780 to Susannah Toney.¹⁴

Barzillai Lew was born in Groton (MA) on 5 November 1743, the son of Primus and Margaret Lew. His father moved the family from Groton to Dracut when Barzillai was about two years old. Barzillai (pronounced bar-zeal-ya) grew to be “big and strong with an extraordinary talent as a musician”.

For thirty-eight weeks in 1760 he served in Capt. Thomas Farrington’s company in the French and Indian War. ‘After the death of his stepmother in 1763, Barzillai Lew of Groton chose Francis Blood of Concord, Massachusetts, as his guardian. According to the town records of Chelmsford, Barzillai lived there from 1772 to 1776. He was on the Chelmsford tax list in 1775.’ Just before the Revolutionary War started, he ‘was living in that part of Lowell now known as Pawtucketville ... and ‘was a free man ... always called “Zeal”’. He ‘lived on what is now called Totman Street ... for nearly a century known as “the Old Zeal Road” ... where he owned a farm’.

He enlisted in the eight months’ service from Chelmsford on 6 May 1775, in Capt. John Ford’s company in Col. Ebenezer Bridge’s 27th regiment. A 15 June 1775 descriptive roll lists him as a ‘negro’ and as:

- age: 30
- stature: 6 ft.
- occupation: cooper
- rank: fifer

Nell stated that he was ‘at the battle of Bunker Hill’. His name appears on the 1 August 1775 muster roll and on a 25 September 1775 company return.

He remained in Capt. John Ford’s company from 5 February 1776 to 1 April 1776. As the American attack on Canada crumbled, the call went out for reinforcements for the Northern Department. He responded by reenlisting in Capt. Ford’s company, which marched from Chelmsford on 25 July 1776. His name appears on a 28 August 1776 receipt for mileage and a 1 October 1776 receipt for wages, both ‘dated Ticonderoga’. His unit served at Ticonderoga during the time of the defeat of the American fleet on Lake Champlain under Gen. Benedict Arnold. With the British threat over for the season, most of the Americans were discharged. His discharge was at Albany on 1 January 1777.
He engaged on 3 November 1777 as a Fifer with Capt. Joseph Bradley Varnum's Dracut company of volunteers. They marched from home the next day but were discharged on 7 November 1777 after having traveled 40 miles.

The 1790 census of Dracut lists him as head in a household of fourteen free people of color.\(^{11}\)

He died 18 January 1822 in Dracut\(^{12}\), at the age of 78. He is buried in the Clay Pit Cemetery in Lowell.\(^{13}\)

He married Dinah Bowman.\(^{14}\) He had purchased her, circa 1767 for $400\(^{15}\), from Maj. Abraham Blood. She 'was a mulatto and almost white'.\(^{16}\) Their children 'all possessed a natural talent for music, and most of them could play any kind of wind or stringed instrument -- the girls as well as the boys. They formed a complete band, and furnished music on all first-class occasions in this vicinity, and were called frequently to Boston and even as far away as Portland [ME].'\(^{17}\) The thirteen children of Barzillai and Dinah were:

Charles Lines, sometimes called Charlestown Lyndes, was born circa 1747.¹

He joined the eight month’s service from Malden on 23 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Edward Blake, in Col. Jonathan Brewer’s regiment.² This unit served at the Battle of Bunker Hill on the diagonal line between the redoubt and the breastwork. He was listed on an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Cambridge Camp’ on 25 October 1775, in Capt. Aaron Haynes’ company.³

There is no record of 1776 service.

On 20 February 1777, he enlisted from Malden⁴ for three years in the Continental Army in Capt. Robert Allen’s company, in Col. Ichabod Alden’s regiment.⁵ This unit served in the Saratoga campaign and also at the Massacre at Cherry Valley (NY), where his Colonel was killed.

From 1 January 1780 to 31 December 1780, he served in Capt. Jacob Wales’ company, in Col. Thomas Marshall’s 10th regiment. He is ‘reported a negro’ and listed on a descriptive roll at West Point on 12 February 1780⁶:

- age: 33 yrs. (also given as 23)
- stature: 4 ft. 9 in. (also given as 5 ft. 4 in.)
- complexion: black
- hair: black
- residence: Charlestown (also given as Charlton)

By 1 January 1781, he had transferred to Capt. Jonathan Turner’s company, in the 10th Massachusetts now under Col. Benjamin Tupper. He died in the service, probably at West Point and probably of smallpox, on 29 March 1781.⁷

The respected Lancaster (MA) historian Nourse describes Eden London as ‘colored’.\(^1\) There was a London, ‘negro of Joseph Moores’, who was baptized at Chocksett Church in Lancaster on 16 June 1744\(^2\) and who is most likely the same person as the soldier described below. Due to the legal case Winchendon v. Hatfield (described below), we know that ‘in nineteen years [he] changed masters no less than eleven times, besides twice enlisting in the Continental Army’\(^3\).

He enlisted in the eight months’ service from Fitchburg (MA) on 10 May 1775, in the company of Capt. James Burt in Col. Asa Whitcomb’s regiment.\(^4\) His name appears on a 3 June 1775 order for advance pay\(^5\), on the 1 August 1775 muster roll and on the October 1775 company return\(^6\). Nourse states that he ‘fought at Bunker Hill’.\(^7\)

There is no record of 1776 service.

With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He enlisted\(^8\) from Winchendon on 7 December 1776 for three years in the Continental Army, in Capt. William Warner’s company in Col. Thomas Marshall’s 10th Massachusetts regiment. This unit fought valiantly at both Battles of Saratoga, spent the winter at Valley Forge and then fought in the stifling heat at Monmouth (NJ). From January to April 1779 he served at West Point. He was discharged on 7 December 1779.\(^9\)

The History of Winchendon describes an important legal case in which Eden London was the principle character\(^10\):

THE SLAVE CASE

It is a curious fact that the question whether chattel slave ever existed in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, was settled, in part by a case in which this town was involved as a party at law. The subject is referred to in an article which appeared in the Historical Magazine, (N.Y.) in 1866, written apparently in a spirit hostile to the fair fame of the State. A reply to this article appeared in the Boston Daily Advertiser. A concise statement of this case belongs to this period of our narrative.

On the 22d of August, 1804, the town voted "that the Selectmen should see and take care of the matter concerning the Negro, that the town of Ipswich has notified this town to take and support." No name is given, but it is supposed that the same person is referred to in the following action, taken on the 4th of the next March, (1805.) \(^{10}\) Chose Thomas Graton

Daniel Goss’s company from Lancaster (under ‘London, Edom’). These two citations undoubtedly refer to the same man but the dual registration in the militia has not yet been resolved.
10. WINC, 276-279; my deepest thanks to Priscilla Draeger, long-time researcher of Eden London, who transcribed this text and forwarded it on disk.
The facts in the case, from the evidence before the court, are, that said Edom, in the year 1757, was the proper estate of one Samuel Bond, and then by him the best counsel they can get, to final issue." At the same time a grant of $50 was made to carry on the lawsuit. The contest was now between Hatfield and Winchendon. It had first been brought before a justice of the peace in Worcester county, where the decision was in favor of Hatfield, affirming the decision of the justice. The case was tried, at the December term, 1806. It was next appealed to the Supreme Judicial Court, March term, 1808. The record of the Court of Common Pleas, as certified by the presiding justice, as follows:

The town of Winchendon, in the county of Worcester, complainants against the town of Hatfield, in the county of Hampshire, before this court of appeal from the adjudication of Hon. Dwight Foster, Esq., one of the justices of the peace for said county, setting forth in their complaint, that Edom London, a Negro man, now resident in said town of Winchendon, is poor and become chargeable to said town, and that the said town of Hatfield is the place of his lawful settlement, and praying that it may be so adjudged.

The facts in the case, from the evidence before the court, are, that said Edom, in the year 1757, was the proper estate of one Samuel Bond, and then by him sold to William Williams of Weston; that some time in the year 1760, and after the decease of the said Williams, said Edom was set off as the estate of said Williams to the wife of Oliver Partridge of Hatfield, who was the daughter of said deceased, as part of the portion in said deceased's estate, and then went to live with said Partridge, in said town of Hatfield, and continued his servant until the 2d day of October, A.D. 1767, at which time he was sold by Partridge to John M'Guster of Longmeadow, lived with him a few weeks; was then sold by said M'Guster to Joshua Holcomb, of Simsbury, Ct and lived with him about four years; then sold by Holcomb to William Bond of Lincoln, and lived with him a short time; was then sold by said Bond to Thomas Cowdin, of Fitchburg, and lived with him three or four years; was then sold by Cowdin to Jonathan Stimson of Winchendon; and the day following he absconded and enlisted in the eight months' service in Cambridge and before he expiration of the said eight months' service in the year 1775, was sold by said Stimson to Thomas Sawyer of Winchendon with whom he lived some time; then he was sold by said Sawyer to Daniel Goodridge, of the same Winchendon, in the month of July 1776 with whom he lived about five weeks; then he enlisted into the three years' service and the said Goodridge received the whole of his bounty, and part of his wages.

Such was the case before the Court of Common Pleas, which affirmed the judgment of justice Foster, and adjudged that London's settlement was not in Hatfield. It may be said here in passing, that according to tradition, Edom London had his freedom from Mr. Goodridge, on condition that he, London, should take the place of his master, in the three years' service.

The case was brought up before the Supreme Court, at Worcester in September, 1807, when Upham appeared in behalf of the plaintiffs that is, the town of Winchendon. The case was continued, and at the March term, 1808, Bigelow argued the case for this town. After hearing the arguments, the Court, Chief Justice Parsons, presiding decided as follows:

"Is it stated that the pauper was once the slave of Oliver Partridge living several years with him at Hatfield, where his master was settled. The pauper then acquired a derivative settlement in Hatfield. Afterwards his master sold him to J. Ingersoll, Esq., and inhabitant of, and settled in Westfield. There he lived several years with his new master, and then he lost his settlement in Hatfield, by gaining a new derivative settlement in Westfield, either as a slave of a freeman, it is unnecessary to pursue the case further. Having lost his settlement in Hatfield, and not having regained a new settlement there, the defendants are not liable for maintenance, and the judgment must be affirmed with costs."

The decision relieved Hatfield from the support of Eden London, and threw the costs of the suit upon Winchendon; but must Winchendon continue to support him? It was claimed by the town's counsel, Mr. Bigelow, among other things, that a slave could obtain a settlement by length of residence, and not merely derivatively from his master. It was farther claimed, that by two decisions of the Supreme Judicial Court it had been decided that slavery could not exist in this Commonwealth. In the first action referred to, involving the right of the master, which came before the Supreme Judicial Court, after the establishment of the Constitution, the judges declared, that by virtue of the first article of the declaration of rights, slavery in this State was no more. Afterwards in an action by the inhabitants of Littleton, brought to maintain the expenses supporting a negro, tried in Middlesex, October term 1796, the Chief Justice, in directing the jury, stated as the unanimous opinion of the court, that a negro born in the State before the present constitution, was born free, although born of a female slave. If this decision should stand, then London was legally a freeman, when he lived in Hatfield, and had settlement in his own right, which he had never forfeited, since he had been removed without any regard to his own wishes. But Judge Parsons and his Associates dismissed this matter with the curt remark: "It is however very certain that the general practice and common usage had been opposed to his opinion." The decision settled this point: that before the Revolution the settlement of a slave always followed that of his master. Eden's residence was here therefore, because his last three masters lived in this town. Again the decision affirmed that slaves when "manumitted, could acquire a settlement in their own right, and they had resided a year in the town where they were manumitted, they could not then be warned out."
Whichever of these decisions of the Court was right; the more humane one of the Court in 1796, or the possibly more legal one of the court in 1808; the town was obliged to support Eden London in his old age, and as he did service in the war of independence, it is to be hoped that the maintenance was cheerfully rendered. It has come down to us that he was a "pretty smart man." He was probably an old man by this time, as it is fifty-one years from the time he began to figure, or rather be figured, in these sales, to the final decision.

He was buried in the old graveyard in the Centre, in the northeast corner.

London Eden died in Winchendon on March 1810.\textsuperscript{11} He is buried in the Old Centre Cemetery in Winchendon, close to the rear wall in the northeast corner\textsuperscript{12} [see photo]\textsuperscript{13}.

SLAVE OF DANIEL GOODRICH

ENL. IN REV. WAR AUG. 1776

DISCH. YET A SLAVE 1779

DIED. MAR. 1810
Nothing is known of the early life of Peter Mitchell.

He joined the eight month's service on 24 April 1775 from Medford in the company of Capt. John Baker (10th), in Col. Samuel Gerrish's (38th) regiment.1 On 27 May 1775 he took the oath 'required by Congress to be taken by the Mass. army'.2 He is listed on the 1 August 1775 muster roll3, on the August pay roll4 and on a 9 August 1775 list 'of men who were in need of blankets'.5 On 27 September 1775 he was listed on a company return, now serving under his Lt. Col. Loammi Baldwin who had taken command after Col. Gerrish was broken for cowardice at Bunker Hill. On 19 November 1775 his name was on an 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Camp at Sewall's Point'.6

It is undoubtedly the same Peter who lost his wife, a 'negro', on 30 May 1776 in Medford.7

Cambridge Moore born circa 1752 and was the 'Negro servant' of Capt. John Moore of Bedford (MA).

'Tradition states that Cambridge Moore accompanied his master, as a freed man, to Concord, on April 19, 1775 ...'. If so, would have been a volunteer attached to this company (his name is not listed in the official military records for 1775).

He enlisted from Bedford (MA) for Rhode Island service on 10 May 1777, in Capt. John Minot's company in Col. Josiah Whitney's regiment. The roll dated 'Warwick Neck' gives his discharge date as 9 July 1777. With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He enlisted from Dracut (MA) on 15 August 1777, in Capt. Stephen Russell's company in Col. Samuel Bullard's Massachusetts militia regiment. This unit fought at the Second Battle of Saratoga. He was discharged 30 November 1777 and allowed 240 miles travel home.

On 20 February 1778, he enlisted in Capt. Edward Farmer's company in Col. Jacob Gerrish's Massachusetts militia. This unit served at Bunker Hill, Charlestown (MA), in guarding the prisoners captured at Saratoga. He was discharged 20 May 1778. He reenlisted on 25 July 1778 in Capt. Joseph Boynton's company in Col. Nathaniel Wade's Massachusetts militia regiment, serving at Rhode Island. On 6 November 1778 he was serving at North Kingston (RI). In late 1778 he served at East Greenwich (RI). His term expird 1 January 1779.

He enlisted in the Continental Army on 8 July 1780. His name appears on a descriptive roll dated 9 July 1780 at Springfield (MA):

age: 25
stature: 5 ft. 6 in.
engaged for: Bedford

A 6 August 1780 roll places him still at Springfield and describes him as 'a negro'. He marched to camp under the command of Lt. Jackson of the artillery and was reported 'a negro'. On 25 October 1780 he was serving at Camp Totaway (NJ).

2 BED2, 285. There is some disagreement on these points: BED1, 31 states that there 'is no evidence that any of the slaves of this town were permitted to accompany their masters to Concord on April 19, 1775'. Therefore the proof level has been set at '?' rather than '+'.

By January 1781 he was serving at West Point in Capt. Sylvanus Smith’s company in Col. Rufus Putnam’s 5th regiment. His discharge was dated 8 January 1781. He reenlisted for three years on 1 March 1781. His name again appears on a descriptive roll:

On 16 July 1781 he received a bounty from Bedford to serve in the Continental Army for three years. The details are recorded in the town history:

Class I. Capt. John Moore, chairman; provided a negro called Cambridge Moore (servant of the above), and agreed to give him, as a bounty, Twenty head of cattle, three years old, in case he continued in the service three years.

At some point after the Revolution, he moved to Dracut (MA) where he lived on Marsh Hill. His house stood at the corner of the old Proprietors road and the present highway near the reservoir. The well is still in existence but all traces of the house have disappeared.

He is buried in the northeast corner of the Olde Burial Grounds on Springs Road in Bedford. A stone monument marks the spot:

Cuff Nimrod was born circa 1753.²

He joined the eight month's service on 30 April 1775 in the company of Capt. Thaddeus Russell, in Col. Jonathan Brewer's regiment.³ This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill on the diagonal between the redoubt and the breastwork. On 16 July 1775, he served on the main guard under Lt. col. Loammi Baldwin at Prospect Hill.⁴ He is listed from Sudbury on the October 1775 roll.⁵ The 26 October 1775 roll lists him on an 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Cambridge Camp'.⁶

In 1776, he served in Capt. Amasa Cranston's company, in Col. Eleazer Brooks' regiment.⁷

He was married on 14 January 1779 in Natick to Alice Kent. At the time, he was 'of Sudbury'.⁸

Jonathan Occum probably early resided in New London, Connecticut. He was born in 1725, the son of Joshua and Sarah (____) Occum, and was the brother of the celebrated Sampson Occum ‘[Christian] missionary of all the tribes of southern New England’.

He served in the French and Indian Wars, in Capt. Ebenezer Leache’s company in 1755 and in Capt. Zachaeus Wheeler’s company in 1758.

After the Lexington Alarm, he enlisted on 10 May 1775 in the company of Capt. John Durkee, in Col. Israel Putnam’s regiment. This company marched from Norwich CT to Cambridge was engaged in the Battle of Bunker Hill, stationed at the rail fence. He was discharged on 16 December 1775 and ‘served throughout the war’ though no other service records have been found.

After the war, he ‘returned to Mohegan, received 20 acres of land in the distribution of 1790, and was living there in 1804. In lists he is called “a single man” and a “brother of Samson”’.

Aaron Oliver was born circa 1750 at Malden, Massachusetts.¹

He joined the eight month’s service in the company of Capt. Ezra Town, in Col. James Reed’s 3rd New Hampshire regiment of foot. The descriptive roll of the company lists him as follows²:

- age: 25

Peter Oliver was baptized on 6 June 1756 in Lincoln (MA), the son of Margaret (_____ ) Oliver.1

It is undoubtedly the same man who joined the eight month’s service on 30 May 1775 from Lincoln, in the company of Capt. Abijah Wyman in Col. William Prescott’s regiment. His name also appears on the 1 August 1775 roll, on a 3 October 1775 return dated Cambridge and on an 11 November 1775 ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Cambridge’.2

As the attack on Canada crumbled, the call went out for reinforcements for the Northern Department. It is undoubtedly the same Peter Oliver who responded by enlisting in Capt. Timothy Stow’s company, in Col. Ephraim Wheelock’s regiment. This unit served at Ticonderoga during the time of the defeat of the American fleet on Lake Champlain under Gen. Benedict Arnold.3

On his return, he joined the local 6th Middlesex County militia, in the company of Capt. Aaron Jewett in Col. Jonathan Reed’s regiment. With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. Now residing in Littleton (MA), he joined the Continental Army on 20 March 1777 for a three-year term in the company of Capt. Edmund Munroe, in Col. Timothy Bigelow’s 15th Massachusetts regiment. This unit served at Saratoga, Valley Forge and Monmouth, where his Captain was killed. In February 1779 he was serving in Providence. He was on furlough in March and April 1779. On 20 March 1780 he was discharged.4

In 1780, a call went out for men to reinforce the Continental Army for six months. Oliver marched to Springfield (MA) under Capt. Clark and was ‘reported a negro’ on a descriptive roll on 19 July 1780:

| age: 23 |
| stature: 5 ft. 9 in. |
| engaged for: Littleton |

A 25 October 1780 return dated Camp Totaway (NJ) lists his name. He was discharged 6 December 1780.5

On 4 July 1781, he enlisted from the town of Carlisle (MA) into the Continental Army for three years. On 1 August 1781 he received a bounty. A descriptive roll lists him6:

| age: 24 |
| stature: 5 ft. 8 in. |

Nothing is known of the early life of Boston Osborn.

Chester Parker was born circa 1749.¹

He joined the eight month’s service from Dracut on 25 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Oliver Parker, in Col. William Prescott’s regiment. This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill in the redoubt. He was listed on the 1 August 1775 roll, on the 7 October 1775 company return and on a 31 October 1775 ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money’.²

There is no clear record of 1776 or 1777 service.³

On 29 July 1778 he enlisted, in Capt. Joseph Bradley Varnum’s company in Col. McIntosh’s regiment in Col. Solomon Lovell’s brigade, ‘on expedition to Rhode Island’. This unit served at the Battle of Rhode Island in August 1778. He was discharged on 11 September 1778.

A 21 July 1779 descriptive roll, dated Lincoln, lists him as ‘a negro’ and as:

- age: 30 (also given 25)
- stature: 5 ft. 6 in.
- residence: Dracut

This was for service in Capt. Russell’s company under Maj. Hosmer in Brig.-Gen. Eleazar Brooks’ brigade. On 23 July 1779 he entered the service in Capt. Ebenezer Bancroft’s company in Col. Michael Jackson’s 8th regiment. He was discharged on 23 April 1780 after 9 months’ service. His name also appears on a 24 November 1779 list of men raised in Middlesex county.

It is undoubtedly the same man who entered the service from Chelmsford on 24 August 1781, in Capt. Asa Drury’s company in Col. Turner’s regiment. After three months and eleven days service in Rhode Island, he was discharged on 30 November 1781.⁴

² MASS 11:842; after the Battle of Bunker Hill, Capt. Parker left the service and command of the company fell to Lt. Nathaniel Sartwell. Capt. Ephraim Corey took command by October.
³ Ibid; there was a Chester Parker who served in 1776 in the White Plains campaign under Captain Joseph Butler but this man is listed as ‘deceased’ on 12 October 1776. Even so, this is probably the same man. It was not entirely out of the question for a man to have been wounded in battle or to have been taken prisoner or even to have deserted and thus to have been lost to his company and presumed dead.
⁴ Ibid.
Joseph Paugenit was baptized in Natick (MA) on 10 November 1754, the son of Joseph and Zipporah (____) Paugenit.

He enlisted on 24 April 1775 from Framingham in the company of Capt. Thomas Drury, in Col. John Nixon’s regiment. Twelve days before the Battle of Bunker Hill he, with others in his company, signed a petition to Gen. Artemus Ward ‘stating that they had enlisted to serve in Col. Nixon’s regiment, but had been shifted to Col. [Thomas] Gardner’s regiment, and requesting that they might be permitted to continue in Col. Nixon’s regiment’. Their protest was evidently heard since we find him listed on the 1 August 1775 roll as still being in Drury’s company, in Nixon’s regiment. He was stationed at Winter Hill in September.

In 1776, he was engaged in the New York campaign in Capt. Micajah Gleason’s company, in Col. Thomas Nixon’s 4th Regiment, at North Castle (now Mt. Kisko NY). He was probably involved in the Battles of Harlem Heights and White Plains. He was discharged in December 1776.

On 12 February 1777, he enlisted into the Continental Army in the company of Capt. John Holden, in the regiment of Col. Thomas Nixon. This unit fought at Saratoga. Joseph Paugenit is ‘reported deceased’ on 15 November 1777. He could have been wounded at one of the battles or could have contracted smallpox or some other disease. In either case, he would have probably been taken to the Military Hospital at Albany for care and died there.
Salem Poor was born probably circa 1742. All known accounts agree that he was purchased as an infant at the slave market in Salem (MA) by Lydia Abbot, a young woman, and brought home to Andover by horseback on the bow of her saddle.¹ He was baptized in what is now North Andover (MA) in 1747.²

On 10 July 1769, upon the payment of £27 in purchase of his own freedom, he was issued an official manumission by his master John Poor 3rd.³ Five years later, in the warrant for the Andover town meeting of 17 March 1774, an article ‘for the provision of support for [his] wife and children ... returned a negative vote’.⁴

There is no known record of his enlistment in the eight months' service, yet he was clearly present at the Battle of Bunker Hill as is proven by a petition citing his bravery.⁵ In 1880, respected historian Sarah Loring Bailey of Andover described the local tradition associated with Salem Poor’s heroic service [see cautionary footnote]:

The story goes that “Salem Poor,” a slave, owned by Mr. John Poor, shot Lieutenant-colonel [James] Abercrombie. As that officer sprang on the redoubt, while our men were in retreat, and exclaimed, “The day is ours,” Salem turned and took aim and fired. He saw the officer fall.⁶

His name is listed on a 6 October 1775 company return and on a 13 December 1775 ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Boston’.⁷

As the American attack on Canada crumbled, the call went out for reinforcements for the Northern Department. He responded by enlisting on 14 May 1776 in Capt. Abram Tyler’s company, in Col. Edmund Phinney’s regiment of Maine militia. This unit served at Fort George, at the southern terminus of Lake George, during the time of the defeat of the American fleet on Lake Champlain under Gen. Benedict Arnold. His name appears on an 8 December 1776 muster roll 'dated Garrison

¹ LJOY, 74 gives the most detailed account:

"There is a tradition that Lydia Abbot [b. 1723], when a girl, went to Salem, Mass with her father one day and when passing the slave market bought a negro infant and brought it home on her saddle. She gave it to her dau., Chloe [b. 1753], and the child was called Salem Pony."

LJOY, 75 states that Chloe Lovejoy, who owned Salem, married John Poor in 1776. ABB1, Lovejoy, 21 confirms this but states that the child was brought home "in [Lydia’s] saddle bag". ABB2, 424 repeats the story. ABB2, 90-105 states that Salem was part of Chloe’s dowry. This does not reconcile with Chloe’s 1776 marriage date to John Poor, at which time Salem would have been free for seven years. It is more probable that Salem was part of Lydia Abbot’s dowry. This source also states that “One of the grand-mothers brought the infant up from Salem on her saddle as she returned from a visit to see the ships come in as a lass.” The choice of 1742 as a birth year for Salem would correspond with an age of 19 for Lydia Abbot.

at Fort George'. On 25 October 1777 he was allowed payment for 1776 incidentals to service, which consisted of thirty miles travel to headquarters at Cambridge and six days billeting.

Upon his return home in early 1777, he rejoined the local militia in Capt. Samuel Johnson's 1st Andover company. With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He joined the Continental Army on 11 May 1777 for a three-year term in the company of Capt. Nathaniel Alexander, in Col. Edward Wigglesworth's Massachusetts regiment. This unit served at Saratoga. Upon the surrender of Burgoyne, the regiment marched to winter quarters at Valley Forge. His name appears on a May 1778 muster roll 'dated 'Camp Valley Forge'. During June 1778 he was stationed at 'Camp near White Plains'. By October 1778 command of the regiment had been taken over by Maj. John Porter and in March and April 1779 the regiment was stationed at Providence. He was discharged 20 March 1780.

His name does not appear in the 1790 U.S. Census and, despite the efforts of numbers of serious researchers, neither the date nor the place of his death have ever been found.

In commemoration of the Bicentennial in 1975, the U.S. Post Office issued a 10 cent stamp in his honor. In January 2001, the National Park Service issued a site bulletin celebrating his life and his services to his country.

Salem Poor married Nancy Parker, a 'mulatto' 'free woman' and former servant of Capt. James Parker, in Andover on 4 November 1771. They had at least one child:

SALEM POOR:
“A Brave and Gallant Soldier”

In the Massachusetts State Archives is a petition to the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, stating that in the “late Battle at Charlestown,” a man from Colonel Frye’s Regiment “behaved like an experienced officer” and that in this man “centers a brave and gallant soldier”. This document, dated December of 1775, just six months after the Battle of Bunker Hill, is signed by fourteen officers who were present at the battle, including William Prescott. Of the 2,400-4,000 colonists who participated in the battle, there is no other man singled out in this manner.

This hero of the Battle of Bunker Hill is Salem Poor of Andover, MA. Although documents show that Poor, along with his regiment and two others, were sent to Bunker Hill to build a fort and other fortifications on the night of June 16, 1775, we have no details as to exactly what Poor did to earn the accolades of these officers. The petition simply states, “to set forth particulars of his conduct would be tedious”. Perhaps his heroic deeds were too many to mention. One can only speculate.

Few details of this hero’s life are available to us. Born a slave from birth in the late 1740s, he managed to buy his freedom for the price of twenty-seven pounds in 1769, a year’s salary for many a working man at that time. He married Nancy, a free black woman, and they had a son. Salem Poor left his wife and child behind in May of 1775 and fought for the colonists’ cause at Bunker Hill, Saratoga, Valley Forge and Monmouth, among others. There are many reasons why this man may have chosen to undertake these actions. Was it his patriotism, or the possibility of a new and better life that led him to risk his life in battle? The Battle of Bunker Hill was a daring and provocative act against authority and oppression. This black man, who had literally bought his freedom, may have been fighting for another kind of freedom—equality with whites. In 1776 the Declaration of Independence stated that “all men are created equal”, but that equality did not extend to Poor’s race. As a man of African descent, he could not sit with whites on the main floor of his church, but had to sit in the balcony. He could work, but would find many jobs closed to those of his race. He could be taxed, but he could not vote, no matter how much money he had.

Salem Poor is but one of some three dozen blacks who fought at Bunker Hill. As many as 5,000 African-Americans, both freemen and slaves, fought on the patriot side, while many more, tens of thousands, aided the British in this war. Neither Loyalist nor colonist affiliation afforded any advantage, for at the end of the War for American Independence blacks found themselves far from the freedom and equality for which they had hoped.

Many questions remain about this forgotten hero. We know little of his existence, his death, his work, and his family. Why did this free black man choose to risk his life, fighting alongside men, some of whom owned slaves? And most important, why was this hero forgotten?

On 5 December 1775, fourteen officers, who had each personally observed the bravery of Salem Poor, signed a petition on his behalf. This unique document is extraordinary both in its intent and in the relative status of the petitionee versus the collective status of the petitioners. The fourteen officers who signed represented five different regiments and included probably the single most-renowned survivor of the battle, Col. William Prescott:

It is of more than passing notice that the first signer of the petition, after the field officers, was 1st Lt. Ephraim Corey of Capt. Oliver Parker’s company. Parker’s company had the most Patriots of Color of any company on the field. Just after the battle, Parker left the service and Corey became captain. It is highly probable that Ephraim Corey was the driving force behind the petition.

That officers from five regiments would have been in a position to view the heroism of Salem Poor is revealing of the placement of members of the regiments on the battlefield. To have seen his actions, the signers must have been in the same general area at the eastern side of the redoubt or outside its northeast corner (during the retreat).

Prescott’s Regiment

Col. William Prescott of Pepperell, with approximately 1200 men from his own and Frye’s and Bridge’s regiments, occupied Breed’s Hill the night before the battle and constructed the redoubt. He is considered by many historians to have been the overall commander of the redoubt and immediately surrounding areas. Prescott was an excellent swordsman and reputedly had his waistcoat pierced by numbers of parries of the enemy. This regiment suffered the highest number of casualties (42 K and 28 W) of any regiment, which is indicative of the fierce and close fighting that occurred after the direct British assault on the redoubt. Prescott’s regiment contained more known Patriots of Color than any other regiment.

Signers:
Col. William Prescott
1st Lt. Ephraim Corey, Capt. Oliver Parker’s company
2nd Lt. Joseph Baker, Capt. Samuel Gilbert’s company

Frye’s Regiment

Col. James Frye of Andover was present at the battle and was wounded ‘in the thigh by a musket ball’, of which wound he died just a month after the signing of the petition. Lt. Col. (Dr.) James Brickett of Haverhill was seriously wounded in the foot and was ruptured. This regiment, also primarily stationed in the redoubt, suffered the second-highest number of casualties (15 K and 31 W) of any regiment. Salem Poor was a private in this regiment in Capt. Benjamin Ames’ company.

Bridge's Regiment

Col. Ebenezer Bridge of Billerica was present at the battle and was wounded ‘on the head and the neck by a sword cut’. He was court-martialed for cowardice after the battle, but was found innocent. Lt. Col. Moses Parker of Chelmsford was seriously wounded in the knee and was left on the field, where he was taken prisoner and died after the amputation of his leg by the British in Boston. This regiment, also primarily stationed in the redoubt, suffered the third-highest number of casualties (15 K and 29 W) of any regiment.

Brewer's Regiment

Col. Jonathan Brewer of Waltham was present at the battle and was wounded ‘in the arm’. Lt. Col. William Buckminster of Framingham was very seriously wounded by a musket ball that entered his shoulder and exited near his spine, crippling him for life. Most of this regiment was scattered on a diagonal line between the breastwork and the rail fence and suffered the fifth-highest number of casualties (7 K and 11 W) of any regiment.

Signers: Col. Jonathan Brewer

Nixon's Regiment

Col. John Nixon of Sudbury was present at the battle. He was wounded ‘severely in the groin’ and was ‘carried off the field’. This regiment was scattered to the northeast of the redoubt, mainly in the area known as the ‘gap’. It suffered relatively moderate casualties: (3 K and 10 W).

Summary

Officers from five regiments signed the Salem Poor petition. Of the five colonels of these regiments, four were wounded (an 80% casualty rate); two were seriously wounded and one, Salem Poor's own colonel, died of his wounds. Of the five lieutenant-colonels of these regiments, three were wounded, all seriously, and one died in captivity. One of the wounded was the lieutenant-colonel of Salem Poor's regiment. These facts, plus the realization that hundreds of individual acts of courage occurred on the battlefield that day, make it all the more amazing that so many officers would choose to sign a bravery petition for a private in the ranks.

What ‘Brave & gallant’ acts set Salem Poor apart? It is a strong local [though unproven] tradition in Andover that he shot Lt. Col. James Abercrombie of the grenadiers, the highest-ranking British officer to have been killed or mortally wounded that day. To have performed this act, Salem Poor would have had to remain in the front ranks in the redoubt probably much longer than was prudent and would probably have been engaged in mortal hand-to-hand combat with some of the toughest of the British troops. The search for a ‘smoking gun’ document, which might further explain Salem Poor's feats of courage, will continue.

1 There is some doubt about Smith's presence on the battlefield, per 4 March 2001 conversation with D. Michael Ryan, Historian.
Caesar Porter was born circa 1730 and was early a servant to Moses Porter of Bradford (MA).

It is most probably the same Caesar who joined the eight month’s service on 30 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Charles Furbush, in Col. Ebenezer Bridge’s regiment. The last record of service for him is an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Cambridge, Nov. 21, 1775’.

There was a Caesar Porter who was head of a household of five free persons of color in Dunbarton (NH) in 1790, who may be the soldier or possibly his son.

Caesar married Chloe, servant to Timothy Hardy of Bradford, on 11 January 1756 in Bradford.

Job Potamia was born in Medford (MA) on 12 December 1746, the son of Titus and Hannah (Hammond) Potamia. He was baptized in Stoneham (MA) 16 July 1749.

From Stoneham, he joined the eight month's service on 4 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Benjamin Locke, in Col. Thomas Gardner's regiment. This unit was at the Battle of Bunker Hill, where his Colonel was mortally wounded. An October 1775 descriptive roll at Prospect Hill describes him as follows:

- Age: 28
- Stature: 5 ft. 10 in.

On 1 December 1775, he was listed on an 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Prospect Hill'. He received his final payment for 1775 service on 1 January 1776.

There is no record of 1776 service.

By 1777, he was part of the 1st Middlesex County [MA] Regiment. From this unit, he joined the Continental Army in Col. Thomas Marshall's regiment in November. He resided in Cambridge and was engaged for that town.

On 1 January 1780, while residing in Boston, he enlisted in Capt. John Fuller's company, in Col. Gamaliel Bradford's regiment. On 19 March 1782, he was reported 'as having deserted'.

His intention to marry Hannah Barjonah was recorded in Stoneham (MA) on 16 March 1774. There is no known marriage record and no record of any children.
Titus Potamia was born circa 1718. A reconstructed military roll lists him as a 'black sutler'.

From Stoneham (MA), he joined the eight month’s service on 31 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Ebenezer Bancroft, in Col. Ebenezer Bridge’s regiment. He signed a receipt for advance pay on 24 July 1775. On 4 November 1775, he was listed on an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money’.

It is most probably the same man who married Hannah Hammond on 5 January 1744 in Medford (MA). They had at least one son:

1. Job
   - b. 12 December 1746 in Medford
   - bpt. 16 July 1749 in Stoneham
   - mint. to Hannah Barjonah in Stoneham (MA) on 16 March 1774

It is also most probably the same man who married, probably second, Peg _____ in Reading (MA) on 23 November 1758.

Caesar Prutt was born on June 1727 in Hadley (MA), the son of Arthur and Jane (_____) Prutt, and lived with Josiah Chauncey, Esq.¹

His first tour of service was in 1758 ‘for the invasion of Canada’, in the French and Indian Wars, under Capt. Elisha Pomeroy, in Col. Israel Williams regiment.²

He was still a slave in 1770 when he ‘was valued at £25’.³ Historian James Avery Smith, who discovered a legal case in which Caesar was the defendant, drew some fascinating conclusions:

In December of 1770, Caesar, who had been hunting, shot a deer with his musket. He was discovered dressing the carcass by Solomon Boltwood, a leading citizen of Amherst. Solomon reported the incident to the sheriff, and Caesar was brought before the Court of Sessions at Northampton on a charge of poaching. Solomon later received a small informer’s fee for his report of the incident.

At his trial in July 1771, Caesar Prutt admitted his guilt and was fined £6. This event provides several insights into the rights of slaves in Amherst. First, it shows that slaves could carry arms within the Amherst community. Second, it is obvious that there were times when a slave was “on his own,” moving about in the fields and woods without any supervision from his owner. The record of this event is also interesting as it shows that slaves were subject to the action and protection of the courts. When Prutt was found poaching, it was he, not his owner, who came before the court. In the poaching case, Prutt was given a severe sentence, as £6 was a significant fine for anyone, and he was expected to pay it with his own funds. Therefore, some slaves must have earned money that they were allowed to keep as their own.⁴

After the Lexington Alarm he enlisted from Amherst (MA) on 8 May 1775 into the eight months’ service, in the company of Capt. Reuben Dickinson in Col. Benjamin Ruggles Woodbridge’s regiment. His name appears on a 27 July 1775 receipt for advance pay, on the 1 August 1775 muster roll, on a 28 September 1775 company return ‘dated Prospect Hill’ and on a 26 October 1775 ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Prospect Hill’.⁵

On 1 December 1775, he enlisted in Capt. James Perry’s company in Col. Paul Dudley Sargent’s regiment. A 6 April 1776 roll lists him as ‘reported in hospital’.⁶

In 1777, he enlisted from Amherst into the Continental Army under Col. Sargent for three years.⁷

In his old age he became a town pauper in Amherst. Town records from 1801 to 1807 state the case:

1801: ‘Caesar Pratt a Town Pauper be Set up at vendue, to the Lowest bidder for Victualling and Beding and was Struck off[?] to Ins Asa Smith for one year for one Dollar Per week.’⁸

He was accordingly set-up, as aforesaid, and struck-off to Aaron Merrick, he being the lowest bidder, at the Sum of forty one Dollars & fifty Cents, on the conditions above expressed.’

1805: [That year Caesar was joined by two other paupers]: ‘Voted ... that Caesar Prutt [be set-up] to Daniel Moody, to be kept through the year, on the above conditions, for the sum of forty eight Dollars and twenty five cents.’

1806: ‘Caesar Prutt to Joel Kellogg for fifty one Dollars ...’

1807: ‘... Caesar Prutt, an aged negro ... put up at vendue and ... bid off for a year at $65.’

No further known records mention Caesar Prutt and is likely that he died in 1807.

Ryal, as he was called, ‘was purchased in Boston as an infant and brought to Dracut’ where he became a servant in the household of Joseph Bradley Varnum but was ‘early manumitted’. ‘He was a man who possessed dignity of manner and was respected and trusted by the family with whom he lived’.2

He enlisted on 29 April 1775 into the company of Capt. Jonas Richardson, in Col. James Frye’s regiment. He was listed on the October roll of the company.3 On 22 December 1775, he is recorded on an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Camp at Cambridge’.4

On 1 January 1776, he enlisted in the company of Capt. Joshua Reed, in Col. James Mitchell Varnum’s 9th Continental Infantry.5 By the time Col. James Mitchell Varnum was promoted to Brigadier-General in 1777, Silas Royal had become his body servant and ‘accompanied him in his military expeditions’. At some point during the war, he served as a privateersman ‘on board the brig Franklin, ... at Salem, and drew £30 as his share of prize money’6.

While home in 1778, he was seized and imprisoned in a conspiracy to sell him as a slave in the South. Nearly the entire Varnum family set out to rescue him. The story is best told by citing the Varnum diary verbatim:

Jan 19 1778 - This morning while at breakfast heard that Joshua Wyman had sold Ryal Varnum, that ye News was brought from Westford by Jos. Varnum Jr. & that said Ryal was carried off in a covered waggon. Handcuffed - on hearing of which I immediately called for my horse, Galloped to Jos. Varnum’s to Know ye Certainty. He confirmed it, Sent him to Capt. Jo’s to come Immediately. Sent Jonas with my horse. Gave Jonas $20 to bare his expenses, with orders to pursue with all possible speed, overtake, Bring back and not suffer arbitrary voyalance to Escape with Impunity. They pursued, came to Woburn, found the News confirmed. That it was the Infamous Joner White, the Scurrilous Tinker of Haverhill, that Bought him (at ye same time knowing sd Ryal was a free man) sd White had Imprisoned him, Woburn people had liberatd him. Sd White laid a false charge against him. Said he was an Inlisted soldier in ye Continental service: that he had received $20 Continental money & had Deserted, that he had stole from Sundry persons & was a thief & that if ye prison Could not hold him ye Guard should & profanely swore that he had bought him & would have him some way on that Complaint. Altho he knew it to be false he put him under guard. There is ye Infamous White that hath worked Wmself by some means as some way to be a quartermaster for ye Army at or near Boston, a fine post to get money when Truth Nor Honor is not regarded.

Jan 20. Capt. Joseph & Jonas Varnum went to Boston, Complained to General Heath against said White, had sd Ryal Liberated, and a promise from the Genl. that he would take Notice of said White. They gave sd White Just Character to ye General, he promised he would take Notice of it. They went to White, Informed him what they had done. He was extremly angry. Curst & swore very profanely. They delt with him very sharply for his Conduct to Ryal. He said he did not know that Ryal was free. They told him that he Did know that his Crime aledged against Ryal, for which he was put under gaol was true, but that he knew ye contrary. He

They came to Wymans same Day. Gave him ye like Trimming.

The Varnum's kept their promise to institute court proceedings. Silas Royal received a judgment in his favor of one hundred pounds, from the Middlesex County (MA) Court of Common Pleas, in September 1777. Gen. James Mitchell Varnum of Rhode Island, the brother of Capt. Joseph Bradley Varnum, filed an action against Joshua Wyman before the October term of the Superior Court of Bristol County (RI) in 1779. John White, who had purchased Ryal from Wyman, published a deposition:

I, John White solemnly declare that I purchased a Negro named Royal of one Joshua Wyman of Woburn in the County of Middlesex, State of Massachusetts Bay, sometime the last of spring or beginning of summer 1778, for which I paid nine fifty six pounds lawful money, sd Wyman declaring to me on his word of honor that if I would sell the sd Royal to some other Southern Officer, so that he might never again return to New England, he would give me some consideration therefor (as he said on account of his infamous character as a thief &c) and that the said Wyman still retains the money from me that I gave him for said Negro, alledging that he is my slave for life and that it is my fault that I do not make him so. This I solemnly protest to be the truth.

John White
Newburyport Sept 28 1779.

Silas Royal remained with the Varnum family after the war. This anecdote tells of his dignity of manner:

He was extremely punctilious as to respect he felt due him as Gen. Varnum's servant. If any young men failed to take off their hats to him when they met him on the road, he would cry out, "Boys, where's your manners?" and failing recognition, would send his cane after them in double quick time.

Gen. James Mitchell Varnum thought so highly of Silas Royal's long and faithful service that he remembered him in his will:

My will is that Silas Royal, a black man, who has been for a long time supported by me, free from expense to himself or the Town, be comfortably supported through life, and honorably buried after death, at the expense of my Estate, provided, the small property which he has been indulged in the possession of shall not be transferred to any person but my residuary legatees.

He was tenderly cared for and had a room in the family mansion. He died several years after Gen. Varnum on May 3 1826 and, at his own request, was buried beside an Indian in one corner of the Varnum burial ground at the Varnum homestead. There is no record of marriage or children.
Peter Salem was born in Framingham. He was a slave, originally owned by Capt. Jeremiah Belknap. He was admitted to the church under the half-way covenant Aug. 16, 1760. He was sold by Capt. B. to Maj. Lawson Buckminster, before the War.

He marched on the Lexington Alarm on 19 April 1775 ‘to Concord and Cambridge’ as a minute man in Capt. Simon Edgell’s company, serving for four days. On 24 April 1775 he enlisted from Framingham into the eight months’ service in Capt. Thomas Drury’s company in Col. John Nixon’s regiment. Twelve days before the Battle of Bunker Hill he, with others in his company, signed a petition to Gen. Artemus Ward ‘stating that they had enlisted to serve in Col. Nixon’s regiment, but had been shifted to Col. [Thomas] Gardner’s regiment, and requesting that they might be permitted to continue in Col. Nixon’s regiment’. Their protest was evidently heard since we find him listed on the 1 August 1775 roll as still being in Drury’s company, in Nixon’s regiment. He is also listed on a 30 September 1775 company return dated Winter Hill.

Temple, the highly respected town historian of Framingham, asserted that Peter Salem was at Bunker Hill and that he fired the shot that killed Maj. John Pitcairn:

During the action, he with others, was sent from Capt. Drury’s company, as a support to Col. Prescott in the redoubt. He reached the redoubt just as Prescott’s men had spent their last powder; and with a single charge in his gun, and perhaps another in his powder horn. Just then, in the language of Judge [Needham] Maynard, “I saw a British officer  come up with some pomp, and he cried out, ‘Surrender, you [damned] rebels!’ But Prescott  made a little motion with his hand, and that was the last word the Briton spoke; he fell at once.” There is concurrence of testimony which leaves no doubt that this shot was fired by Peter Salem. Maj. Pitcairn fell into the arms of his son, who bore him off to a boat, and thence to a house in Prince street Boston, where he died. The loss of so gallant an officer at this critical moment, formed one of the most touching incidents of that eventful day.

1 MMAN. Peter Salem is today portrayed by Bruce Harris, Park Ranger at Minuteman NHP, who is storyteller on a recently-instituted interpretive program entitled the ‘A Walk with Peter Salem’.

2 LEII, 268.

3 FRAM, 324.

4 MASS 13:743-4; listed as ‘Salem’.

5 FRAM, 325. There is some controversy on this issue. Sorting out all of the stories is beyond the scope of this study but is being researched in a scholarly manner by Mark Nichipor of Minuteman NHP. However, some findings of this study and of this compiler’s lifetime work can be shared:

1 MAHP 14(1875):93 printed a 1877 entry from the note-book of Reverend Jeremy Belknap which recorded: “A negro man belonging to Groton, took aim at Major Pitcairn, as he was rallying the dispersed British Troops, & shot him thro the head, he was brought over to Boston & died as he was landing on the ferry ways.” The only man of color from Groton in this study is Barzillai Lew.

SWET, 43 repeats nearly the same story but names the ‘negro man’ as Salem and elaborates in Note M. that “Gen. Winslow stated, a contribution was made in the army for Salem and he was presented to Washington as having slain Pitcairn...” The actions of Salem Poor might also lend themselves to this account.

2 SOBO, 195 states that in 1775 Dr. John Eliot wrote in his almanac the following account of [Pitcairn’s] fall: “This amiable and gallant officer was slain entering the intrenchments. He had been wounded twice; then putting himself at the head of his forces, he faced danger, calling out, ‘Now for the glory of the marines!’ He received four balls in his body. “At least three other men claimed to have shot Pitcairn Joseph Spalding of Chelmsford, Phinehas Whitney of Harvard and Benjamin Webber of Gloucester. It is at least conceivable that all four men (Peter Salem included) shot Pitcairn.

3 FRAM, 295 states that Drury’s company was stationed at the ‘hay breastwork’, an area in the gap between the redoubt and the rail fence, and that Peter Salem and others were detailed from there to reinforce the redoubt. Needham Maynard in his published account stated that sixty men were ‘sent up’ and that Prescott was told that more would be sent if he needed them.

In summary, no convincing evidence has yet been examined by this compiler that would negate the claims made for Peter Salem to have shot Pitcairn.
Peter Salem’s ‘flintlock musket used at the Battle of Bunker Hill’ was once on display at the Bunker Hill monument.

In September 1776 he enlisted in Capt. Micajah Gleason’s company in Lt. Col. Thomas Nixon’s regiment, serving in the New York campaign. His unit served at the Battle of White Plains where his Captain was killed. By 9 November 1776 he was stationed at North Castle (NY). His name appears on receipts for wages from September to December 1776.

Upon his return home he enlisted in Lt. Lawson Buckminster’s 2nd company, in Col. Micah Stone’s 5th Middlesex County militia. With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He joined the Continental Army on 1 January 1777 for a three-year term in the 4th company of Capt. John Holden, in Col. Thomas Nixon’s 6th Massachusetts regiment. This unit served at both Battles of Saratoga, at Valley Forge, at the Battle of Monmouth and was then stationed at the Hudson Highlands. Temple stated that during this time Peter Salem served “as the Colonel’s body servant”.

A 16 February 1779 ‘return of men who were in camp on or before Aug. 15, 1777, and who had not been absent subsequently except on furlough’ was certified at ‘Camp near Peekskill’. His name appears on a May 1779 muster roll and on the June and July 1779 pay rolls. Each regiment at the Highlands, at Gen Washington’s command, was expected to provide at least one company of Light Infantry. Capt. John Holden’s company was one of these elite units and was one of the units that stormed the fortress at Stony Point on 16 July 1779 under the command of Gen Anthony Wayne. The men had been ordered, under penalty of death, to use only bayonets and not to fire muskets under any circumstances. Peter Salem was undoubtedly in this action. His name appears on the rolls from August to December 1779. By 1 January 1780 he had transferred to Capt. Peter Clayes’ company in the same regiment. He was discharged from the service on 1 March 1780.

Temple states:

At the close of the war in 1783, Peter married Katy Benson, a granddaughter of Nero, and built a small house on land then owned by Peter Rice on the exact spot where now stands the dwelling house of Moses M. Fiske, near Sucker pond. He lived here till 1792 or 93. But his marriage proved an unhappy one; and Peter left his native town and settled in Leicester.

The 1790 census of Framingham listed him as head in a household of two free people of color.

The most complete insight into his life was given to us by Leicester historian Emory Washburn, in 1860:

6 Listed as #29 on an “Inventory of Possessions of the Bunker Hill Monument Association…” which was taken on 3 February 1967 (original inventory list now at Charlestown Navy Yard - copy kindly provided by Phil Hunt). A side notation states “Stolen, 1974 or 5”. Carl Zellner, in a 19 June 2001 phone conversation, elaborated that the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) took over the site from the Bunker Hill Monument Association and managed it until its acquisition by the National Park Service. Mr. Zellner visited the site in 1971 and stated that the musket was gone by then. An old-timer told him that the musket had been taken out for repair and was never returned. A photo of the musket on display can be seen in [EBON].

14 LEH, 266-269.
After the war, he came to Leicester, and continued to reside there till a short time before his death. The history of the town would be incomplete without giving him a place ...

He was born in Framingham, and was held as a slave, probably until he joined the army; whereby, if not before, he became free. This was the case with many of the slaves in Massachusetts; as no slave could be mustered into the army. If a master suffered this to be done, it worked a practical emancipation. Peter served faithfully as a soldier, during the war, in Col. Nixon's regiment. A part of the time he was the servant of Col. Nixon, and always spoke of him in terms of admiration.

He lived in various places in the town; but his last abode was a cabin which he built for himself, on the south side of the road leading to Auburn, about a quarter of a mile from the house formerly of William Watson. In front of his cabin he planted and reared two or three poplar-trees; and, around it, dug and cultivated a little garden, in which, besides the few vegetables that he planted, a few clumps of flowering shrubs and a stunted rose or two, with a few sweet-smelling herbs, gave evidence of his unequal struggle with a hard and rocky soil.

Horticulture, however, was not his forte. He earned a precarious livelihood by making and mending baskets, bottoming chairs, and the like; which gave him admittance into everybody's house, where his good nature rendered him a universal favorite, especially with the children. His military training in the army had given him a sort of instinctive soldierly bearing; and his habits of obedience there to his superiors, infused, into all of his intercourse with the considerable people of the town, a marked courtesy of manner, which he never omitted or forgot.

It was always a pleasant sight to observe the promptness and precision with which the heel of Peter's right foot found its way into the hollow of his left one, his body grow erect, and the right hand spring up to a level with his eye, to salute Massa Moore or Mistress D. on passing, in return for the salutation or nod of recognition with which everybody greeted him.

It was a treat, too, for the younger members of the family to gather around Peter, while engaged in mending the household chairs; or, sitting in the chimney corner, with the youngest on his knee, while the flickering blaze lighted up his black face, to listen to his stories of the war, and what he had seen "when he was out with Massa Nixon."

He was especially at home at the firesides of those who had been in "the service," and generally found a welcome chair at the hospitable board. They were, to him, companions in arms; and he never seemed to think he could grow old while any of them remained to answer his roll-call.

But though Peter had gone through seven years' hard service unharmed, and had not lost a jot of his freshness of feeling, age crept upon him unawares at last. His erect form began to stoop; his military step grew unsteady; the thinned and whitened covering which had concealed an ugly wen or two, that had perched themselves upon the top of his head, no longer served to screen this defect in his personal symmetry. His resources grew smaller and smaller; till, at last, the hand of charity had to supply the few wants which the old man required.

In this respect, there is a frightful equality in the law. Overseers of the poor never heed whether the man that is hungry is a saint or a sinner. If he needs fire to warm or clothes to cover him, though scarred all over in the service of his country, it is their "duty" to hunt up his "settlement," and give notice, as the law requires.

Peter's settlement was in Framingham, and the good people of that town took early measures for his removal thither.

It was a sad day for Peter; but, before taking his final departure, he went around and made a farewell visit to each of his favorite haunts, and to each of his old friends as time had spared. With a heavy heart, he paid them his last salute, and disappeared from the spot which had been his home for so many years. His cabin soon went to decay. A rough stone chimney served for many years to mark where it had stood; and the lilac and the rose he planted, bloomed for a few years, and were then broken down, and died. The last object that marked the spot was a poplar tree; and even that has grown old, and will ere long disappear.

But will any one say that this humble black man, whose hand did such service in the very redoubt on Bunker 15 This road, now named Peter Salem Road, extends eastward off Route 56. In October 2002, Don Lennerton, Town Historian of Leicester, pointed out the foundation site of Peter's cabin. It resides on a southeast-facing hillside just a few hundred yards from the Route 56 intersection, on the south side of the Peter Salem Road and just a few yards west of the major transmission lines that cross the road there. A well was discovered on the property in the early 1900's by a Mr. Henry Watson [per "Houses Built in Leicester Previous to 1800" by Cora B. Knight Denny (1910), 23]. The DAR acquired this site in 1909 [per DEFE, 20] and beautified the area and erected a sign [see copy of old photo appended] but all of this has long since disappeared. The property is now shown on the area tax map in the Assessor's Office as being privately-owned.

Hill; who periled his life, through some of the most trying and arduous scenes of the war, for that freedom for others which he had never been permitted to share till he won it personally by personal valor, — will any one say that his name does not deserve a place among those whom it is the purpose of these simple annals to commemorate?

Temple continues the story:

On his return to Framingham, Peter was not treated in all respects like the common poor; but to the credit of his former masters be it recorded, that Maj. Lawson Buckminster and Capt. Jeremiah Belknap, together with Samuel Hemenway, gave a bond to the town “to support him during his natural life.” He died at the house of William Walkup Sen. August 16, 1816, and was buried in the north central part of the old cemetery...

His grave stood unmarked until 1882 when the Town of Framingham expended $150 to fill and grade the site, which ‘was in a low part of the cemetery’, and erect a granite monument. On this monument at the Old Burying Ground Cemetery (formerly called Church Hill Cemetery) on Main Street is inscribed:

PETER SALEM
A SOLDIER OF THE REVOLUTION
CONCORD
BUNKER HILL
SARATOGA
DIED AUG. 16, 1816
ERECTED BY THE TOWN, 1882.

Other honors were accorded to him. On June 11, 1927 the Chicago Defender, the leading black weekly in the United States, carried the notice that the National Equal Rights League ... had issued a nationwide call for the observance of “Peter Salem day,” June 17 ... [t]he purpose of the day would be “to notify white Americans of valuable service and sacrifice we have made for them from the country’s birth and demand equal rights as a just return.” In May 1971, a medal honoring him was struck by the American Negro Commemorative Society. The Framingham Chapter DAR dedicated the restoration of his gravestone in a special ceremony on 12 November 2000. A companion headstone was laid:

RESTORED BY THE FRAMINGHAM CHAPTER DAR JULY 22, 2000

In September 1783 Peter Salem married Katy Benson, a granddaughter of Nero of Framingham. No record of any children could be found.

17 This compiler spent many hours, at the office of the Town Clerk in Framingham, searching through old town reports of the period for this document but could not find it.

20 “Medal Honors Framingham Black Who Fought in American Revolution”, story in 13 June 1971 South Middlesex News; copy at Framingham Historical Society. A U.S Post Office stamp issued during the Bicentennial, depicting Trumbull’s painting of the Battle of Bunker Hill, purportedly showed Peter Salem as the ‘servant’ standing behind Lt. Thomas Grosvenor. It is highly unlikely that the man shown in the portrait is Peter Salem; instead it is more likely to be Asaba (Grosvenor) - see his biographical sketch for more information.
21 Both Bruce Harris and this compiler attended this ceremony at the invitation of Mrs. Andrea Crossman of the DAR [see photo taken at the gravesite].
22 MAVR, Framingham, Marriages, 337, listed as ‘Salem Middlesex’. Temple stated that Peter Salem was sometimes called Salem Middlesex - his authority is being relied upon here. There was a another man by this name who long resided in Weston (MA).

Age: N/A
Occupation: N/A
Residence: Charlestown, MA

Description: N/A
Status: N/A
Religion: N/A

Rank: Private
Unit: Whitcomb / Davis
Stationed: rail fence

Nothing is known of the early life of Anthony Shaswell.

He joined the eight month’s service on 6 May 1775 in the company of Capt. Jonathan Davis, in Col. Asa Whitcomb’s regiment. This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill at the rail fence. His name is on the 1 August 1775 muster roll. On 18 June 1775, one day after the Battle, he was listed on an order ‘for cartridge boxes of which said Shasrel ... is in need’. This is a strong sign of participation in the Battle. His name also appears on August and September 1775 receipts for wages and on a 6 October 1775 company return.

There is no known record of 1776 service.

On 1 January 1777 he joined the 1st Rhode Island Battalion, in Capt. John Singer Dexter’s company in Col. Christopher Greene’s regiment. On 24 January 1777 he was listed as ‘Taken Prisoner’. After that there is no more record of him.

Remarks:

*This company was designated at various times as Capt. John Singer Dexter's and 2d Company.
Scipio Shaw was born circa 1751 and was a servant to the widow Hannah Shaw of Danvers.

He joined the eight month's service from Danvers (MA) on 14 June 1775 in the 9th company of Capt. John King, in Col. (Benjamin) Ruggles Woodbridge's regiment. On 23 October 1775, he was listed on an 'order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Camp Prospect Hill'.

In 1776, he enlisted into Capt. Joseph Butler's company, in Lt. Col. Thomas Nixon's regiment. This unit served in the New York Campaign and was probably at the Battle of White Plains. A regimental return of 9 November 1776 records him as serving at North Castle (now Mt. Kisco NY). He served his term until December 1776, then evidently served an extra month at Springfield (MA).

On 25 August 1777, he enlisted into the company of Capt. Samuel Flint, in Col. Samuel Johnson's Essex County (MA) militia. This company was in the thickest of the fight at the 2nd Battle of Saratoga on 7 October 1777, at which his Captain was killed. He was discharged on 30 November 1777, making his long march of 200 miles home from Scarsdale (NY).

He was married on 22 August 1777 in Danvers to Filis, 'servant to widow Elisabeth Buxton'.

Age: N/A

Residence: Gloucester, MA

Description: 'negro'
Status: N/A
Religion: N/A

Rank: Private
Unit: Gerrish / B. Dodge
Stationed: N/A

Nothing is known of the early life of Nathaniel Small.

He joined the eight month’s service from Gloucester on 30 May 1775, in the company of Capt. Barnabas Dodge in Col. Samuel Gerrish’s regiment. He is listed on a 10 June 1775 list of those who took the loyalty oath required by Congress, on an August 1775 pay abstract, and on a 2 October 1775 return dated ‘Camp at Chelsea’. His name also appears on a 27 December 1775 ‘order for money in lieu of a bounty coat, dated Chelsea’, on which he is reported ‘a negro’.

On 13 November 1775, he signed an enlistment agreement agreeing to join the same unit (now under Lt. Col. Loammi Baldwin) in Continental Army service from 31 December 1775 for one year. A 7 December return and a 30 December 1775 list of new recruits confirm this engagement for Continental service. May and June 1776 pay abstracts show him in ‘Camp at New York’. His unit retreated from New York to what is now Washington’s Crossing (PA) with the other remnants of Washington's army. It is highly likely that Small was engaged in the crossing of the Delaware to attack Trenton. On 1 January 1777, just after the victory at Trenton, Washington made entreaties to his men to stay in service for an extra six weeks past their enlistment. Nathaniel Small decided to remain with Washington and was probably also engaged at the Battle of Princeton just two days later.

With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. He joined the Continental Army on 16 March 1777 for a term to last the duration of the war, in the company of Capt. Amos Cogswell in Col. James Wesson’s 9th Massachusetts regiment. This unit fought at both battles at Saratoga, spent the long winter at Valley Forge and fought in the sweltering heat at the Battle of Monmouth (NJ) on 28 June 1778. Just two weeks after the Battle, Small died on 13 July 1778. He may have been wounded or died of disease.1

1 MASS 14:316.
Nothing is known of the early life of Cato Smith.

He joined the eight month’s service on 24 April 1775 from Lincoln (MA), in the company of Capt. William Smith in Col. John Nixon’s regiment. His name appears on a 26 June 1775 receipt for advanced pay, on the 1 August 1775 roll and on a 30 September 1775 company return.²

In 1776, he enlisted in the company of Capt. Joseph Butler in Lt. Col. Thomas Nixon’s 4th regiment. This unit served at the Battle of White Plains. Rolls from September through November place him at North Castle (NY). He died in the service on 23 January 1777.

Age: 21
Occupation: N/A
Residence: Sudbury, MA
Description: 'negro'
Status: N/A
Religion: N/A
Rank: Private
Unit: J. Brewer / Russell
Stationed: diagonal

Jacob Speen was born circa 1754.1

He joined the eight month’s service on 27 April 1775 in the company of Capt. Thaddeus Russell, in Col. Jonathan Brewer’s regiment.2 This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill on the diagonal between the redoubt and the breastwork. He is also listed on the October 1775 roll.3 The 26 October 1775 roll lists him on an ‘order for bounty coat or its equivalent in money dated Cambridge Camp’.4

On 1 January 1776, he enlisted in Capt. Daniel Whiting’s company, in Col. Asa Whitcomb’s regiment, for service as reinforcements to the North. A 27 November 1776 roll, dated Camp at Ticonderoga, lists him as ‘reported deserted June 24, 1776’.5

Is it undoubtedly he that served ‘1 mo. 3 days at Rhode Island on a secret expedition’ in Capt. Daniel Eames’ company, in Col. Benjamin Haws’ regiment. His company marched 29 September 1777.6

He was on a list, dated 8 July 1778 at Fort Arnold (West Point), of men raised in Middlesex County for the term of nine months from his arrival at Fishkill (NY).7 He enlisted on 29 June 1778 in the company of Capt. Amasa Soper, in Col. Thomas Marshall’s regiment. The January 1779 roll was dated West Point.8 He signed up for a six-month term in mid-1780 where he is ‘reported a negro’ and is listed on a descriptive roll at Springfield (MA):9

age: 26
stature: 5 ft. 8 in.
engaged for: Natick

By 25 October 1780, he had passed muster at Camp Totoway (NJ) under Brig. Gen. John Paterson.10

He was discharged from the six-months service on 5 December 1780.11A receipt, dated Boston 16 May 1782, records that he received a bounty to serve in the Continental Army for the term of three years.12

He married Dinah Pero of Cambridge (MA) in Natick (MA) on 2 February 1776.13 There is no record of any children.

Age: N/A  Description: 'mulatto'  Rank: Private Occupation: N/A  Status: N/A  Unit: Gerrish / Wood
Residence: Woburn, MA  Religion: N/A  Stationed: N/A

Nothing is known of the early life of Prince Sutton.

He joined the eight month's service from Woburn on 7 May 1775, in the company of Capt. John Wood in Col. Samuel Gerrish's regiment. His name is on a 27 May 1775 list of those men who took a loyalty oath, on a 16 July 1775 list of those who served on the main guard under Lt. Col. Loammi Baldwin, on the 1 August 1775 muster roll, and also on a 10 August 1775 return of men sick and absent dated Medford. His name is also shown on a September 1775 pay abstract, on an October 1775 return and on a 30 October 1775 receipt listing him as a 'mulatto'. He is shown in the same unit on a 28 December 1775 'receipt for money in lieu of bounty coat dated Medford'.

On 22 December 1775, he agreed to serve one extra month until the end of January 1776.

With Gen. Burgoyne preparing to advance on northern New York, the call once again went out for soldiers to meet this serious threat. Now residing in Charlestown, Sutton joined the Continental Army on 10 April 1777 for a three-year term in the company of Capt. Edmund Munroe, in Col. Timothy Bigelow's 15th Massachusetts regiment. This unit served at Saratoga, Valley Forge and Monmouth, where his Captain was killed. Payrolls for February to April 1779 place him in Providence. He was discharged 10 April 1780.

On 6 August 1780, he entered the service for duty in Rhode Island, in Capt. William Green's company in Col. Cyprian How's regiment. He was discharged on 1 November 1780 and allowed 80 miles travel.

His last record of service is a receipt dated Boston 27 March 1782 for bounty paid in Ward No. 5, Class No. 4 for a stint of three years.

Amos Tanner was undoubtedly the son of Rebecca Tanner and a brother to Joseph.¹

He enlisted on 3 May 1775 in the company of Capt. John Durkee, in Col. Israel Putnam's regiment. This company marched from Norwich CT to Cambridge shortly after the Lexington Alarm and was engaged in the Battle of Bunker Hill, stationed at the rail fence. He was discharged on 16 December 1775.²

There is no further record of service for him. The 1782 census of the Mohegan Tribe lists his mother:

Caesar Wallace was born in Africa circa 1738. Nothing is known of Caesar's life for nearly its first two decades.

On 23 April 1818 he applied for a U.S. pension, which was granted at the rate of $96.00 per year. In his pension application, he is described as being a 'man of colour'. Caesar stated that he was 'at the battle ... at Bunker Hill' but no record has been found in either the Massachusetts or New Hampshire records to verify his 1775 service. By his statement, his service at the battle is considered as proven.

In 1777 he enlisted from Newbury, Massachusetts, for three years or the duration of the war, into the 2nd New Hampshire regiment commanded by Col. George Reid. His company was commanded by Capt. Caleb Robinson. This unit saw extensive service including the battles of Hubbardton, Vermont and Saratoga, New York. Caesar mentions neither of these but does mention his involvement in the battles of:

- Monmouth, New Jersey, 28 June 1778
- Fort Herkimer, New York
- Newtown, New York, 29 August 1779 (Sullivan's Expedition against the Iroquois)
- Horseneck, Connecticut

Caesar served until 7 June 1783 when he was discharged at the New Windsor encampment of the Continental Army near the Hudson River just south of Newburgh, New York.

The 1790 census of Gilmanton (NH) lists him as head in a household of four free people of color.

At the time of his pension application, he was a resident of Meredith, Strafford County, New Hampshire. Local tradition places his residence on what is now Upper New Hampton Road on the farm surrounding the Piper Cemetery. His date of death is unknown. Local tradition gives his burial place (and that of his family) as Piper Cemetery but no gravestones for them exist.

Caesar married Katy _____, who was aged 75 and 'healthy' in 1820. Caesar and Katy had one known child:

1. Lucy born circa 1793 and still alive in 1820 and living in Caesar's household

1 Recollection of age in pension (USPE, Roll 2479, Pension# S43250). Wallace stated that he was 80 in his 1818 application, indicating a year of birth of 1738. However, in his 1820 application he stated his age as 90. The 1738 date seems more probable and is confirmed by SARG (#131484).

Nothing is known of the early life of John Wampee.

He is not listed on any known 1775 muster roll, but was surely at the Battle of Bunker Hill as he is recorded as having lost his gun there.²

There was a John Wampee who signed on the Galley Shark on 16 June 1776, under Capt. Thomas Stanton.³ There was also a John Wampee who received bounties from the Town of Pomfret from 1777 to 1779.⁴

Caesar Wetherbee was born circa 1735.¹

He enlisted from Stow, Massachusetts on 15 May 1775 into the company commanded by Capt. Oliver Parker, in Col. William Prescott’s regiment. He had 78 days continuous service to 1 August 1775 when a new roll was taken.² During the summer, his captain died and Lt. Nathaniel Sartell took command. In an order for a bounty coat dated ‘Camp at Cambridge’ on 31 October 1775, he was enrolled in Capt. Ephraim Corey’s company, Col. Prescott’s regiment.³

Caesar died at Boxborough, Massachusetts on 19 February 1808, at the approximate age of 73. The church record of his death lists him as ‘Black’.⁴

Cuff Whittemore was born circa 1751. Before the Revolution, he was called Cuff Cartwright (or De Carteret) and was the servant of William Whittemore. ‘He used to work by day among the farmers, slept in barns and lived almost anyhow’.

A local history describes his activity on 19 April 1775:

Cuff was on the hill with the Menotomy militia [under Capt. Benjamin Locke], of which Solomon Bowman was lieutenant, and on the opening of the fight at that point, which was evidently near the house of Jason Russell at Arlington, the negro acted cowardly, and in his alarm turned to run down the hill. But the lieutenant threatened to shoot him with a horse pistol, and pricked him in the leg with the point of his sword. This brought Cuff to his senses and the negro “about facing” fought through the contest, as the colonel [Col. Ebenezer Thompson, the narrator] said, like a wounded elephant, making two “cuss’d Britishers” bite the dust.

He the enlisted in the eight months’ service from Cambridge on 4 June 1775 in Capt. Benjamin Locke’s company, in Col. Thomas Gardner’s regiment. This company served in the Battle of Bunker Hill, where his Colonel was mortally wounded and Lt. Col. William Bond took over command. It is stated that Cuff:

... fought bravely in the redoubt. He had a ball through his hat on Bunker Hill, fought to the last, and when compelled to retreat, though wounded, the splendid arms of the British officers were prizes too tempting for him to come off empty handed, he seized the sword of one of them slain in the redoubt, and came off with the trophy, which in a few days he unromantically sold. He served faithfully through the war, with many hair-breadth ‘scapes from sword and pestilence.

An October 1775 descriptive roll at Prospect Hill describes him as a ‘negro’ and as follows:

age: 24
statute: 5 ft. 10 1/2 in.

His former master, William Whittemore, interceded for him in a request for wages in October 1775. On 1 December 1775, he was listed on an ‘order for bounty coat dated Prospect Hill’.

In 1776, he served for one year in Capt. Daniel Egery’s company, in Col. William Bond’s regiment. This unit served at Ticonderoga at the time the American Fleet under Gen. Benedict Arnold was defeated.
By 15 May 1777, he was living in Dartmouth (MA) and had enlisted in the Continental Army for three years under Capt. Isaac Pope, in Col. William Shepard’s regiment. This unit fought at Saratoga where Cuff Whittemore was taken prisoner ‘and ordered to take care of [Gen. Burgoyne’s] charger for a few moments [when] he mounted him and returned to the American Camp’. A local history gives further details:

... just before the capture of [Burgoyne] at Saratoga, he was ordered to take the General’s favorite horse one morning to the brook to water. The American and British armies lay on each side of it, half a mile or so apart. After the horse had drank sufficiently, Cuff concluded to join the Americans, and dashing through the brook, while the British bullets flew thick at him, reached our lines.

On 1 April 1818 he applied for a U.S pension, which was granted. In June 1820 he had to reapply in order to prove his need. He described himself as a ‘pauper’ in Charlestown, ‘without any estate’, and ‘very infirm and has no family and is unable to support himself’.

Cuff Whittemore died in Charlestown (MA) on 26 January 1826. He is one of a very few men of color who was honored with an obituary notice.
