Attending a Ranger-led Program will truly enhance your visit to Shenandoah National Park. You’ll discover the stories of Shenandoah’s past, or take a walk through a mountain meadow, or meet face-to-face an owl and other birds of prey. You may ride down to Rapidan Camp, where President Hoover and his wife spent happy weekends relaxing and working. Perhaps you’ll climb up Stony Man Mountain to the amazing view at the top, or walk the accessible Limberlost Trail with its abundant mountain laurel, wildflowers in season, and unique history. These programs and many more are all led by Rangers who will help you make a closer and more personal connection with this very special place that is Shenandoah.

For a complete schedule of Ranger Programs, see the back page of this issue.

American as the Declaration of Independence: that the most magnificent and sacred places in our land belong not to royalty or the rich, but to everyone and for all time. All that is required of us is that we visit this property once in a while and check it out, and that we pass it on to our children.”

This film is filled with the stories of people from all walks of life who have sought their parks in times of joy and in times of trouble and made incredible personal connections and memories that last a lifetime. The film is a reminder of the significance and value of our national parks.

So, thanks for stopping by to check on your property! We hope your time here becomes one of those memories that last a lifetime.

See the Park . . . Really See the Park

Pets are permitted in the park—but only if they do not disturb other visitors or the animals who call this park home. To ensure this, keep your pet on a one-foot leash at all times. If you need a leash, you can find one in the book-store section of the visitor centers.

Pets are not permitted on Ranger-led programs. In addition, to ensure your pet’s safety and the safety of others, pets are not permitted on the following trails:
- Fox Hollow Trail (mile 4.6)
- Traces Trail (mile 22.2)
- Stony Man Trail (mile 41.7)
- Limberlost Trail (mile 43)
- Dark Hollow Falls Trail (mile 50.7)
- Story of the Forest Trail (mile 51)
- Bearfence Rock Scramble (mile 56.4)
- Frazier Discovery Trail (mile 79.5)
- Old Rag Ridge Trail
- Old Rag Saddle Trail

These trails total only about 14 miles! Since the park has over 500 miles of trails, you and your pet on a leash can have a wonderful time hiking in the park.
Welcome!

New Superintendent Martha Bogle welcomes you to Shenandoah National Park. Ms. Bogle arrived in the park last fall and is looking forward to seeing lots of summer visitors enjoying Shenandoah. “I encourage you to participate in one or more of Shenandoah’s Ranger-led programs and walks. I feel confident that your visit will be much more rewarding by doing so.”

Born and raised in Tennessee, Ms. Bogle began her career as a seasonal Park Ranger in Great Smoky Mountains National Park. She brings to her new position over 30 years of experience in 11 National Park Service sites.

On the Rocks . . .

The many rocks and rock formations in Shenandoah are old—granite over a billion years, greenstone and quartzite 500 million or more years. Rocks, like the plants and animals, are protected in the park, so you should not take a rock away: it belongs here! Moreover, rock outcrop and cliff areas, so popular with visitors, support rare plant and animal populations.

A comprehensive study of these areas (2005-2007), called the Rock Outcrop Management Project (ROMP), is leading to a plan that will help the park protect natural resources while still providing for visitor enjoyment of cliffs and rock outcrops.

Skyline Drive

Skyline Drive, the famed roadway through Shenandoah National Park, dates from the 1930s. Some sections are now being resurfaced—in the North District from mile 0 to mile 10.4 and in the Central District from mile 31.5 to mile 65.5. During working hours, some sections of the Drive may be reduced to one-lane traffic and you may have to wait a bit, perhaps up to 15 minutes.

But tomorrow is coming! The reconstructed Drive will be ready for the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the park in 2011.
Humans can be dangerous to wild animals! If you care about the deer and bears and other wild animals in the park, you won’t feed them.

You may see a black bear in the park, especially during the summer. Generally, bears will run away when they detect humans, and park staff work hard at keeping them wild. However, a small number of bears around campgrounds or picnic grounds may become habituated to humans—and to human food, if they have gotten it.

The deer in the park are many times more numerous than bears. You may be tempted to offer them human food. However, although they seem tame to you, they are in fact wild animals. They have their own sources of food within the park, food which is not bad for their digestive systems, as human food can be. What’s more, being fed will cause deer, too, to lose their fear of humans.

With easy access to human food, deer and black bears may become nuisances. When this happens, the bears will have to be relocated and the deer, unfortunately, may have to be destroyed.

Don’t feed the wild animals in the park!

Living Green in the Park

“We reduce, Reuse, Recycle”

Often called “The 3 Rs,” this short motto sums up a few simple things we can all do to “live green” and lessen our impact on the earth. You probably recycle glass and plastic at home and paper at your office or school.

But what about “living green” when you are on vacation? Here in Shenandoah, you can do many things. Whether it’s beginning your day with a cup of shade-grown coffee, wearing a fleece jacket made from recycled plastic bottles, or simply walking rather than driving, there are choices you can make to live green in the park.

As for the 3 Rs, the park has provided places for you to recycle for many years. This year there are two more options— to reduce and reuse.

To recycle, continue to use the bins provided for glass, plastic, and aluminum in the park campgrounds, lodges, and visitor centers.

To reduce, take only one copy of this guide, park brochures, and maps.

To reuse or recycle this guide, park brochures, and maps, bring your used copies to a visitor center, entrance station, or campground office. Give them to a park ranger or, if worn out, will be recycled.

Reducing the number of brochures the park prints, reusing them when possible, and recycling the rest will save paper, trees, and thousands of gallons of water.

What’s with the Air?

Here in Shenandoah National Park you’ll usually breathe fresh mountain air. However, sometimes (not often) the air in the park has high ozone levels.

In the stratosphere, ozone is good: it is a colorless gas which shields the earth from the sun’s ultraviolet rays. But ground-level ozone is different: it is created in warm, sunny conditions by a chemical reaction between pollutants. If concentrations are high (usually May-September), ground-level ozone threatens plants, animals, and humans. Some people may have respiratory problems when exercising strenuously.*

The National Park Service provides an Ozone Advisory System to alert you when high levels are detected. You can then adjust your outdoor activity as needed.

* Call (540) 999-3500 (May-September) to learn if ozone levels are high in the park. Or, visit the website tracking ozone information: www.deq.virginia.gov/airquality/51130003.html/

Deer Ticks – What You Need to Know

Deer ticks transmit Lyme Disease. Some cases are documented each year in the park and, of course, elsewhere in the East, including your backyards. How can you keep from getting Lyme or other tick-borne disease? The best ways:

• Conduct frequent clothing and body checks for ticks.
• Tuck your pants legs in under your socks.
• Wear light-colored clothing (to more easily spot ticks).
• Remember—deer ticks are hard to see. They are about the size of a pinhead!

If you develop a rash or flu-like symptoms, see your doctor immediately.

More information at www.cdc.gov (search “tick-borne illness”)

Emerald Ash Borer

Visitors are asked not to bring firewood into the park.

The Emerald Ash Borer, a non-native beetle from Asia discovered in the U.S. in 2002, feeds on ash trees with devastating results—and ash trees are a significant component of the forest in Shenandoah National Park. This beetle is now found in sections of several states, including Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. To prevent the beetle from entering the park on firewood, you are asked to gather firewood from dead and down wood inside the park or to purchase firewood from local sources.

If you have already entered the park with firewood from other than local sources, you are asked to burn it all immediately and thoroughly.

To Keep Them for Tomorrow – Don’t Feed Them!
SNPA . . . Do You Know Us?

The Shenandoah National Park Association (SNPA) wants to help you enjoy your visit to the park. We invite you to stop at our Park Stores—in Byrd Visitor Center (milepost 51) and Dickey Ridge Visitor Center (mile 4.6).

Today the Association sells a variety of items that will help you enjoy and learn more about Shenandoah: books and maps for planning hikes and guides and nature guides for learning more about the trees, birds, wildflowers, and wildlife. A Junior Ranger backpack filled with field guides, magnifying lens, binoculars, and an activity booklet is available for rental for the day. GPS Ranger, a GPS-based video and audio tour of four different hikes in Shenandoah, features historic images and footage. Profits from sales go to the park and are used by SNPA to support many interpretive and educational activities, including printing of this visitor guide.

SNPA, organized in 1950, has worked closely with the park since then. The Association co-sponsors many of the park’s special events, like Wildflower Weekend, Wilderness Weekend, the annual CCC Reunion, and the educational seminars. If you want to learn more about SNPA or become a member, just ask at the sales desk at the visitor centers. Members receive a 20% discount on purchases at the park visitor centers and receive special discounts from the park concessioner at restaurants and gift shops and from Luray Caverns. You can check out the SNPA website or call SNPA at 540-999-3582 for more information or to order items.

What’s New at SNPA?

- A Works Progress Administration (WPA) lithograph of Shenandoah modeled on the famous 1930s series.
- 2010 Shenandoah National Park Calendar—our annual scenic splendor of Shenandoah images.
- Scavenger Hike Adventures (a hiking guide for all ages)—a new and exciting way to experience the park!

Get Them from SNPA!

To celebrate the 100th anniversary of the National Park Service in 2016, noted filmmaker Ken Burns and production partner Dayton Duncan have created a documentary film to be shown on PBS in the fall: The National Parks: America’s Best Idea.

SNPA is now selling the soundtrack of the film at Park Stores and online. In the fall, SNPA will sell the 12-hour film on DVD and also a companion coffee table book. SNPA is accepting pre-orders for each at a discounted rate through August 17, 2009. Inquire at a visitor center or call SNPA. Or shop online at our website. These items can be purchased at Park Stores along Skyline Drive or online at www.snpbooks.org

In 2011 Shenandoah National Park will celebrate its 75th anniversary! In a three-part series, Shenandoah Overlook offers a glimpse into a few events of 75 years ago. This 2009 issue looks back to 1934, before there was a park.

IN 1934 . . .

Conflict: The Commonwealth of Virginia was buying properties through eminent domain, so that the park could be established. Robert H. Via, unwilling to give up his land, took his case to the U.S. Supreme Court. Some feared that “there wouldn’t be any national park here in 1934, maybe not in 1935, or ever.” But the Supreme Court dismissed Via’s appeal on November 25.

Activity: The “boys” of the CCC (the Civilian Conservation Corps, President Roosevelt’s program to provide work for young men during the Depression) had been hard at work in the proposed park for a year: planting trees and bushes, building cabins and shelters, cutting trails, constructing fire towers, removing and then using the wood of the blight-killed chestnut trees, building stone guard walls along Skyline Drive, and much more.

Achievement: On September 15, Skyline Drive from Thornton Gap to Swift Run Gap—the central section of the proposed park—was opened for public use. Marys Rock Tunnel, roughly completed in 1932, was being widened to provide room for a pedestrian walkway and a gutter. Still no park—but this section of the proposed park—was opened for public use. Soaring Site” for gliders. The CCC constructed a run-

Nature: There were few, if any, deer or bears. However, visitors enjoyed wide-open valley views from newly-built overlooks.

Facilities: There were as yet few facilities along Skyline Drive. Visitors were a hardy lot! However, George Freeman Pollock was still operating Skyland, the summer resort which had opened in the early 1890s.

Rescue: CCC boys battled through six-foot snow drifts on mountain roads to carry a very ill park resident to a hospital.

Fun: Big Meadows had been designated a “National Soaring Site” for gliders. The GCC constructed a runway and hangar in the meadow for sailplanes, where one “flying in formation” demonstration drew attention worldwide, featuring sailplanes which reached 9,000 feet. Gliders were towed and released at Big Meadows, ultimately drifting to the Page Valley.

Another popular sport: downhill skiing in winter.

The 2010 issue of Shenandoah Overlook will look back at 1935, when the park was about to be born!
There's something for everyone. If the day is clear, choose one of the hikes to a beautiful vista. A cloudy day is great for hiking down to one of 16 waterfalls. If you just want to wander, Big Meadows is full of interesting plants and critters. Looking for a shady walk in the woods? Along a trickling stream, maybe? We've got that, too. Your best bet is to stop by a visitor center, campground office, or entrance station and ask for a map to the destination of your choice. Rangers can suggest areas to suit the weather and your physical abilities.

A stop at the visitor centers is a must (miles 4.6 and 51). There you'll find exhibits, films, Rangers to answer your questions, and all the other information you need.

Don't forget to ask about kids' activities, too. The many Ranger-led programs include hikes, talks, and evening campfire programs. Kids ages 7-12 learn and have fun while becoming a Junior Ranger, and those ages 13 and up discover the plants, animals, and history of the park while doing the activities in the Ranger Explorer Guides. Also check out the ARAMARK special events on page 7.

An early morning walk around Big Meadows (milepost 51) is a great way to see and hear Shenandoah's wildlife.

Does the sky seem bigger than usual? Without the intrusion of buildings and night lighting, just gazing at the stars or watching the sun rise and set is a whole new experience. June through August, sunrise is usually 5:45 to 6:30 a.m. and sunset is 8:30 to 9:40 p.m.

Evening programs are a coveted National Park tradition and the perfect way to end a perfect day in Shenandoah National Park!

Check out the back cover for a list of Ranger Programs. You can see the birds of prey, explore the meadow, or get a taste of the Appalachian Trail. There's more—and seeing some of Shenandoah with a Ranger is the best of all!

Like all national parks, Shenandoah has the mission of preserving what is here for generations to come. Park Rangers, then, have the job of looking to the future, looking ahead. Looking ahead may mean looking back. For example, last year park cultural resource specialists looked to the past to restore the façade of Dickey Ridge Visitor Center, which is part of the National Historic Landmark designation of Skyline Drive. Skyline Drive itself is an example of the landscape work of the Civilian Conservation Corps in the 1930s, so Shenandoah has begun to rehabilitate some of the historic overlooks along the Drive by repaving them and repairing the stone walls.

Park landscape architects also look to the past to see the original purpose of these overlooks. They may clear an overlook vista so that visitors may enjoy the views originally intended; they may plant trees and shrubs to restore a particular landscape to its original appearance. Park botanists are working to preserve what is left of the largest meadow in the park (at Big Meadows), whose pathways are always popular with visitors and deer. Park biologists work to re-introduce threatened peregrine falcons to nesting areas on high, rocky cliff sites.

Of course, natural resource preservation for the future is often not about restoring resources to past conditions: ecosystems are dynamic and usually cannot be frozen in time. For example, the park will change as our forest responds to disturbances caused by storms and fire. Or natural resource management may mean removing or mitigating human-caused change, as when park foresters work to control damaging defoliators like the gypsy moth or the hemlock woolly adelgid.

Whatever their job, though, park scientists and other rangers look ahead—to Shenandoah’s 75th anniversary celebration in 2011 and to years far beyond—as they work (often “behind the scenes”) to preserve this park for future generations.

Looking Ahead at Shenandoah . . .

The official Park concessioner, ARAMARK, offers 286 rooms ranging from quaint, comfortable cabins to the more traditional style rooms and suites. Some of the rooms face west toward the Shenandoah Valley and some are situated in wooded areas. There are a limited number of pet-friendly rooms available at both Skyland Resort and Big Meadows Lodge. Cooking is not permitted in the rooms or grounds but designated picnic areas are within a short distance of both properties. Full service restaurants featuring regional cuisine and taprooms with limited menu fare and free nightly entertainment are available to all visitors.

Lewis Mountain features 10 rustic cabins and 1 tent cabin with an adjacent covered patio, fire pit, and picnic table for outdoor cooking. There is no refrigeration so guests must provide their own coolers and food as well as utensils.

Backcountry Camping

Most of Shenandoah National Park is open to backcountry camping. Permits are required and are available free from park headquarters, visitor centers, and most entrance stations, as well as at the north and south entry points for the Appalachian Trail, and Old Rag Fee Station. Eight trailside huts along the Appalachian Trail are available for long distance hikers. These huts are operated by the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club (PATC). Other trail shelters are for day use only.

Six locked, primitive cabins, maintained by the PATC, are located in the park. The cabins are equipped with mattresses, blankets, and cookware. Some cabins will accommodate as many as 11 persons. To get additional information or to make reservations, call PATC at (703) 242-0693 or (703) 242-0315 between 7 and 9 p.m. Monday-Thursday or between 12 and 2 p.m. Thursday-Friday. Or write to the club: Potomac Appalachian Trail Club 118 Park Street, SE Vienna, VA 22180 www.potomacappalachian.org
