The summer of 1936 was an exciting one for the newly established Shenandoah National Park. The President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, had announced that he would make the dedication speech in July. The boys of the Civilian Conservation Corps were scrambling to build trails and landscape Skyline Drive. The first rangers came on duty, and James R. Lassiter became the first Superintendent. The Resettlement Administration appropriated funds to build houses for displaced residents. And all the while, visitors poured into their new park—nearly 700,000 in 1936, well on the way to the record breaking (for any national park) one million the next year.

Fast-forward 75 years—the summer of 2011 is an exciting one for Shenandoah as well! We are celebrating 75 years of commitment and rededicating ourselves to the next 75 years of stewardship for the generations to come. Preservation has taken on new meaning in the decades since Roosevelt dedicated Shenandoah “to this and to succeeding generations.” The partnerships we build today will be the key to the stewardship of the future, not just within Shenandoah’s boundaries, but across the nation. And the “succeeding generations” Roosevelt referred to? That’s you! So join us as we rededicate Shenandoah to YOU and look forward to a new “succeeding generation.”

Skyline Drive Work in Progress

As you travel Skyline Drive you may notice the results of work we’ve been doing on the road and at overlooks. You’ll see newly reconstructed stone walls and restored historic guiderails. Many of the overlooks have been refurbished, and if it gets foggy, you’ll be grateful for the newly painted road lines. Work will continue this summer so you may encounter some delays where one-way traffic is necessary. A few of the overlooks will be closed while they get a face-lift and the campground roads will be paved. Delays will be as brief as possible and work will be suspended on the weekends in most cases.
For the next live “Birds of Prey” program, check the schedule on page 8.

Get to Know Shenandoah’s Partners

Behind every great park are some great partners and Shenandoah is no exception! The dedicated staff and volunteers of our partner organizations have contributed time, talent, and money to help Shenandoah fulfill its mission. Get to know our fantastic support team.

www.patc.net
The Potomac Appalachian Trail Club (PATC) was founded in 1927 even before the park was established. PATC volunteers built the stretch of the Appalachian Trail (AT) that runs through Shenandoah. The club’s mission is to protect and maintain the AT and associated lands. With more AT than any other national park, Shenandoah’s 101-mile stretch is a testament to this dedicated partner. PATC volunteers work thousands of hours each year to maintain Shenandoah’s trail system and six overnight cabins, as well as shelters and huts. To learn more about this valued partner, visit the official PATC website.

www.snpbooks.org
If you stop by one of the park’s visitor centers, you’ll meet the Shenandoah National Park Association (SNPA) staff in the bookstore and you’ll see firsthand that they are fulfilling their mission to increase understanding, appreciation, and stewardship of the park. The Association, founded in 1950, is headed by a volunteer board and managed by a small, very dedicated staff. They develop and sell items that will increase your appreciation and enjoyment of the park, using the profits to support the park’s interpretation and educational programs. Become a member of SNPA and support the park while receiving great discounts.

www.snptrust.org
Established in 2004, the Shenandoah National Park Trust is the official non-profit community-building and fundraising partner for Shenandoah National Park. The Trust is dedicated to protecting our park’s magnificent natural and cultural resources, enhancing your experience in Shenandoah, and building a community committed to enriching Shenandoah’s future. The money the Trust raises has funded several important projects, including search and rescue equipment for Old Rag Mountain and the Ranger Explorer program. To learn more about how you can become involved, visit the Trust’s official website.

Partners for Wildlife

2011 marks the 25th anniversary of a unique partnership between Shenandoah National Park and the Wildlife Center of Virginia (WCV), a non-profit wildlife hospital in Waynesboro, VA. The center places raptors on a permanent-loan basis for the park’s popular “Birds of Prey” program. WCV staff provide routine medical exams, beak and talon trimming, and acute care for these birds, all free of charge to the park. Over the years, the park’s educational raptors have reached more than 100,000 visitors with a vital wildlife conservation message shared by both organizations. Learn more about WCV at www.wildlifecenter.org.

For the next live “Birds of Prey” program, check the schedule on page 8.

Welcome to Shenandoah National Park.
We’re excited that you’re here during the park’s 75th Anniversary. Along with our neighbors, we are celebrating the vision of the energetic people who answered the call to action that brought about Shenandoah’s establishment.

The idea of a national park in the northern Blue Ridge was championed by a group of local businessmen who believed the park would benefit Virginia’s economy while preserving the natural beauty of the area. So, the park’s anniversary is also a celebration of our neighbors and their accomplishments. Look on page 4 for some of the great events that are going on in nearby communities. There are more events on the 75th Anniversary website: www.CelebrateShenandoah.org/

I hope you have a wonderful time enjoying your National Park. Nothing soothes the soul or excites the spirit quite like time spent in nature. Whether you hike deep into the forest or contemplate the view from an overlook, I hope that, as President Franklin D. Roosevelt said in his dedication speech, you will find “recreation and re-creation” in Shenandoah. And, I hope you will look forward, with me, to the next 75 years and beyond, as our generation answers the call to action to support our national parks and inspire the next generation of stewards.

From the Superintendent

Old Rag and the Piedmont was created by artist Kevin A. Adams in celebration of Shenandoah’s 75th Anniversary. Shenandoah is a favorite subject of Adams’ paintings and he is donating 100% of the proceeds of the sale of these signed and numberted prints to the park’s anniversary celebration. Unframed limited edition prints are available at visitor centers and online at www.CelebrateShenandoah.org.
What's Up with the Air?

People often come to Shenandoah National Park for the fresh mountain air. We have lots of it! But sometimes there’s an added component to the air that’s not so good for us. That’s ozone.

In the stratosphere, ozone is good: it is a colorless gas which shields the Earth from the sun’s rays. But ground-level ozone is different: it is created in warm, sunny conditions by a chemical reaction between pollutants, many of which are created by the burning of fossil fuels such as coal and gasoline. Strong sunlight and hot weather can combine to cause harmful amounts of ozone to form. If concentrations are high (usually May-September), ground-level ozone threatens plants, animals, and humans. Some people may have respiratory problems when exercising strenuously.

We can all do something to help. Shenandoah has already replaced a number of gasoline-powered vehicles with hybrids, and we hope to change over to other alternative-fuel cars, trucks, golf carts, and lawn mowers. Our “to-do list” includes retro-fitting sensors and controls on heating/cooling systems to optimize energy consumption, replacing appliances with Energy Star-rated units, and installing a vertical wind turbine and photo-voltaic cells.

What can you do? Think about transportation options that could reduce the number of trips you make in your car. Programmable thermostats and replacing large appliances with Energy Star-rated ones can help, too.

Ticks – What You Need to Know

Several species of ticks are common in Shenandoah and there is a risk of tick-borne diseases if one bites you. It is important to take precautions and to be aware of the risks.

When you are in tick habitat:

• Wear light colored clothing, long sleeves, and long pants with pants’ legs tucked into socks.

• Do frequent tick checks of yourself, children, and pets. Always check for ticks after any outdoor activities.

• Some insect repellents can be effective against ticks, but they should be used with caution.

If you find a tick attached to you, remove the tick and clean the bite site. If you become ill after a tick bite, even weeks later, see a health care provider. Some species of ticks are so small that you may never see them, so if you become ill after visiting an area where ticks are common, you should inform your health care provider of the possibility of a tick-borne disease.

Remember—deer ticks are hard to see. They are about the size of a pinhead!

Please Don’t Feed the Animals!

When animals associate humans with food they lose their fear and seek out people.

• This makes them more susceptible to being hit by cars or killed by poachers.

• They are more likely to raid campsites and destroy property.

• They become dangerous and must be relocated or destroyed.

This is why there are regulations for storing food properly and fines for feeding wildlife. Nothing good can come of ignoring food storage and wildlife feeding regulations!

Living Green

“Reduce, reuse, recycle”—Often called “The 3 R’s,” this short motto sums up a few simple things we can all do to “live green” and lessen our impact on the earth today and in the years to come.

How can you “live green” when you are on vacation? In the park there are places for you to recycle, reduce, and reuse.

To recycle, continue to use the bins provided for glass, plastic, and aluminum in the park campgrounds, lodges, and visitor centers.

To reduce, take only one copy of this guide, park brochures, and maps.

To reuse or recycle this guide, park brochures, and maps, bring your used copies to a ranger at a visitor center or entrance station. The material will be reused by other park visitors or, if worn out, will be recycled.

Leave No Trace!

Ensuring that future generations can enjoy Shenandoah National Park is everyone’s responsibility. Follow the Leave No Trace guidelines to help take care of Shenandoah. Learn more at www.LNT.org.

1. Plan Ahead and Prepare
2. Travel and Camp on Durable Surfaces
3. Dispose of Waste Properly
4. Leave What You Find
5. Minimize Campfire Impacts

From Inaugural to Rededication and Beyond...

Shenandoah began a year-long celebration of its 75th Anniversary with an inaugural ceremony last November at McCormick’s Gap, the southernmost overlook on Skyline Drive. Great Smokies National Park and Blue Ridge Parkway celebrated their 75th Anniversaries in 2009 and 2010, passing the torch to Shenandoah for 2011. The ceremony featured the “Parade of Decades” marking a major park accomplishment for each decade since its authorization in 1926.

On June 25, Superintendent Martha Bogle rededicated Shenandoah in commemoration of the park’s original dedication July 3, 1936. The morning ceremony included a concert by the “President’s Own” U.S. Marine Band playing some of the same selections it played at the original dedication, as well as excerpts from President Franklin Roosevelt’s dedication speech performed by local actor Ken Stroup as Roosevelt. Deputy Director of the National Park Service Peggy O’Dell, Regional Director Dennis Redenbach, and Warren County Administrator Doug Stanley also spoke.

The goal of the 75th Anniversary commemoration has been to strengthen the alliance between the park and its partners and communities in anticipation of the next 75 years. The celebration culminates with a conference in November. Park managers, partners, and community leaders will discuss shared values, goals, and strategies to ensure the continuation of the legacy begun decades ago by area leaders and visionaries.

The Celebration Continues
Shenandoah National Park and its neighbors and partners continue to celebrate the park’s 75th Anniversary with special events and activities.

Entries to the “75 Reasons to Visit” game are arriving daily. Get your copy at park facilities, area attractions, or download one at the official 75th website: www.celebrateshenandoah.org. Have fun discovering the answers to 75 questions about the park and the surrounding area, fill out the brochure form, and submit it by November 1 to be eligible for prizes donated by area businesses and attractions.

Several communities and partners have celebrated with photography contests. Winners will be showcased at Skyland Resort’s registration building beginning with a “gallery opening” on September 24. Photos will be on display through October 6.
Celebrating 75 Years
We’re celebrating milestones of the past, and building coalitions for the future. Join us for both!

Celebrate
…the vision realized

Scenery is going to be Virginia’s next cash crop!
– William Carson, 1932

In the early 1920s a group of Shenandoah Valley businessmen had a vision for the future. The establishment of a national park in Virginia’s Blue Ridge Mountains was the hallmark of that vision. They believed a national park so close to urban areas would be a tremendous draw, bringing tourists’ dollars to the Commonwealth while preserving the natural beauty of the area. In the decades since the park’s 1935 establishment, millions of visitors have passed through its gates to enjoy the beauty and recreation Shenandoah offers. And, just as those visionaries predicted, tourism is a major industry in the region, pumping millions of dollars into local economies.

(right) Skyline Drive’s popularity was immediate, even in 1935, before paving and landscaping were complete.

Reflect
…on our evolving purpose

Making the most of the accomplishments of those long-ago visionaries has taken on new meaning in the ensuing 75 years. Shenandoah’s promises to its nation include preserving its resources so that they pass, unimpaired, to the next generation. Who could have predicted the challenges that promise brings? Understanding Shenandoah’s varied resources is a complex undertaking. Over the decades, Shenandoah has committed to a scientific approach to stewardship, implementing programs to identify, monitor, and care for the resources it is responsible for.

(left) A continued commitment to a scientific approach to stewardship will give us the ability to respond to emerging threats like climate change, insects and diseases that threaten our forests and animals, and the effects of air and water pollution.

Look Ahead
…to forever

What will the next 75 years bring and how will Shenandoah respond? Building partnerships and inspiring stewardship will be vital. Just as those long-ago visionaries answered a call to action for the establishment of Shenandoah National Park, the American people will provide the innovation, creativity, and support for Shenandoah’s future. The resources we protect include the values that Shenandoah’s visitors seek—solitude; clear, dark night skies; pure soundscapes; and views unaffected by human use. Protecting these requires the commitment of many—neighbors, business and industry, as well as park staff. Strong alliances with park neighbors will allow us to meet the future with economically and environmentally sound strategies. Continued collaboration with universities and other agencies will strengthen our understanding of the science of preservation.

(right) Inspiring young people to love their national parks and understand their importance will help prepare them to become the next generation of stewards.

Historian Babs Bodin, former director of the Museum of American Presidents, presents an informative narrative while desserts from the First Ladies’ favorite recipes and a variety of teas are served.

Summerfest
Summer in Shenandoah is the perfect time for a day of singers, dancers, old-fashioned games, and historic “Cake Walks.” Local artisans will be on hand to showcase their talents and unique products. Summerfest means fun, food, and entertainment for the whole family. Admission is free.

Culinary Events
The Shenandoah Seasonings Culinary Events are an experience for your senses! Shenandoah’s Executive Chef and area vintners will lead guests through a delectable 4-course menu of mouth-watering items paired with wines. And our weekly wine tastings are a fun way to relax and sample some lovely Virginia wines.

Blackberry Delight
Those who lived in what is now Shenandoah National Park picked the berries and made jams and jellies from them much as we still do today. Big Meadows Wayside staff will be using blackberries in all kinds of foods such as pulled pork with a blackberry BBQ sauce, cobbler, jellies and syrup, and home-made blackberry ice cream. There’ll be dulcimer and bluegrass music, cloggers, craft vendors and activities. A great way to spend the day with the whole family! Admission is free.
