INTRODUCTION

This report has been prepared to satisfy the research needs as enumerated in the Historical Resource Study Proposal ANTI-H-4, Historic Structure Reports on the Dorsey Farm, Smoke House, the Piper Farm Slave Quarters and the Spielman Farm Spring House, Antietam National Battlefield Site.

Each of these buildings was heavily involved, as were the others of their farm complex, in the battle of Antietam, September 17, 1862, in which Maj.-Gen. George B. McClellan turned back the invading Confederate host under General Robert E. Lee. Around these buildings the storm of battle broke in almost unparalleled fury as the Federal command attempted to crush alternately the Confederate left, involving the Mumma (Spielman) Farm, the center, involving the Mumma and Piper Farms, and the Confederate right, involving the Sherrick (Dorsey) Farm.

From daybreak to sunset the battle raged in unrelenting desperation through cornfields, orchards, woodlands, and meadows, piling high the dead by the thousands along fences, roadways, rock ledges, and around farm buildings.

How the battle affected each of the farms and the subject buildings has been explored in some detail in "Battle Brief"; the identity of the owners in "Family Data"; successive ownership in "Chain of Title"; and construction and alteration in "Construction and Structural Change." Supplementing each subject farm is an "Appendix" and a section entitled "Maps and Illustrations."

All three studies have been prepared as separate entities in one bound volume and, in the interest of historical identity, war-time names of the farms have been used throughout the report.

Each subject structure here covered is the original though each has undergone structural change in varying degree. Least affected of all is the "Smoke House" of the Sherrick Farm.

In the preparation of the report, chief reliance has been placed on primary sources:

1. The War of the Rebellion: A Compilation of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies Prepared under the Direction of the Secretary of War . . . Series I vol XIX In Two Parts-Part I-Reports Washington: Government Printing Office 1887.

   These reports, frequently prepared in considerable detail, are indispensable in establishing battle significance of the subject farms.

2. The Carman (Ezra Ayres) Papers

   (Manuscript Room, Library of Congress.)

   These papers include an exhaustive study of the Battle of Antietam prepared by a participant, Colonel Ezra A. Carman, who commanded the 13th New Jersey in the attack on the left conducted by Maj.-Gen. Joseph Mansfield's 12th Corps. He was heavily engaged in the Dunkard Church sector supporting, on the right, Brig.-Gen. George S. Greene's brigade. Commenting on the regiment's participation Brig.-Gen. George H. Gordon writes: "This regiment, also for the first time this day under fire, moved boldly in and in an orderly manner toward General Greene's position, and I am much gratified to report that the general has spoken to me of their conduct in terms of high commendation." (The War of the Rebellion, Series 1, Vol. 19, Part 1, p. 496.)

In 1894 Carman prepared the historical documentation for the 14 Antietam Board Troop Position Maps that were based on a special field survey by E. B. Cope and drawn by Charles H. Durand. These maps which were used as the guide to the marking of the battlefield, serve as a basic battle reference in this report.

In preparing his map documentation, Carman corresponded extensively with surviving officers of participating units who were furnished sections of the maps pertinent to their unit participation. They then delineated, as best they could from memory and from visits to the field, their specific battle positions. A number of these manuscript maps appear in the report with special reference to fighting in and about the Mumma and Piper farms. As such they give fresh intimacy to the role of these farms in battle interpretation.

Sections of the Antietam Board Map have also been used to show the position of the separate buildings in the farm complex. This is true on the Mumma and Piper Farms. On the Sherrick Farm the relationship is best shown in a contemporary photograph by A. Gardner.

3. The Court of Claims

(a) Henry C. Mumma and Samuel Mumma, Jr. Executors of Samuel Mumma Deceased vs. The United States -No. 334 Congressional Case

(b) Henry Piper vs. The United States -No. 445 Congressional Case December Term, 1886-87

(c) Victor H. Newcomer Adm. of Joseph Sherrick Deceased -No. 42,237 Reported Dec. 29, 1876

(See: Diplomatic, Legal, and Fiscal Records Division, National Archives and Records Service, Washington, D. C.)

These claims are invaluable not only for the detailed information they provide on battle impact on the subject buildings but also for the intimate glimpse they give of the socio-economic fabric of the way of life of the well-to-do German farmer of the Antietam Valley.

4. Family Data

For information on the Mumma family we are particularly indebted to Mrs. Virginia Hildebrand, great-granddaughter of Simon Mumma. Mrs. Hildebrand, who lives in Hagerstown, Maryland, has graciously made available family photographs and documents for reproduction. Of special interest are the letters, of James F. Clark, dated New Bern, North Carolina, March 19, 1906, and of Simon Mumma, dated Sharpsburg, Maryland, March 22, 1906, relative to the wartime burning of the Mumma house and barn. Seldom, if ever, has the wartime destruction of a building been described in such intimate detail by a battle participant and family member.

Particularly valuable to the architectural study of the Piper Farm "Slave Quarters" are two postwar photographs copied through the courtesy of Mr. S. Webster Piper, Hagerstown, Maryland, son of Ellsworth Piper, who was born on the farm in the spring of 1862. One photograph is of the 1880 period, the other 1912-14. By comparing the two it is possible to quite closely pinpoint significant structural changes in the building--first in the construction of an 8' extension and second in raising the roof of the structure.

No close descendants of the Sherricks were found in the community. Limited information, however, of a pertinent nature was found in deeds and in the Sherrick Claim for war damage.

5. Court Records

The Court records in Hagerstown, Maryland, and the sources in the Hall of Records, Annapolis, Maryland, were indispensable in establishing the chain of title on the subject properties. Appreciation is expressed for the assistance received from County Engineer H. Seibert, Assistant Clerk Agnes Hartman, and the law firm of Crossley and Latimer of Hagerstown, who made available to the writer their file on the Sherrick estate.

This search revealed significant evidence relative to the period of construction of the subject buildings. In all three instances Mumma, Piper, and Sherrick appear to have purchased established eighteenth century farms--Mumma on May 6, 1796; Piper on August 29, 1845 (original patent by John Elwick August 4, 1742); and Sherrick on May 23, 1796.

Appreciation is expressed to Miss Susan Nettles, Archivist II of the Hall of Records, for the helpful assistance rendered in patent search with special reference to the Piper Farm.

6. Photographs and Sketches

Of special value to the Mumma "Spring House" study and the Sherrick "Smoke House" study are the A. Gardner photographs taken in 1862, the glass negatives of which are in the Library of Congress. These photographs of exceptional clarity are most revealing in architectural detail. The one clearly establishes that the wartime roof of the Mumma "Spring House" was completely destroyed by battle, as is substantiated by Waud's sketch, while the other shows a shingle roof on the Sherrick "Smoke House" so different in design and length as to definitely establish that the existing shingles on the house are not original.

Special appreciation is expressed to Mr. John R. Winters of Middletown, Maryland, for his kindness in loaning the writer the manuscript volume, "Antietam," prepared by the late Fred Wilder Cross, of South Royalston, Massachusetts. Born September 15, 1868, Mr. Cross was privileged to know intimately many of the chief participants of the war who materially aided him in his work as State Military Archivist of Massachusetts. His volume "Antietam," which relates to a visit to the field, September 17, 1919, is extensively illustrated with photographs of farms and buildings that played a prominent part in the battle with a text that records information gleaned from wartime owners and their descendants. Of pertinent interest in this report is the photograph of "Jerry" Cornelius Summers, ex-slave of the Pipers who lived in the "Slave Quarters" as a much beloved "member of the family."

Extracts of architectural comments from the report of Architect Archie Franzen--"Historic Structures Report, Architectural Data Section, Survey Report For Piper Farm, Dorsey Farm, Spielman Farm, Antietam National Battlefield Site, U.S. Department of the Interior, National Park Service"--have been included with copies of architectural drawings of the subject buildings to combine under one cover the most pertinent historical and architectural findings relative to the subject buildings. We wish to express special appreciation to Architect Franzen for his generous cooperation in this and other phases of the study.

In the interest of brevity, no attempt has been made to present the background of the Civil War or to explore in detail the many facets of the Maryland campaign that evolved from Lee's brilliant victory at Second Manassas, August 28-30, 1862. The war has been described as the most dramatic, significant event in the history of the American people as an independent republic. It was a supreme experience that exacted the utmost in courage, valor, and self-sacrifice. Out of the crucible of civil strife was welded a new nation destined for world greatness with a new dimension of human freedom.

Four years in duration, the war exacted a shocking casualty in excess of 600,000 men. Fought on three major fronts--the West, the East, and the sea--it covered a land area in excess of 3,000 miles, affecting deeply every segment of American life.

The impact of battle is here intimately shown upon three farm families--the Mummas, the Pipers, and the Sherricks. Touched by fire, their homes and buildings have won for themselves a sense of immortality we attempt to preserve.

Finally appreciation is expressed to Historian Frank B. Sarles for carefully proofreading the study and to Mary Shipman for her excellent work in typing the report.

CHAPTER I

MUMMA FARM - "Spring House"

Battle Brief (Daybreak - 1 p.m.)

The Battle of Antietam was fought September 17, 1862, in three main stages, each of which involved intimately one or more of the three farms represented in this study. The first stage heavily involved the Mumma farm, the second stage the Mumma and Piper farms and the third the Sherrick farm.

Appreciating the advantage of position which the Mumma farm provided, Brig.-Gen. A.R. Lawton, about 11 p.m. on September 16, ordered forward Brig.-Gen. William H. Trimble's brigade (Maj.-Gen. Richard S. Ewell's division) then commanded by Colonel James A. Walker. The brigade was placed in a plowed field of the farm connecting with Lawton's brigade on the left across the Sharpsburg-Hagerstown Turnpike and with Brig.-Gen. Roswell S. Ripley's brigade (Maj.-Gen. D. H. Hill's division).[1]

Ripley also had been ordered forward on the night of the 16th to take position on the Mumma farm to cover the turnpike and support Colonel Stephen D. Lee's artillery battalion stationed along the southern limits of the farm in vicinity of the Dunkard Church.[2]

So stationed, the men in Trimble's brigade were in regimental position from left to right--12th Georgia, 21st Georgia, 21st North Carolina, 15th Alabama. Near the residence, the barn, the "Spring House" and other buildings were the 21st North Carolina and the 15th Alabama.[3]

Federal pickets attacked twice during the night and a desultory fire was kept up until dawn.

At daybreak Maj.-Gen. Joseph Hooker's Federal Corps opened the attack on this sector with a sweeping 900 yard advance that carried through the North Woods to the Miller cornfield. Here, in desperate fighting, Brig.-Gen. George L. Hartsuff and Brig. Gen. Abram Duryea's brigades overwhelmed the Confederate brigades of Lawton and Brig.-Gen. Harry T. Hays. Colonel James A. Walker, commanding Trimble's brigade, describes the action on his front:

> Soon after daylight the enemy opened fire from a battery which was posted on a hill across the Antietam, and which consequently enfiladed our position, and, as my command was exposed to full view of their gunners and had no shelter, this fire was very annoying, but less destructive that I at first apprehended it would be. About the time my skirmishers were driven in, the > enemy also opened on us from the front with artillery. The line of infantry which they brought up first, advanced to the edge of the woods where my skirmishers had been posted, and opened fire upon us to which my men replied with spirit and effect, holding them in check.[4]

So severe was the enfilading fire from the Federal batteries on the east bank of the Antietam that it inflicted serious loss to the men of Ripley's command for over an hour. "During this while," writes Ripley, "a set of farm buildings in our front were set on fire to prevent them being made use of by the enemy." About 8 o'clock the command was ordered to close to the left. "The troops," continues Ripley, "sprung to their arms with alacrity and moved forward through the burning buildings in our front, reformed on the other side, and opened a rapid fire upon the enemy."[5]

The troops of the command moved forward in support of Brig.-Gen. John B. Hood's division to recapture the cornfield in desperate fighting about 7:30 a.m. In the height of this bloody action, Ripley received a severe wound in the throat which would have proved fatal had not the bullet passed through his cravat.[6]

As Hooker's attack spent itself, Maj.-Gen. Joseph Mansfield's XII Federal Corps pushed rapidly forward to renew the blood bath. The divisions of Brig.-Gen. Alpheus Williams and Brig.-Gen. Samuel W.

Crawford, attacking separately, struck the Confederates in the West Woods. Fighting from behind the cover of projecting rocks, the command of Brig. Gen. D. R. Jones met and shattered the attack. The left of the attack, however, drove Hood's Confederates back across the fields toward the Dunkard Church, opening up a great gap in their line. Into this gap swept Brig.-Gen. George S. Greene's Federal division, overrunning the Mumma farm while Brig.-Gen. William H. French's division plunged past the Roulette farm to strike the Confederate brigades of Col. A. H. Colquitt, Brig.-Gen. R. E. Rodes, and Brig.-Gen. George B. Anderson stationed in the Sunken Road.[7]

"So terrific was the fire of our men," writes Maj. Orrin J. Crane of the Seventh Ohio, "that the enemy fell like grass before the mower; so deadly was the fire that the enemy retired in great disorder."[8]

Only a desperate stand by the Confederate brigades of Brig.-Gen. Jubal A. Early and George B. Anderson stopped Greene's thrust at the Dunkard Church. Thundering past the burning buildings on the Mumma farm dashed the Federal batteries of Capts. John A. Tompkins and J. Albert Monroe, supported respectively by the 102nd New York, the 3rd Maryland, and the 28th Pennsylvania and the 57th Ohio.

By 10:30 a.m. Greene, in heavy fighting, had penetrated the southern portion of the West Woods and had driven the Confederates back to gain full possession of the Mumma farm. In a bold thrust about this time, the 27th North Carolina, moving from the Reel cornfield, swept forward, in a 900-yard advance, to gain the Mumma cornfield before it was repulsed by the 53rd Pennsylvania, the 1st Delaware, and the 14th Connecticut.

By noon the Mumma farm was largely in Federal hands and the major action in this area had ended. An hour later two six-gun batteries of Capts. Wm. H. Hexamer and Augustus Martin had moved up to take position in the plowed field just beyond the still-smouldering Mumma buildings. Col. Wm. H. Irwin's brigade (Maj.-Gen. William B. Franklin's VI corps) now moved up to take position about the center of the farm where they remained until the closing action of the day.

When night brought an end to the battle the Mumma farm was a shambles. The crops were trampled, the fruit trees were stripped, the fences were down, the belongings ransacked but worst of all their home and barn had been razed by a fire that also gutted the "Spring House." No other farm on the field experienced anywhere near such damaging battle impact. It was not until the following spring that the Mummas came back to rebuild and repair their building, and recoup their fortunes.

So hasty had been their departure from the farm that they had carried away few if any of their family possessions. It was no mean task to hurriedly evacuate a family of 16 children. One of them, Samuel Mumma, Jr., in a letter to James F. Clark, New Bern, North Carolina, dated March 22, 1906, describes the evacuation:

> My father was told the family had better get away, so we left on Monday afternoon the 15th, took nothing with us as they were cannonading then, and we were afraid there would be a battle at once. Some clothing was gotten together and the silverware packed in a basket, ready to take but in our haste to get away, all was left behind.
> Father and Mother and the younger children left in the two-horse carry-all (the older children walking as there was a large family) going about four miles, and camped in a large church called (The Manor Church), where many others were also congregated.
>
> On Tues evening a friend and I came back to the house, thinking to get some Clothing, but found that everything of value had been taken. I then started for Sharpsburg, and at the ridge on the field above the house, where the line had formed, Gen. D. H. Hill and some other officers had me brought to them and questioned me as to whether I was a member of that family; and then asked me about the different roads to Antietam Creek. I gave him a correct statement, although I was a Union boy. After we left, my older brother Daniel came back to the house and went to bed. Towards morning, some officers knocked at the door. Daniel, being young also, was afraid to open door, jumped out back window, left it up, and spent the remainder of the night in an upper room of a stone building that was once used by their slaves. (Slaves had been freed.)
> The next day he went to Sharpsburg. That morning the house & barn were burned, but we were told that Gen. Richardson's battery (a Union Gen.) shelled the barn and burnt it. Our family then went to a friends house and stayed until Spring.
>
> In the Spring of '63 we rebuilt our house and had just moved in a few weeks before the army went to Gettysburg.
> As they were passing through to Gettysburg an officer approached me and asked me if I knew who had burnt that house. I told him I did not; then he told me that he and eight other men were detailed by Gen. Ripley to burn the house, and that he picked up a chunk of fire from where > they had been cooking & put it in an open window on a bed. He told me the color of the quilt and shape of bedstead.

> We lost crops, fencing and everything all amounting to 8 or 10 thousand dollars, and never were recompensed as the government claimed it was damaged by being right in the heat of battle.[9]

This letter was in response to one from James F. Clark to "Post Master Sharpsburg, Md." dated "3/17th 06" inquiring the name of the owner or person who lived in the brick house that was burned at the "Battle of Sharpsburg or Antietam." He writes:

> I belonged to 3d N.C. Infantry Col Wm L Derossette, [DeRosset] Ripleys Brigade, D.H. Hill's Division This House stood immediately in our front as the battle was being commenced and at time just was in enemies line. Genl Ripley, to prevent its occupation by sharp-shooters & protect his officers from being picked off ordered it to be burned. A volunteer call was made as to who would go and do it. 5 or 6 privates from Co. A volunteered and I took charge of them being at that time sergeant major of the Regiment. After firing the house we all got back to our line Myself being the only one hurt.[10]

A detailed evaluation of battle damage to the Mumma farm is found in Claim No. 334 Congressional Case submitted by Samuel Mumma, Jr., Executors of Samuel Mumma Deceased vs. The United States filed May 29, 1885, in the court of Claims:

These claims not only reflect well battle damage but provide an intimate insight into the "way-of-life" of the well-to-do farmer of the Antietam Valley with a comprehensive cost list of houses, barns, animals, equipment, fences, household articles, and furnishings.

Following the establishment of the Antietam Battlefield Commission by Congressional Act in 1890, an effort was made to resurvey the field and prepare detailed troop position maps to permit an accurate marking of the field. The battlefield was surveyed by Lieut. Col. E. B. Cope, Engineer, assisted by H. W. Mattern, Assistant Engineer. Map historical documentation was done by General E. A. Carman, who, in the Battle of Antietam, commanded the 13th New Jersey (Williams division, Mansfield's XII corps).

Sections of the map were sent to veteran units, North and South, requesting their assistance in locating as well as possible the position of their unit at a given time of the battle. This was combined with visits to the field by representative veteran units from the various States engaged. These findings were further supplemented by careful study of the official reports of the Union and Confederate officers, published in The War of the Rebellion .

A number of these maps are preserved in the Papers of Ezra A. Carman, Manuscript Room, Library of Congress, to accompany his detailed study of the battle. One of these maps shows the position of the 1st Delaware of Brig.-Gen. Max Weber's brigade (French's division, Sumner's corps). The map bears this note:

> Advanced with its right on Mumma's lane and right company crowded. Went through corn under artillery and infantry fire, confusion in crossing south fence of corn, reformed and charged, left struck the lane, quickly repulsed and fell back to north edge of corn, in grass field at 3. 75 or 80 men went forward on own hook to Mummas lane, top of ridge, and staid there sharpshooting til enemy made charge > on a battery in grass field on the right and drove battery out.[12]

Another of these maps shows the camp position of the 1st Rhode Island Light Battery G, Capt. Charles D. Owen French's division, Sumner's corps, unattached), on the 16th of September and "Line of march on 17th" with their first position indicated on the Poffenberger farm and their second, third and fourth positions indicated on the Mumma farm. Owen, in his official report, writes:

> I went from the extreme right toward the center, and, after emerging from the woods opposite the church, was about to take a position on the open field across the road and in rear of the church, but the head of my column had hardly got into the field when our infantry came retreating over the hill, closely followed by the enemy, coming out of the woods. I therefore turned the head of the column and retired behind the burning ruins and reported to you for orders, and you informed me that there were more batteries than could be used, and I had better get my battery under cover, which I did by placing it in the open ground behind the orchard, in rear of the burning ruins.[13]

was Jacob Mumma--a man of Pennsylvania German ancestry whose name was to soon gain prominence in Washington County. That he was a man of some means is seen by the fact that on May 6, 1796, he purchased a large three-tract farm of 324 1/4 acres from Christopher Orendorff for £ 5,500. The largest of these tracts was the one called "Resurvey on Smith's Hills" of 303 acres. The second tract of 10 1/4 acres was called "Part of the Resurvey on Hills Dales and the Vineyard," while the third tract of 11 acres was called "Land Called Part to Saneto."

The last tract was a particularly significant one as is seen from the following description:

> Containing Eleven acres of Land More or less Together with all and Singular the land and premises with Houses barns Stables Fields Woods underwoods Water Watercourses & meadows Together with the grice [sic] and Saw Mill and with Every of the appertenances belonging or in any wise appertaining to the aforesaid three tracts of Land To Have and to Hold.[15]

From this it would appear that Jacob Mumma purchased a well established farm "with Houses barns Stables . . . grice and Saw Mill. It is not known just when Christian Orndorff settled in the valley but he was certainly there by 1791 as one of his tracts was patented that year. It is quite possible he was the builder of the Mumma "Spring House" and of the house, barns, and stables.

Jacob Mumma gives a clue to his former residence by a mortgage he secured on his farm February 20, 1797, from Isaac Ebey of Lacock

Township, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. It is natural to assume in obtaining a sizable loan at that time that he would approach someone who knew him well. That he found that person in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, is significant, indicating that that may well have been his former residence. This supposition has been borne out by Mrs. Virginia Hildebrand.[16]

This mortgage of 500 pounds was repaid January 9, 1802.[17]

Early in his career Jacob Mumma gave evidence of aggressive business talents that looked beyond the limits of his farm--as witness his purchase, May 9, 1797, of a lot in "Boones Berry Town." This lot was acquired from Daniel Stonesifer for £168 being the same that had been conveyed to Daniel Stonesifer November 24, 1792, by William Boone and George Boone. Lot number 13 is described as "front eighty two and a half feet and two hundred and sixty four in depth with all and singular the buildings and improvements."[18]

Within one month of its purchase he sold the lot in "Boonesberry" June 28, 1797, to John Hayes.[19] His next real estate venture involved the purchase from Joseph Chapline, April 27, 1801, of a part of a tract of "Land called Mount Pleasant." This small tract, that adjoined his farm, was described as "Three and five eights of an acre of land together with all and singular the buildings improvements, conveyances & advantages to the said part or parcel of Land." This was obtained from a section called Smith Hills.[20]

On March 9, 1805, he added further to his estate by acquiring one-third of the Plantation of Christian Orndorff deceased from his widow, Elizabeth Orndorff. By the will of her husband she became entitled to the "one third part of the aforesaid plantation and the back room in the aforesaid dwelling house during her widowhood." The property was acquired for "the Sum of one hundred pounds current money of Maryland to her in hand paid." The plantation from which this property was acquired is described as being "composed of three parts or parcels of land the one called 'Anderson's delight', the other called 'John's Chance' & the other called 'Abstone's forrest', also the back room in the dwelling house."[21]

On March 6, 1806, a "Relinquishment of Dower" was recorded by which Jacob Mumma added further to his estate. This indenture was between Jacob Mumma and Susanna Orndorff, widow of Jacob Orndorff, who died "Seized and possessed" of a plantation in Washington County composed of three parts or parcels of land, the one called "Anderson's Delight," the other called "Johns Chance" and the other called "Abstones Forest" supposed to contain about one hundred and eighty two acres and one half of land more or less. This was obtained for the consideration of the "Sum of five Shilings Current Money of Maryland."[22]

At the request of Jacob Mumma the following Power of Attorney was recorded January 8, 1811:

> State of Maryland Washington County, Know all men by these presents to whome it may concern that I Christopher Orndorff of the State of Kantucka do hereby these presents constitute appoint and authorize my trusty friend Jacob Mumma of Washington County and State of Maryland my whole and sole attorney to act in my stead for all my part of a Tract of Land called Vultons Rest that lyes to the south of the great Road leading from Sharpsburg to Frederick Town and to sell and dispose of the same and do hereby these presents authorize and empower the said Jacob Mumma to make a Deed of Conveyance for the aforesaid part of Vultons Rest.

The Indenture covering this transaction had been drawn August 10, 1810, for the consideration of "Twenty Shillings." The property is described as:

> Beginning forsaid part at a Marked white oak Standing on the south side of the great road leading from Sharpsburg to Frederick Town it being where the lane comes into said road between Leonard Cretyer's [?] plantation and Peter Thomas's plantation and running from thence with the said road North Seventy six degrees West twenty three and one half perches to the thirty ninth line of a Tract of Land called the resurvey on Hills dales and the Vineyard.[23]

This tract would appear to be the same one that had been patented by Christopher Orndorff July 13, 1791, of 173 3/4 acres Cultons Rest or Culton's Grove.[24]

On April 20, 1811, Jacob Mumma obtained a Land Patent--Addition to Potomac River-- 4 1/2 acres.[25] Another small tract was Patented October 26, 1812, of 16 1/2 acres called "Mummas Fancy."[26] Three years before, April 19, 1809, he had patented a tract of 10 1/2 acres called "Mummas Lot."[27]

Jacob Mumma was born April 9, 1766. He was twice married, his first wife being Elizabeth Hertzler, who bore him six children:

His second wife, Barbara Hoffman, was childless. On January 8, 1831, Jacob Mumma turned the farm over to his youngest son, Samuel, Sr. Seventeen years later Jacob Mumma, Sr., died, September 23, 1848.

Samuel Mumma, Sr., like his father, was twice married. His first wife was Barbara Hertzler, who bore him five children:

Construction and Structural Changes

It would appear that the "Spring House", the residence, the barn and the stables were built as an operating unit during the 1790s or earlier by Christopher Orndorff or by Jacob Mumma, who acquired the three-tract farm May 6, 1796. The purchase price (£ 5,500) and the wording of the deed relative to the third tract of 11 acres--"Land Called Part to Saneto"--would indicate that Mumma purchased an established farm:

> Containing Eleven acres of Land More or less > Together with all and Singular the land and > premises with Houses barns Stables Fields Woods > underwoods Water Watercourses & meadows Together > with the grice and Saw Mill.

In all likelihood the "Spring House" experienced little change other than probably a new shingle roof until the Civil War. As we have established in the "Battle Brief," it was heavily damaged in the fire that was deliberately set by the Confederates of Ripley's brigade--the task being assigned to Sgt. Maj. James F. Clark with a detachment from Co. A, 3rd North Carolina, commanded by Col. Wm. L. De Rosset. It was burned early in the morning of September 17, 1862, to prevent its occupation by Federal sharpshooters. Though it is possible that the "Spring House" was deliberately fired, it would appear more likely, from Ripley's statement, that it caught from burning debris from either the house or barn, for he speaks of "a set of farm buildings in our front were set on fire."

A.R. Waud, in a graphic sketch entitled, "Burning of Mr. Mumma's houses and barns at the fight of the 17th Sept.," shows the "Spring House" burning with the house and barn. Its roof has fallen in, giving the appearance that it had been burning for some time.[34]

Another contemporary artist, Frank H. Schell, caught the scene a little later in a sketch entitled "Scene at the Ruins of Mumma's House and Barns." Both artists depict well the dramatic action of the moment.[35]

Shortly after the battle the famous war photographer, A. Gardner, visited the area to photograph the battle-scarred field. One of his photographs shows the destruction of the Mumma main buildings. Prominently shown in the foreground on the right is the "Spring House," roofless and gutted but with its stone walls still intact. A fire that would have so consumed the roof would, in all likelihood, have burned the interior framing and the reputed wooden floor.[36]

The extent of damage to the "Spring House" was estimated by the Mummas in their Claim. Henry C. Mumma and Samuel Mumma, Jr., Executors of Samuel Mumma Deceased vs. The United States No. 334 Filed May 29, 1885 ___ as "1 Springhouse & hog pen $100.00."[37]

Both Waud's sketch and Gardner's photograph serve to establish the wartime appearance and location of the "Spring House" in relation to the other buildings. In 1867 the battlefield was surveyed by N. Michler, Major of Engineers, at a scale of 4 inches to 1 mile. The map was entitled, "Map of the Battlefield of Antietam Prepared by Command of Brigadier General A. A. Humphreys, Chief of Corps of Engrs., U.S. Army, From Surveys made under the direction of N. Michler, Maj. of Engrs. Bvt: Brig: Genl: U.S.A." The map shows well the physical features of the field--roads, bridges, contemporary ground cover (trees vs. open fields), farm boundaries and the location of farm houses and outbuildings in relation to Sharpsburg, Antietam Creek, and the Potomac River.

In 1894 the Antietam Board, preparatory to marking the battlefield, enlarged sections of this map to permit more accurate location of troop positions by veteran units engaged in the battle. This provided an accurate scale to relate the position of the various farm houses to each other. The location of the "Spring House" is shown by an arrow on one of these sectional maps.[38]

The "Spring House" has been described by Archie W. Franzen, Architect, National Park Service, as follows:

> The spring house is constructed on stone masonry and measures 16'-3" x 24'-1". It has a main or grade floor and an attic or second floor level. Immediately adjacent and at the north end the spring from which it derives its name is located. The latter lies in a sink in the ground around which masonry enclosing walls were erected and roofed over with a vaulted brick roof for protection. Water from the spring flows into the spring house and within the structure is channeled along the inside of the north and west walls. It is then wasted through the south walk under the adjacent road and to a draw on the other side of the road.
> Both the south wall and more especially the east wall have developed serious bulges that threaten the collapse of this building. The outward bulge in the east wall is extensive enough that the second floor joists have only a half inch of bearing left.
> The tenant farmer uses the structure for processing milk. For this reason and because the interior first floor is concrete and a concrete sidewalk runs along the outside of the west wall an investigation of the bearing condition of the wall could not be made. It is supposed that the lintels over the two side by side doors in this wall have sagged sufficiently to permit the convex bulge to occur. This in turn has probably caused the concave bulge in the south wall. These movements have in turn played havoc with the massive stone masonry and brick capped chimney serving the fireplace at the south end of the structure.

Access to the second floor is gained by an exterior door at the north end reached by climbing over the roof of the spring enclosure. It is supposed, with no supporting evidence remaining, that some form of wooden deck and steps formerly served this door.

No windows occur at the first floor level except in the west wall which has two window openings. One of these is a period window but the other, a double window, is more modern. It may have replaced a smaller and earlier window. A gable window in the south wall provides light for the second floor.

A corrugated metal roof has been applied over what appears to be original, oak, side-lapped, shingles on roofers supported by tapered rafters. There is no evidence of downspouts or gutters.

The exterior of the structure has been whitewashed many times.

The interior of the structure at the first floor level is divided into two rooms. The north room is smaller than the south room. A large fireplace is located at the east end of the south wall of the south room. The walls are plastered and whitewashed many times and the overhead ceiling joists are exposed and whitewashed.

The low sidewalls and the end gable walls of the second floor are plastered leaving the exposed rafters of the ceiling unplastered. The flooring consists of a single thickness random width wood floor boards. There is also a wood baseboard along the exterior walls.

There is no evident indications of an interior stairway connecting the two floors.[39]

In this full, detailed description of the "Spring House," Architect Franzen leaves little that is open to question with exception of the old roof that is presently under the corrugated metal roof. The two contemporary sketches of Waud and Schell with the photograph of Gardner[40] definitely establish that the roof, all of the rafters and in all likelihood the interior framing burned at the time of the battle. It is possible that the old roof here referred to dates back to the spring of 1863 when the Mummas rebuilt the house and barn and extensively rehabilitated the "Spring House."

Photographic examination of the existing structure is further revealing both as to the character of the structure and the extent of its deterioration. The view of the "Spring House" from the northwest shows a door to the north gable wall that was apparently at one time reached by wooden steps and a platform. This view shows extensive deterioration in the gable barge boards necessitating replacement. Architect Franzen raises some question as to whether or not the near window here shown is original. A. Gardner's contemporary photograph, 1862, definitely establishes that it is.[41]

The view from the north shows masonry shelter of the spring pit. The overflow from the pit enters the structure by a floor trench which runs along the interior sides of the north and west walls of the north room of the structure. From this point the water is piped underground to a drainage area south of the house. Outside access to the spring pit is provided by stone retaining walls while the shelter is composed of a brick arch and headwall.[42]

The view of the "Spring House" from the southeast shows extensive deterioration of the south and east masonry walls and the chimney. The chimney is so structurally unstable as to necessitate razing and rebuilding.[43]

A more intimate knowledge of the details of construction of the "Spring House" is provided by plans prepared by student architects in the summer of 1968--William B. Flickinger, Jr., and Roy W. Reynolds, of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia. The sheets are entitled "Elevations" and "Floor Plans and Section" presented in Architect Franzen's report previously cited.[44]

Answer of Samuel Mumma Jr to James F. Clark's letter asking for information - about the Mumma house that was burned Sept. 17, 1862

Sharpsburg, Md.

James F. Clark,
New Bern. N.C.

Dear Sir:

In replay to your letter of Mar. 19 asking for some information concerning the burning of the brick house, on Sept. 17,
I will say that the house referred to was owned by my ~~God~~ father, Samuel Mumma Sr.

The house, a large brick colonial one, near the Dunkard Church, ~~was~~ was burned at the Battle of Antietam.

My father was told the family had better get away, so we left on Monday afternoon, the 15th, took nothing with us as they were cannonading then, and we were afraid there would be a battle at once. Some clothing was gotten together and the silver were packed in a basket, ready to take but in our haste to get away, all was left behind.

Father and Mother and the younger children but left in the two-horse carry-all, the older Children walking as there was a large family going about four miles and camped in a large church called (The Manor Church), where many others were also congregated.

On Tues evening a friend and I came back to the house, thinking to get some clothing, but found that everything of value had been taken. I then started for Sharpsburg, and at the ridge on the field above the house, where the Turnpike had formed, Gen. D. H. Hill and some other officers had me brought to them and questioned me as to whether I was a member of that family; and then asked me about the different roads to Antietam Creek. I gave him a correct statement, although I was a Union boy. After we left, my older brother Daniel came back to the house and went to bed. Towards morning, some officers knocked at the door. Daniel, being young and afraid to open door, jumped out back window, left it up, and spent the remainder of the night in an upper room of a stone building that was occupied by their slaves. (Slaves had been freed) The next day he went to Sharpsburg.

That morning the house + barn were burned, but we were told that Gen Richardson's battery (a Union Gen.) shelled the barn and burnt it. Our family then went to a friends house and stayed until spring.
In the spring of '63 we rebuilt our house and had just moved in a few weeks before the army went to Gettysburg.
As they were passing through to Gettysburg an officer approached me and said asked me if I knew who had burnt that house. I told him I did not; then he told me that he and eight other men were detailed by Gen. Pilley to burn the house, and that he picked up a chunk of fire from where they had been cooking + put it in an open window on a bed. He told me the color of the quilt and shape & pattern We lost crops, fencing and everything all amounting to 8 or 10 thousand dollars and never were recompensed as the government claimed it was damaged by being right in heat of battle.

As near as I can remember, the hospital you speak of must have been at the home of one Harry Peel, South West of the old Church, who had a daughter with black hair; she is now dead, And the rest of the family have moved West. That was the nearest hospital that I know of.

As to your burning the house, we know that in doing as, you were carrying out orders!

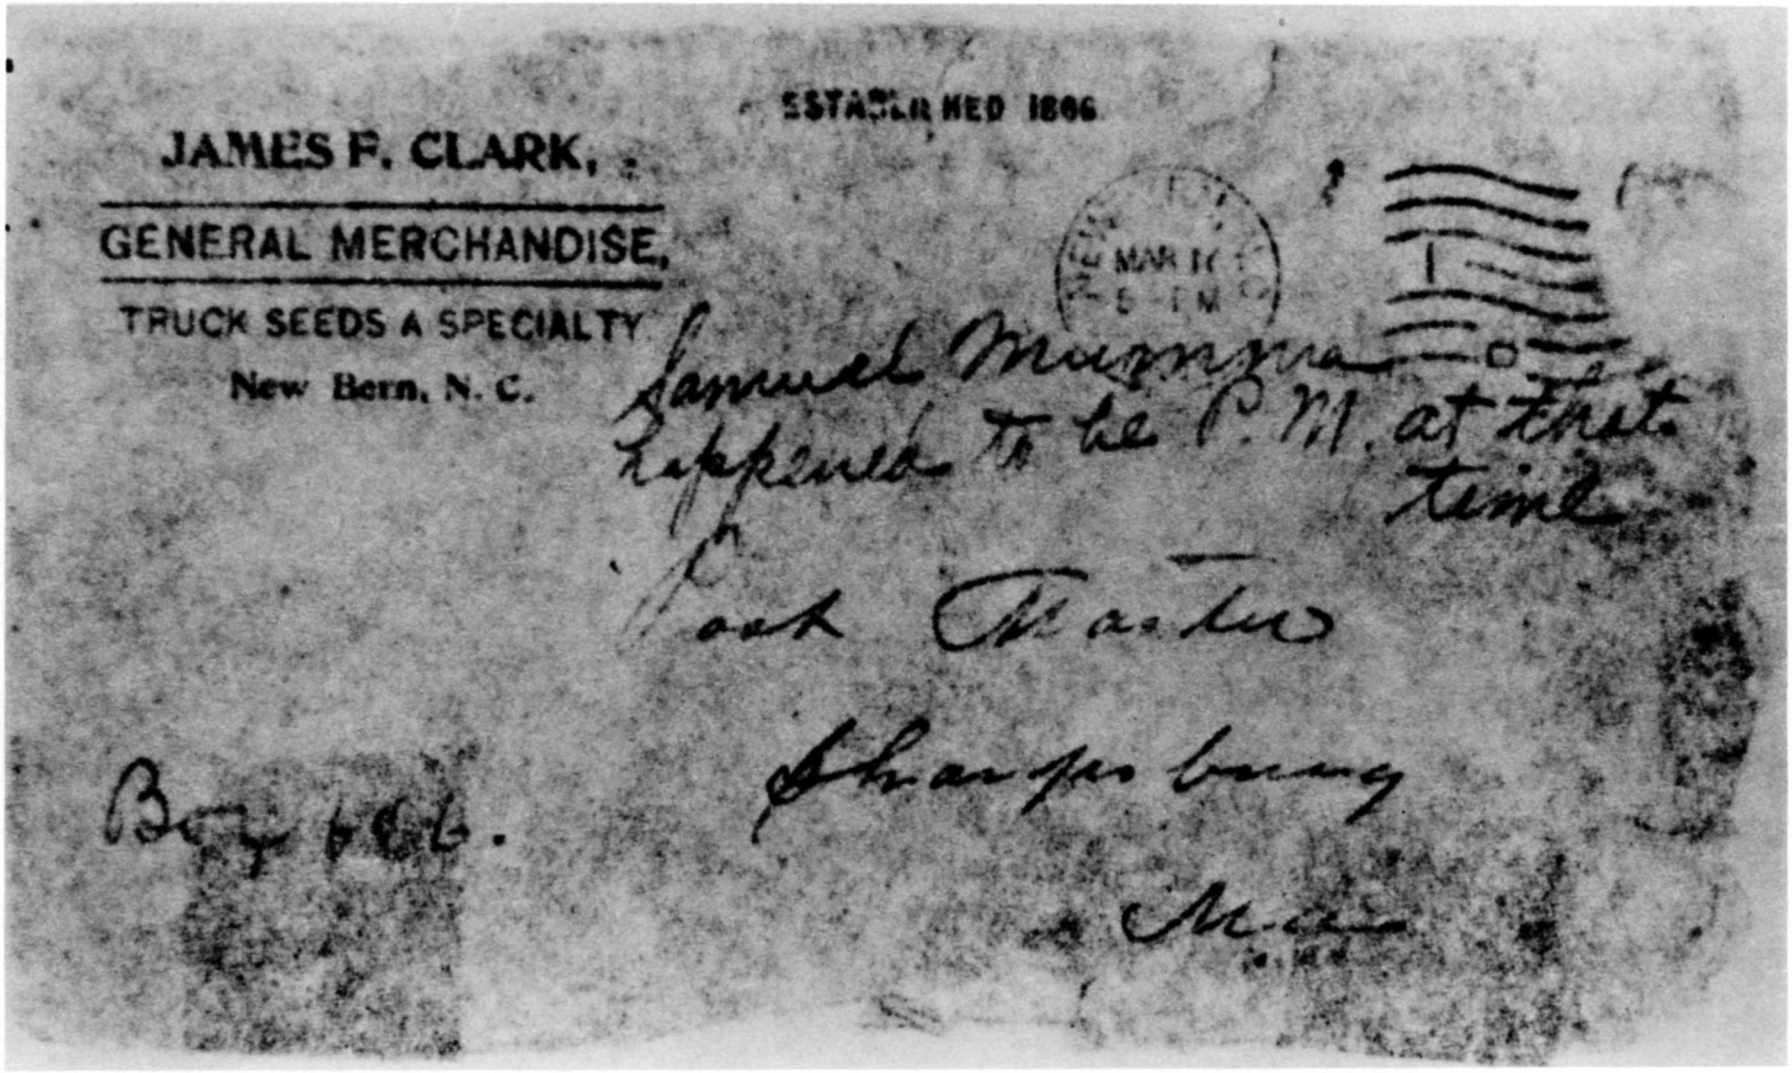

Enclosed find a few ~~souvenirs~~ souvenir postals of the battle.

Hoping these points will help you in your work, I am

Sincerely
Samuel Mumma Jr.

Dear Sir

Please be so kind as to give me the correct name of the man who owned a house in the battle time that was burned at Battle Sharpsburg or Antietam - being called by both names. I belonged to Co E 1st Md Inf - formerly Lieut Wm L Delaville, Ripley's Brigade, D. H. Hill's Division

This house stood immediately in our front as the battle was being commenced and at time fight was in mening time. Gen Ripley, to prevent its occupation by sharp shooters + protect his officers from being fired off ...

buried. A volunteer call was made as to who would go out about 5 or 6 miles from here A volunteer out I took charge of them being at that time Sergeant Major of the Regiment. After finding the house we all got back to our lines. My help being the only one hurt. Ripley ordered me to carry order down his line to Hy and H Co Regiments to come up and take a new front in this front. He wanted some of two I help him. I carried the order down to Co's and being nearly from loss of blood went off field by an old church and on to our field hospital. Then a woman a very old but not black hair helped to bandage my arm. Here after the wounded in the other arm any of the family living in Fairfax. Please write all about the family as to family and when they were when complete between the lines of battles. I write to write up the particulars of the wound through and there are some particulars that the family would like to know. On the next campaign,

Gettysburg, by the command to which
I belonged was assisted to capture Genl Stiles at Manchester but I had to lay up for repairs and did not get any further. My Brother, was discharged, but he saw the old gentle man as they left he talked with the owner of some bread and he said he hoped the next time they fought they would get out of his confines as he gathered us one in a cage that year. Hoping to hear from you with a list of

H. H. KEEDY, Attorney.

Deposition of Samuel Mumma, for claimant, taken at Hagerstown, Md., the 15th day of October, 1888.

Claimant's counsel, H. H. Keedy; defendant's counsel, Felix Branigan.

That his occupation is that of a farmer; that he is fifty years of age; that his place of residence is Sharpsburgh, Md.; that he is a son of the deceased claimant and heir at law, and one of the executors of said claimant.

Interrogatory 1. State, if you please, your age, place of residence, your present and former occupation.

Answer. Age, fifty years; I live near Sharpsburgh, Washington County, Md.; I am now and always had been a farmer.

Interrogatory 2. State whether or not you were acquainted with Samuel Mumma, sr., of Washington County, Md. If yea, when did you know him, where did he reside, and what was his occupation?

Answer. I was acquainted with Samuel Mumma; he was my father; I have known him all my life up to the time of his death in 1876. He resided near Sharpsburgh, Md., and was a farmer up to a year or two of his death.

Interrogatory 3. State, if you know, where the said Samuel Mumma resided in 1862.

Answer. He resided on his farm near Sharpsburgh, about a mile northeast of said town.

Interrogatory 4. State, if you know, whether or not the said Samuel Mumma furnished any stores or property to the Government of the United States or its organized forces. If you please, state the circumstances under which they were furnished, the time, the amount, the value, and all you know in reference thereto.

Answer. Yes; the said Samuel Mumma did furnish stores to the United States Government at the time of the battle of Antietam, just immediately after said battle; a part of Sumner's corps and a part of General Meade's corps took the property. I talked with both Generals Meade and Sumner, and they said they were out of supplies and that they must have what they could get from my father and that the Government would pay for it; we did not object any more. They took 295 cords of wood in all, about 20 cords of which was corded up for our own use and to sell. The balance, 275, consisted of fencing rails, posts, and stakes. Within two weeks after the battle the panels of the fence were counted and, in my opinion, there was over 2 miles of fencing taken. The farm contained over 186 acres of land and required a great deal of fencing. About fifty good rails will make a cord of wood. The most of the fence was worm fencing, and consisted of nine rails and two stakes to the panel and about 8 feet to a panel. I believe there were at least 1,300 panels taken. There was a great deal more fencing on the farm, but they only took about 2 miles of it. There were eight fenced fields on the place. Wood was selling in that year at Sharpsburgh for $4 per cord, and it was worth $1 a cord to haul it to Sharpsburgh. It was taken and used immediately after the battle of Antietam for fuel for the army. Some was taken by Sumner and some by Meade's men and some by General McClellan's men. They hauled it in wagons to the camps. The whole farm was under fencing. Upon reflection I think there were nine fields fenced and a lane running through the farm, fenced on both sides. The same troops took all the corn and fodder in the field of 16 acres. It was a medium crop that year; it would yield 37 bushels to the acre, and about a load of fodder to the acre, weighing over a ton to the load. The corn was almost matured; it was after the 17th of September. Corn was selling at that time for 60 cents per bushel—new corn. About a week after the battle they came in with their teams, pulled off the corn, and hauled it away to the camps. Some they cut off, and carried the fodder and corn away, and the balance they turned their artillery horses in and used it. The fodder was worth about $5 to the load in the field. We got as much as $10 a load for it, hauled to Sharpsburgh the following year. That year fodder was very scarce after the armies were here, and commanded a high price. They also got wheat and straw, and, in my judgment, 75 bushels. The wheat was not thrashed. They took it out of the ricks and hauled it to General Sumner's camp. I went to General Sumner, and he referred me to his quartermaster, and he said they would have to have it and would pay for it. The wheat in that condition, in my opinion, was worth $1.25 per bushel. There was 25 or 30 acres of pasture on the place, which was pastured by the Government horses. They were turned in on the fields and kept there until it was gone. In my judgment the pasture was worth $50. Some of the pasture was first and some was the second year crop. It had not been cut. The apples they just went through the orchard and took. I don't know whether they had any orders or not. They got one steer and a calf, which they killed. There were five others taken, but we don't know by whom. This steer and calf we drove to Mr. Neikirk's, the neighboring place. I did not see them kill them, but afterward saw the hides of the calf and steer, and the Neikirks told me the Federal soldiers had killed them and used them. The steer would weigh between 500 and 600 pounds net. He was large and fat. The calf was about six months old. The steer was worth, in my opinion, reasonably $30, and the calf was worth $6 at least. I suppose it would be worth that much for meat. They got four fattening hogs out of the pen. They killed them and carried them off to the camp. I got the hides and identified them by the hides. I went to the camp and saw the colonel in command and he said we should be paid for them. They were worth $10 or $12 apiece. They would have weighed, in my opinion, 200 pounds net. There was some bacon taken. I don't know who took it or how much was taken.

Cross-examined by counsel for United States:

Cross-interrogatory 1. Were you on the place at the time of taking of property mentioned by you?

Answer. I was not living there. The house was burned during the battle. I was living about a mile away, but was on the place every day.

Cross-interrogatory 2. Was the quantity of property mentioned by you estimated at the time?

Answer. Yes, sir; by me, Henry Piper, Mr. Neikirk, and Mr. Rowlette; the two latter are here present. Mr. Piper is too old and feeble to leave home.

Cross-Interrogatory 3. Did you make a written appraisement?

Answer. Yes, sir.

Cross-interrogatory 4. Where is it?

Answer. It was given by me to the claim agent who had charge of the claim, and I don't know where it is now—either Gregory or Jones.

Cross-interrogatory 5. How long had the fence been standing before it was taken?

Answer. I can not tell. It was kept in good repair and renewed whenever necessary. Some of the post fencing was new.

Cross-interrogatory 6. Did you ever measure a cord of wood from fence rails?

Answer. No, sir; but fifty good rails will fill a wagon that will hold a cord of wood. At the best of my recollection the rails taken would run about that way.

Cross-interrogatory 7. Where were you during the battle of Antietam?

Answer. I was back of the rebel line and could not get out. I was not there voluntarily, but caught there.

Cross-interrogatory 8. What depredations did the rebels commit on your father's place during that time?

Answer. None that I know of; they might have done some. They tore down some fencing, but I did not see that they burnt any.

Cross-interrogatory 9. This claim charges 295 cords of wood; then did you know that some of that wood—a considerable portion of it—was not burned by the Confederates?

Answer. The most of the rails were on the place after the battle. I was on the place after the battle on Friday, and there was very little burning of rails; there were only a few places that looked like there had been a fire. I think a cord would cover what was burnt up to the time of my visit; but a considerable portion of the fencing had been torn down and the rails were lying there, piled up.

Cross-interrogatory 10. How many acres of corn and wheat were on the place that year?

Answer. Sixteen acres of corn and between 50 and 60 acres of wheat.

Cross-interrogatory 11. Was there a considerable portion of that trampled down?

Answer. Not the wheat; the wheat was in ricks, and some in the barn; did not seem to be injured by the troops except what was in the barn, and that was burned. Some of the corn was trampled, but it was not materially damaged.

Cross-interrogatory 12. Did you see them hauling away the corn?

Answer. Yes, sir; all of it. They were back and forward there for a week taking it.

Cross-interrogatory 13. You estimated the corn at how much per acre?

Answer. Thirty-seven bushels per acre. It was a medium crop. Fifty bushels would be a good crop in that neighborhood.

Cross-interrogatory 14. How much of the pasture had been trampled down by the troops?

Answer. I can hardly say; probably about half had been trampled down and run over.

Cross-interrogatory 15. Was any of the wheat in the ricks burnt?

Answer. No, sir.

Cross-interrogatory 16. How many hogs were on the place before the battle?

Answer. From twelve to fifteen large hogs.

Cross-interrogatory 17. How many cattle?

Answer. We generally kept about twenty; we had six steers at that time.

Cross-interrogatory 18. Did the rebels take any cattle or stock?

Answer. Not that I know of. These five steers that were killed, the rebels might have got them; we don't know who got them.

Cross-interrogatory 19. Where were the horses?

Answer. We took them away on Monday.

Cross-interrogatory 20. Where did you take them?

Answer. To the neighborhood of Fairplay; within the Federal lines.

Cross-interrogatory 21. Was any of the property paid for by the Government or by any of the troops?

Answer. No, sir.

Cross-interrogatory 22. Were any receipts or vouchers given for any of the property?

Answer. No, sir. I made efforts to get them. I went to General Meade and asked him, and he said the Government would pay for all this property. I saw his quartermaster and asked for a receipt, but he refused to give it, and said the Government would pay it.

Cross-interrogatory 23. Where was your father at this time?

Answer. He was living below Sharpsburgh after the battle, and made very little effort to get receipts, as he was an old man and very much discouraged by the loss of his house and barn.

Cross-interrogatory 24. Was there anything said about loyalty?

Answer. Yes; the quartermaster said if my father was a loyal man he would be paid. I can't tell the quartermaster's name. He was near General Meade's headquarters.

Cross-interrogatory 25. Was any proof made before the Porter board in regard to any of this property?

Answer. I don't think any proof was made, but they were on the place; I was not there that day.

Cross-interrogatory 26. How did you carry the quantities of property in your mind; or, if not carried, where did you get the quantities, and how?

Answer. I estimated the fencing from my recollection entirely, and also the corn and fodder, I remembered them distinctly; also the wheat, we estimated it at the time about 75 bushels that had been carried off of the place.

And in answer to the interrogatory propounded by commissioner, whether he knows of any other matter relative to the claim in question, and, if he does, to state it.

Answer. I know of nothing else except that the claim is an honest one, in my opinion, and not large or exaggerated.

SAMUEL MUMMA.

Deposition of Henry F. Neikirk, for claimant, taken at Hagerstown, Md., the 15th day of October, 1888.

Claimant's counsel, H. H. Keedy; defendant's counsel, Felix Brannigan.

That his occupation is a retired farmer; that he is sixty-eight years of age; that I reside in Sharpsburgh now, but formerly near that place. I have no interest at all, and no relation to the claimant. The deceased and myself were nearest neighbors.

Interrogation 1. State whether or not you were acquainted with Samuel Mumma, deceased; if yea, when did you know him, what was his occupation, and where did he reside?

Answer. I knew him before the war, during the war, and up to the time of his death, and we lived as neighbors for many years. Mr. Mumma resided about 1 mile northeast of Sharpsburgh, on the battle-field of Antietam, and resided there during the late war.

Interrogation 2. State if you know whether or not the said Samuel Mumma furnished any stores or property to the Government of the United States or its organized forces. If yea, please state the circumstances under which they were furnished, the time, the amount, the value, and all you know in reference thereto.

Answer. Yes, he did; they were taken by the United States troops or soldiers immediately after the battle of Antietam. The rebels retreated and the Union supplies had not yet arrived, and they used what they found in the neighborhood. I can not particularize under whose command the troops were, more than General Sumner's command was there. They used what cord-wood was there, and they used also fencing. I recollect they used 20 cords of wood and rails that were used for wood, and according to my opinion several miles of fencing were used for fuel shortly after the battle of Antietam. At the suggestion of Mr. Mumma, the deceased, Mr. William Roulette, Mr. Henry Piper, and myself rode along where the fence stood and counted the panels of fencing that were taken, the places being well marked where the panels came from, and from that we made a calculation as to the amount. My recollection as to the number of panels is rather indefinite; I think they were in the teens, that is, between 1,300 and 2,000 panels. I know there were nine rails and two stakes to the panel, for I saw the fence frequently. Mr. Mumma was particular in keeping good fencing on his farm. I mean that 50 rails would average a cord of wood; I came to that conclusion from hauling rails in the same wagon-bed in which I hauled wood. I was well acquainted with the farm. I think there were about 2 miles of fencing used by the United States troops; there were 8 feet to the panel; $3 a cord for wood was a low price at that time. I saw the field of corn on Mr. Mumma's farm; on Friday after the battle the corn was there, and did not appear to be damaged at that time. There were 16 acres in the field, and it was always known as a 16-acre field. It was a fair crop of corn. I call a fair crop from 30 to 50 bushels to the acre. I could not undertake to be more accurate as to the contents of that field then. I am satisfied that it was between those figures. It would make a load of fodder to the acre. At that time I think $5 a load would have been very reasonable. I estimate that corn in that condition as being worth 60 cents per bushel, and that is a fair price. The corn and fodder were taken by Federal troops after the battle, but I saw so much corn taken by the troops at that time from so many places that I am not positive whether I saw this corn taken; but I am satisfied that they did take this corn, as there were no other troops there, and they were subsisting on the country, and it was all gone when I next saw the field. I can not say that I saw the wheat taken, but I saw where wheat had been taken from. The number of bushels taken was not much less than a hundred. I am satisfied that at least 75 or 80 bushels were taken. Wheat then was worth from $1.20 to $1.30 per bushel; it was good. I don't know anything about the pastures, and don't know whether any taken or not. I remember that some cattle were killed in my field, and the deceased recognized the hides as being the hides of his cattle. Hancock's corps was encamped on my farm, and some of the medical directors told me (connected with this corps) that cattle were needed, and they were taken for supplies.

Cross-examined by counsel for United States:

Cross-interrogatory 1. Was there any appraisement of the property of Mr. Mumma, showing the quantity destroyed and also the quantity appropriated by the Federal troops and their use; and if so, where, by whom, and in what manner?

Answer. Yes, there was, by myself, by Mr. William Roulette, and Henry Piper, in writing. I don't know whether it was sworn to or not, but if the paper was produced now I would have no hesitancy in swearing to its substantial accuracy. We appraised the fence in the manner already stated. I think the corn also, and the wheat, by estimating the quantity missing from the rick. All that I can say is that we were very careful in estimating what was taken, so that we could be fair to both the claimant and the Government.

Cross-interrogatory 2. What was the value of a common steer and a calf?

Answer. The steer was worth from $30 or $35, and the calf $6.

And in answer to the interrogatory propounded by commissioner, whether he knows of any other matter relative to the claim in question, and if he does, to state it.

Answer. I know nothing else, except to say that I am satisfied that Mr. Mumma would not have presented any claim against the Government unless it was fair and honest, and his reputation for honesty was high in our neighborhood. This claim was a small part of his losses by the Federal troops.

Deposition of William Roulette, for claimant, taken at Hagerstown, Md., the 15th day of October, 1888.

Claimant's counsel, H. H. Keedy; defendant's counsel, Felix Branigan.

That his occupation is that of a farmer; that he is sixty-three years of age; that his place or residence is Sharpsburgh, Md.; that he has no interest, direct or indirect, in this claim; and that he is not related to the claimant.

Interrogatory 1. State whether or not you were acquainted with Samuel Mumma, deceased, of Washington County, Md., during his life-time. If yea, when did you know him, where did he reside, and what was his occupation?

Answer. I was well acquainted with the deceased before the late war, during that war, and up to the time of his death. He lived on his farm, about 1 mile from Sharpsburgh; he lived there during the war; he was a farmer.

Interrogatory 2. State, if you know, whether or not the said Samuel Mumma furnished any stores or property to the Government of the United States or its organized forces. If yea, please state the circumstances under which they were furnished, the time, the amount, the value, and all you know in reference thereto?

Answer. Yes; they were taken; to the best of my knowledge, they were taken just after the battle of Antietam and before the Government supply-wagons arrived. I lived on the adjoining farm and was Mr. Mumma's nearest neighbor and was called by him to value his losses. I found about 20 cords of wood had been taken. There was fence taken, but I can not recollect at this length of time how much wood; at that time wood was worth $3 per cord. The corn-field, about 16 acres, was adjoining my field; there was about 37 bushels to the acre on that field, and I think that a fair estimate. It was worth 60 cents a bushel. At different times I saw the Union soldiers with wagons in the field taking the corn. There were about 16 loads of fodder in the field, worth about $5 per load. I saw the stock eating the fodder and some Union soldiers about there. I can not say anything in reference to the wheat except what was told to me by Mr. Mumma himself. I recollect of visiting the rick from which the wheat was taken. I think the wheat was pulled off the rick and from the sides. It has been a long time since it was taken, and my recollection is not very clear. Myself, together with Mr. Henry Piper and Henry F. Neikirk, made appraisement or valuation of his losses. Mr. Mumma lost very heavily from the war, principally by the Union soldiers. On Tuesday evening before the battle, which began on Wednesday morning, I saw the wheat ricks and they were then undisturbed.

Cross-examined by COUNSEL FOR UNITED STATES:

Cross-interrogatory 1. You saw none of the property taken, except some of the corn?

Answer. I saw none of the property taken, except some of the corn.

Cross-interrogatory 2. Then your appraisement was made upon the information of others?

Answer. Partly so, excepting to some of the corn, and I saw some of the fencing was missing, and also some of the wheat.

Cross-interrogatory 3. How much of the fencing was missing?

Answer. Certainly over a mile of it was taken. There were several miles of fencing on the place before the battle.

Cross-interrogatory 4. Did the Federal troops take any of your property at the time?

Answer. Yes; they did.

Cross-interrogatory 5. Did they give you any receipts or vouchers for the property?

Answer. Yes; a voucher for $4. They too kas much as $2,000, some of which I have been paid for since.

Cross-interrogatory 6. Did you try to get vouchers for that too?

Answer. No; we were all upset so and did not get any, and did not know who to get them from. We were glad to get off with our losses.

And in answer to the interrogatory propounded by the commissioner, whether he knows any other matter relative to the claim in question, and, if he does, to state it:

Answer. Nothing else, except that Mr. Mumma was a gentleman of good character and standing in the neighborhood. Nearly all of my neighbors got paid for their property or some of it, and I know no reason why this claim should not be paid, too.

Court of Claims.

HENRY C. MUMMA ET AL., EXECUTORS OF SAML MUMMA, DEC'D, vs. THE UNITED STATES. — Congressionals No. 334.

CLAIMANTS' REQUEST FOR FINDINGS OF FACT AND BRIEF.

The Claimants, considering the facts hereinafter set forth to be proven, and deeming them material to the due presentation of this cause in the findings of fact, request the Court to find the same as follows:

First. On the 18th, 19th and 20th of September, A. D 1862, Samuel Mumma, the claimants' testator, was the owner of a farm near Sharpsburg, Maryland, where the battle of Antietam was fought, on September 17th of said year, and had upon said farm and was the owner thereof, corn, wood, wheat, pasture, fence, cattle and hogs; see printed depositions, pages 1, 2. 5.

Second. That immediately after the battle of Antietam, and after the rebels had retreated across the Potomac and before the Union supplies had arrived, the said testator, Samuel Mumma, furnished to the organized forces of the United States under the commands of Gen. Meades, Gen. Sumner and Gen. McClellan necessary supplies, as follows:

295 cords of wood worth $3 per cord.....	$ 885 00
592 bushels of corn worth 60 cts. per bushel.....	355 20
16 loads or tons of fodder worth $5 per load or ton	80 00
75 bushels of wheat worth $1.25 per bushel.....	93 75

Pasture of the value of.....	50 00
One steer of the value of.....	30 00
One calf of the value of.....	6 00
Four hogs of the value of $10 each.....	40 00
	$1,539 95

See printed depositions, pages 1, 2, 5, 6, 7.

Third. That the claimant was loyal to the United States throughout the war of the rebellion. See finding of the Court on question of loyalty.

BRIEF FOR CLAIMANTS.

The claimants' testator was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout the war of rebellion as found by the Court.

His claim for compensation for stores and supplies furnished, he filed with the Quartermaster General and Commissary General under the Act of Congress of July 4th, A. D. 1864. Major George Bell, C. G. & Act D. Q. M. G., in his letter of Nov. 11th, 1874, returning the claim, amongst other things, says: "The claimant, who is ascertained to be an honest, loyal and truthful man, "alleges that the items of fuel and forage embraced in "his claim were not destroyed, but were actually used "by the army. No other evidence is produced in support of the claim, and as so long a time has elapsed "since the transaction occurred there does not seem to "be any means now of producing further information on "the subject. The papers are, therefore, respectfully "returned without recommendation for settlement."

The claim being inadequately investigated, the Executors of the said claimant petitioned to Congress, and said petition was, by the Committee of War Claims of the House of Representatives, referred to your Honorable Court, under section of Act of March 3rd, 1883. (22 statutes, 485.)

The evidence has been supplied and the proof can leave no doubt. Mr. Mumma lived on the battlefield of Antietam, about one mile north of Sharpsburg. His house and barn being in the line of battle, were destroyed by fire, with all their contents He was an old man, and, as was natural, became discouraged and disheartened. The army, after the battle, was upon his farm and in the immediate neighborhood. The supply wagons had not yet arrived and the soldiers and horses were compelled, the best they could, to subsist upon the country. Under these circumstances, the corn, wheat, fodder, wood, cattle and hogs were taken.

Samuel Mumma, junior, at that time a young man of 24 years of age, was upon the premises. He talked to the Generals in command. He saw the property taken and used by the organized forces of the United States. The neighbors of Mr. Mumma, Messrs. Neikirk and Roulette, testify to circumstances and facts which clearly show that the items charged for were taken and used as a matter of necessity by the Government.

The prices charged are proper and not excessive. The fencing was counted by the panels at the time, and the calculation then made. Over two miles of it was taken. Each panel of the worm fence contained nine rails and two stakes, and a panel would make eight feet in a straight line. The 20 cords of wood cut and 275 cords of rails, posts and stakes, in all 295 cords, was worth $3 per cord. The evidence clearly proves all the items charged in the petition, except the apples and bacon, and shows the prices proper.

This claim is similar to hundreds which have been paid by the Government. Mr. Mumma was a just and honest man, and his character and reputation beyond reproach, as testified to by his neighbors. Mr. Neikirk, on page 6 of depositions, says: "This claim was a small part of his losses by the Federal troops." And Mr. Roulette on page 8 of depositions, says: "Nearly all of my neighbors got paid for their property, or some of it, and I know no reason why this claim should not be paid too."

Respectfully submitted.

H. H. KEEDY,
Attorney for Claimants.

Memorandum

To: Mr. Francis Wilshin, ESC-HHA

From: Superintendent, Antietam-C & O Canal

Subject: Historic Structures Report

The following buildings are discussed in the Historic Structure Reports by Francis Wilshin in one volume. They will, therefore, be treated together in this report. The structures are Mumma Farm Spring House RSP-B-22, Piper Farm Slave Quarters RSP-B-21, Sherrick Farm Smoke House RSP-B-19-1.

Each of these buildings as described in Mr. Wilshin's report was heavily involved in the Battle of Antietam. They are located where some of the heaviest fighting took place and are representative of the western Marylander's farm buildings.

These buildings were deteriorating rapidly until they were rehabilitated and now they help to preserve the exterior historic scene. The restoration and continued preservation of these historic structures could be used as interpretive devices when future visitation warrants the need. The restoration work also has solved the safety hazards that these decaying buildings had presented.

1. STATEMENT OF MANAGEMENT'S REQUIREMENTS, PROPOSED WORK, AND ITS RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER FACETS OF THE PARK PROGRAM. (Provide detail data for "Management Information" on Form 10-411a, Supplemental Sheet and attach.)

The Spielman (Mumma) Spring House is the most historic building on the Mumma Farm. It was the only building on the farm not destroyed during the Battle of Antietam and still retains its 1862 appearance. It serves as a valuable exterior interpretive device.

The building also shelters the water supply for the entire Spielman Farm.

Deterioration of the walls and roof of this building has created an unsafe condition.

This project is necessary to prevent further deterioration and eliminate a safety hazard.

Map No. 1, Antietam Board Map No. 1, Daybreak

SEPTEMBER 17, 1862
DAYBREAK

The Confederate Reserve Artillery battalions of Col. J. Thompson Brown and Maj. William Nelson, five batteries each, crossed to the Virginia side of the Potomac by Williamsport ford, on the morning of September 15th. Brown's battalion was put in position to guard the ford and a ford one mile below. Nelson's battalion went down the river and took position on the heights commanding Blackford's (Botelor's) ford, one mile below Shepherdstown.

At daybreak September 17th, the 79th New York, of Christ's brigade, Ninth Corps, was guarding the signal station on Elk Ridge, nearly two miles east of Burnside Bridge. The 28th Massachusetts and 50th Pennsylvania of the same brigade, were on the Rohrersville road on Elk Ridge, supporting the Ira Harris (6th New York) cavalry, which was keeping open the communication with Gen. Franklin in Pleasant Valley. The three regiments rejoined their brigade about 10 A. M. of the 17th.

At 5.30 A. M. Franklin's (Sixth) Corps marched from the foot of Crampton's Gap in Pleasant Valley, seven miles southeast of Sharpsburg. The head of column reached the field about 10 A. M.

At daybreak Couch's Division, Fourth Corps, marched from Crampton's Gap down Pleasant Valley to occupy Maryland Heights. When near the foot of the Valley its orders were countermanded, and countermarching, the division reached the field late in the evening of the 17th.

On the morning of the 17th, Humphrey's Division, Fifth Corps, was near Frederick, about 23 miles from Sharpsburg. It marched at 3.30 P. M., and reached the field early in the morning of the 18th.

Note.—The position of Pleasanton's cavalry division is approximate only.

At daybreak the divisions of McLaws and R. H. Anderson were crossing the Potomac at Blackford's ford, two and three-quarter miles southwest of Sharpsburg.

At daybreak and until 7.30 A.M., A. P. Hill's division was at Harper's Ferry, twelve miles south of Sharpsburg.

Hampton's Cavalry brigade acted as rearguard to the divisions of McLaws and Anderson in their march from Pleasant Valley and Harper's Ferry. It crossed the Potomac at Knott Ford at the mouth of the Antietam about 7 A.M. and reached the south part of the field about 9 A.M.

Munford's cavalry brigade extended from the right of Walker's [illegible] to the mouth of the Antietam, about [illegible] mile and [illegible] and guarded the approaches from Pleasant Valley and Harper's Ferry.

PIPER FARM--"Slave Quarters"

Battle Brief (Second Stage--9 a.m. - 1 p.m.)

Battle action on the Piper farm was pretty much confined to the second stage of the three stage battle of Antietam, September 17, 1862. As previously noted in the action on the Mumma farm, troops from this sector had been dispatched by D. H. Hill to blunt the attack on the Confederate left. Ripley, Colquitt, and later Brig.-Gen. Samuel Garland had been heavily engaged. Evaluating the situation, Maj.-Gen. Daniel H. Hill writes:

> We had now lost all the ground wrested from the enemy, and were occupying the position held in the morning. But three of my brigades had been broken and much demoralized, and all the artillery had been withdrawn from my front. Rodes and Anderson were in the old road, and some stragglers had been gathered up and placed upon their left.
> It was now apparent that the Yankees were massing in our front, and that their grand attack would be made upon my position, which was the center of our line. I sent several urgent messages to General Lee for re-enforcements, but before any arrived a heavy force . . . advanced in three parallel lines, with all the precision of a parade day, upon my two brigades. They met with a galling fire, however, recoiled, and fell back; again advanced, and again fell back, and finally lay down behind the crest of the hill and kept up an irregular fire.[1]

The initial impact of the Federal attack was delivered by

Brig.-Gen. Nathan Kimball's brigade (French's division) about 9 p.m., followed closely by the brigades of Col. Dwight Morris and Brig.-Gen. Max Weber. Kimball describes the action:

> Directly in my front, in a narrow road running parallel with my line, and, being washed by water, forming a natural rifle-pit between my line and a large corn-field, I found the enemy in great force, as also in the corn-field in rear of the ditch. As my line advanced to the crest of the hill, a murderous fire was opened on it from the entire force in front. My advance farther was checked, and for three hours and thirty minutes the battle raged incessantly, without either party giving way.[2]

By 9:30 a.m. the Confederates had stiffened their defenses by moving up Maj. H.P. Jones' Battalion (8 guns) to take position just east of the Piper residence in the plowed ground. Supporting the battery were the 22nd and 23rd S.C. skirmishers which had taken position along the fence line.[3]

As French's division continued to press the attack on the embattled Confederates in the Sunken Road (Bloody Lane), fresh Federal reinforcements, about 10:30 a.m., moved rapidly up--Maj.-Gen. Israel B. Richardson's division with Brig.-Gen. Thomas F. Meagher's Irish brigade in the lead. Proudly bearing their green Irish flag, they deployed in line of battle at the edge of the cornfield and advanced in the face of a murderous artillery fire poured into them from batteries on the Piper farm. Two of these batteries--Capt. Grimes and Capt. Marcellus W.

Moorman--were in position just north of the Piper barn while Capt. M. B. Miller's was located in the center of the apple orchard. In support were the Confederate brigades of Brig.-Gen. Roger Pryor and Col. Cadmus Wilcox (R.H. Anderson's division).

The Confederates were drawn up in close column exhibiting a double front with battle flags defiantly displayed. Separating them from Meagher's eager advancing line was a clover field of about two acres. Meagher describes the attack:

> Advancing on the right and left obliquely from the center, the brigade poured in an effective and powerful fire upon the column, which it was their special duty to dislodge. Despite a fire of musketry, which literally cut lanes through our approaching line, the brigade advanced under my personal command within 30 paces of the enemy . . . the charge of bayonets I had ordered on the left was arrested, and thus the brigade, instead of advancing and dispersing the column with the bayonet, stood and delivered its fire, persistently and effectually maintaining every inch of the ground they occupied, until Brigadier General Caldwell, bringing up his brigade, enabled my brigade, after having been reduced to 500 men, to retire to the second line of defence.[4]

Ordered by Richardson to relieve Meagher's brigade, then hard pressed, Brig. Gen. John C. Caldwell's brigade moved by the right flank in rear of Meagher's line and passed the line to the front "in the most perfect order" in the face of a severe musketry fire. Caldwell writes:

> The brigade advanced steadily over the crest of a hill behind which the enemy were posted, receiving and > returning a heavy fire. We broke the line of the enemy along our entire front, except on the extreme right. Here there was a deep road, forming a natural rifle-pit in which the enemy had posted himself, and from which he fired on our advancing line.

> After the enemy opposed to my left and center had broken and fled through the cornfield, Colonel Barlow, by a skillful change of front, partially enveloped the enemy on his right, and, after a destructive enfilading fire, compelled them to surrender.[5]

The full success of this bold attack had been greatly augmented by an unfortunate blunder in battle orders given by Lieut.-Col. J. N. Lightfoot of the 6th Alabama. Instead of ordering his regiment to throw its right back from the Sunken Road as Brig.-Gen. R. E. Rodes had commanded to counter a flank fire, he gave the fatal command, "Sixth Alabama, about face; forward march." Maj. E. L. Hobson of the 5th Alabama, seeing this, asked Lightfoot if the order was intended for the whole brigade. The answer was "Yes"--whereupon the whole line retreated.[6]

Thus was abandoned a natural position of great strength that had been held so long with such gallantry at such unparalled cost in human life. Two hundred dead were in a 500-foot stretch of the road. Seldom in attack or defense has American valor on any battlefield appeared to better advantage. With organization broken, the intermingled brigades of Anderson and Hill rallied around the Piper buildings and stone fence supported by the batteries of Captains

Miller, J. W. Bondurant, R. Boyce, and Wm. B. Jones.[7]

The loss of Bloody Lane placed the Confederates in a critical situation. With masses of Federal troops occupying the Piper cornfield and orchard and all reserves exhausted,there seemed little that they could do to stem the tide that seemed sure to engulf the hill in their rear (Cemetery Hill) that held the key to Sharpsburg. Faced with a desperate situation, Hill resorted to desperate measures:

> I found a battery concealed in a corn-field, and ordered it to move out and open upon the Yankee columns. This proved to be Boyce's South Carolina battery. It moved out most gallantly, although exposed to a terrible direct and reverse fire from the long-range Yankee artillery across the Antietam. A caisson exploded, but the battery unlimbered, and with grape and canister drove the Yankees back. I was now satisfied that the Yankees were so demoralized that a single regiment of fresh men could drive the whole of them in our front across the Antietam.[8]

Hill then proceeded to collect about 200 men and lead them in a charge which was shortly broken. Another body of about an equal number of the 5th Alabama were directed to attack the Federal flank. Though this too was repulsed, the Federal momentum was now lost. "Having possession of Piper's house, by direction of General Richardson," writes Hancock, "the line was withdrawn a short distance to take position on a crest, which formed a more advantageous line."[9]

No further action of note took place in the Piper farm sector until 5:30 p.m., when the 7th Maine of Col. William H. Irwin's brigade (W.F. Smith's division) made its dramatic charge, without orders or support, across the Piper farm. Starting from a position on the Mumma farm a short distance southeast of the Dunkard Church, the advance crossed the Roulette farm and Bloody Lane, swept west of the Piper cornfield and orchard where, colliding with G. T. Anderson's command, it swung east to the southern part of the orchard near the Piper buildings, then veered sharply northeast to finally pass out of range through the orchard, cornfield and Bloody Lane.[10]

Though the buildings of the Piper farm, including the "Slave Quarters," did not suffer destruction by fire, they played a much greater battle role than either those of the Mumma or Sherrick farms. They became a veritable bastion in the Confederate Bloody Lane defensive Hancock well evaluates their significance:

> Finally an advance was made from this position to Piper's house by the brigade of Caldwell and the two regiments under Brooke, under a heavy fire of musketry and artillery, the enemy having a section of brass pieces in the front firing grape and a battery to the right throwing shell. This advance drove the enemy from the field and gave us possession of the house and its surroundings--the citadel of the enemy at this position of the line.[11]

Not only were the buildings used for offensive and defense operations, but one of them, the barn, was used as a hospital. Rodes, who put up such a gallant defense of the area before he was wounded, writes:

> Just as I was moving on after Lightfoot, I heard a shot strike Lieutenant Birney, who was immediately behind me. Wheeling, I found him falling, and found that he had been struck in the face. He found that he could walk after I raised him, though he thought a shot or piece of shell had penetrated his head just under the eye. I followed him a few paces, and watched him until he had reached a barn, a short distance to the rear, where he first encountered some one to help him in case he needed it.[12]

Like the Mummas, the Pipers hastily vacated their home on September 15, two days prior to the battle. Mary Ellen Smith, daughter of Henry Piper, writes:

> I resided with my father, Henry Piper, the claimant, on his farm north of Sharpsburg, about one-half mile on the Hagerstown pike. I remember the battle of Antietam. On Monday, prior to the battle, we all went away from our house to my uncle's Samuel J. Piper, who resided immediately on the Potomac river, about three miles west of my father's house. We left everything as it was on the farm, taking only the horses with us and one carriage. We remained until Friday after the battle, when we returned to the farm. On our return the Union forces were encamped upon the farm and in the vicinity, and the Union cavalry were moving along the Hagerstown pike in great numbers towards Sharpsburg. We had some difficulty in passing across the pike to get to our house. We found the house occupied as a field hospital. We brought back the horses with us and they were put in the barn. A large number of cattle, sheep, and hogs belonging to father still remained on the place. I saw the Union soldiers butchering some of the cattle, when we came back, in the barn field. The house was vacated at once, and we remained at home after this

12. Ibid., p. 1038.

during the entire war. The Union forces were encamped in vicinity for several weeks after the battle--at least some portion of them. During this time, and after we returned home, all the cattle and sheep on the farm were taken and used by the U.S. military forces. The hogs were also taken and used by the same forces. The sheep were all taken the day and after we returned. The hogs and cattle were slaughtered at different times. I remember that four of the calves were slaughtered in the orchard back of the blacksmith shop.[13]

The testimony of Mary Ellen Smith was confirmed and further elaborated by Jeremiah Cornelius Summers, ex-slave who lived on the Piper farm in the "Slave Quarters". Appearing before R. W. Grove, Justice of the Peace, November 17, 1886, he stated:

My name is Jeremiah Cornelius Summers; I am a farmer by occupation; I am forty years of age; my place of residence is Sharpsburg, Washington county, Md.; I have resided here all my life.

When asked--"What do you know of any property being taken from Mr. Henry Piper by the military forces of the United States; if anything, state fully all the circumstances as you remember them?--he replied:

I know the Union forces took one roan mare from Mr. Piper after the battle of Antietam, and cattle, sheep, and hogs, and also potatoes.

I was living with Mr. Piper at the time. I remember that on Monday, in the afternoon before the battle, which took place on Wednesday, the 17th day of September, 1862, that Mr. Piper took all of his family and all of his horses, and went back to his brother's house, immediately on the banks in a bend of the Potomac river, in order to be out of range of the battle, which then seemed about to come on. Mr. Samuel I. Piper, where we went, lived about three miles from Mr. Henry Piper's.

Here we remained until Friday after the battle, when we all returned home, bringing back the horses we had taken away. We put the horses in the barn when we came back. The Union forces were encamped in our fields, and the Union cavalry were encamped on one of our fields on the Boonsboro' pike, and others were moving along the Hagerstown pike towards Sharpsburg. The Hagerstown pike was so full of the Union forces moving towards Shaprsburg that we had some difficulty in passing across the road to the house.

The horses had not been in the stable long, probably not two hours, before a squad of Union cavalry came to the stable and took the roan mare.

I saw the horse taken myself, and know they were Union cavalry. The roan mare was a fine animal. She was worth at the time two hundred and fifty dollars. I saw her afterwards at the camps of the Union cavalry.

When we returned on Friday, as I have just stated, there were still remaining on the place a large number of Mr. Piper's cattle. I saw the Union soldiers engaged in butchering some of these cattle when we came home. They were in the barn, killed. The Union forces butchered all the cattle remaining within two or three days after we came back. I saw them butchering 4 calves in the orchard, near the shop. I saw them butchering cows, steers, and young cattle.

There were 16 head of cows, steers, and young cattle, not including the calves, that I know were butchered by the Union soldiers for the use of the army, after we came back. Mr. Piper had other cattle taken, but by whom, I cannot tell. I only speak of those which came under my own notice.

> There were a large number of hogs also remaining on the place when we returned and also eighteen sheep. I know there were eighteen head of fat hogs, sixteen shoats, and a number of pigs just large enough to take away from the sow. I could not say how many pigs. I saw the Union soldiers butcher all these hogs at different times after we came back. Sometimes they killed five or six at a time and sometimes four.
> The eighteen sheep were all taken the same day after we came home. They were taken for the use of the Union forces. They were all fine, large sheep.

When asked what he knew,if anything,in regard to the potatoes being taken by the Union forces, he replied:

> I know Mr. Piper had a field of about one acre of potatoes. I know that these potatoes were dug and used by the Union forces. I saw them digging them many times. I also helped to plow the field after the Union forces had moved away, and we only found about two bushels remaining in the whole field. I know it was a very fine field of Irish potatoes. Mr. Piper had a patch of sweet potatoes. These were all taken by the Union forces. I saw them digging these potatoes.

When asked what he knew, if anything, of wood being taken from Mr. Piper, from his wood lot out by the Dunkard Church, east of the church and north of Mrs. Mumma's, in 1863, and if any of the wheat had been taken in the bundle for forage from the rick at the same time, and of cattle being pastured for the Union forces, he replied:

> I know Mr. Piper had eight or ten cords of wood taken for fuel by the Union forces in July or August, 1863, and that at the same time the same troops pastured a herd of beef-cattle on his fields, and that the same forces took wheat from the rick in the market field, in the bundle, for forage.[14]

14. Appendix--A, p. 136, ibid, pp. 152-153.

Apparently the "Slave Quarters" and the other Piper buildings suffered little battle damage since a claim of only $25 was submitted as "Damage to house and barn," but the battle impact upon the farm--crops, fencing, stock, equipment, household and kitchen furniture, clothing and supplies--was heavily damaging, totalling, by the family's sworn estimates, $4,022.75.

These damages first submitted in accordance with Special Order No. 22, First Army Corps, dated October 6, 1862, are shown as follows in the Henry Piper Claim No. 445 for which an award of 2,488.85 was made:

6 Int. I now show you this paper, which I will ask the Examiner to mark Exhibit C, and I ask you what it is?

A. This is an appraisement made of property and for pasturage taken in July or August, 1863, by the U.S. military forces, and to it I see is the oath of allegiance. The appraisement was made by the generals, B. F. Rohrback, Jacob Lakins, and Jacob Snyder. This claim has never been considered before, although filed, as I understand, in the Department. Paper filed as exhibit to claimant's deposition:

In the case of the action on the Piper farm, the Antietam Battlefield Commission or Board was fortunate in the response it received from veteran units relative to their battle position during significant stages of the fighting. In the Papers of Ezra A. Carman, previously mentioned, there are several such maps pertaining to the Bloody Lane action. One of these, prepared by W. D. Ballantine, 2d Florida, Pryor's Brigade (R.H. Anderson's division), is particularly revealing in that it clearly shows to what extent the Piper Lane and buildings constituted the main line of Confederate defense once Bloody Lane has been lost. The sketch shows the line of advance of the 2d Florida and its specific position on the left of the line. The sketch bears this notation:

> Crossed river at daybreak and advanced in this order 2 Fla 8 Fla 5 Fla 3 Va 14 Ala. Moved left in front to Pipers Lane and came into line in order named. The right wing of 2 Fla and the left of 8 F in orchard and others on the right but most of the fighting was done in corn in front of the orchard. Had 240 men.[16]

Another of these sketches shows 8th Florida, Pryor's brigade, submitted in letter of W. Baga January 18, 1895. The sketch bears this notation:

> Crossed the pike road went down to a barn, turned left through an apple orchard and cornfield and engaged enemy, drove enemy out of corn and advanced across a sunken dirt road and to a hill.

> At hill was under a very heavy fire and did not remain long, but fell back to dirt road and found Confederates in it. Held here for short time, but had to give up. Ordered to fall back by someone on right, supposed to be of Featherston. Fell back quickly through open field between house and barn, reformed on pike, fell in on the left of a Geo brigade and advanced to blue dotted line, but was driven back by an enfilade artillery fire from the left and fell back to pike, and on picket on the pike on night of 17th. On 18th formed in line on the right of the pike and between that and the barn where it remained until 8 p.m.[17]

On the sketch map showing the position of the 10th Alabama, Cummings' brigade (R. H. Anderson's division) there appears this statement of Laulu [?] Darby, Birmingham, Alabama:

> We were in the cornfield where you have it marked "bloody" and I think we went very near, if not to the lane. Pryor's Brigade was on our left. We fell back about 1/4 of a mile, formed to the right and some 200 yards in advance from our first line.
> Entered the cornfield just beyond and to the right of the barn, and the battle was raging at the time. Darby thinks the regiment numbered 400 or 450. Says the brigade went into action with Pryor's Brigade which was on the left.[18]

Another of these sketch maps shows the positions of "Mahone's Brigade" [R. H. Anderson's division], submitted in a letter of W. W. Chamberlaine, September 4, 1895. They are first shown in the grass field generally south of the Piper lane and buildings, then in the pike behind the stone wall and finally in the plowed field northeast of the buildings.[19]

Two significant sketches were found in the Carman Papers showing the thrust of the Union attack along the Sunken Road by Kimball's brigade. One is entitled, "Gen. Kimball's sketch of position of his brigade." Attached to it is an old newspaper clipping from Ogden, Utah, dated April 12, 1894, which reads:

> Dear Old Comrade:
> Your letter of the 4th inst. was received and contents noted. Answering, I give you the landmarks near our line, established after we had driven the rebels from their position east of Roulette's house, through the woods and cornfields and from the sunken road into the cornfield and hills beyond.
> The 132d Pennsylvania's position was in front of the tree and extending to the right of it. Your colors in your centre, the length of one company to the right of the tree. We drove the enemy as we advanced from the position first occupied, after crossing Antietam creek, marching forward at 9:30 a.m., through woods, cornfields, Roulette's house, barn and orchard, into the sunken road, from which we drove them at 11 a.m., and held this line for three hours and a half without support of any kind, until relieved by a brigade from Richardson's division. We were under a terrific fire from the enemy's artillery posted on the hill in our front and his infantry in the corn field.

I am growing old now, in my 72nd year of life, I have been an invalid for two years past and am very feeble, yet I get to my office nearly every day. Though nearly thirty-two years have gone by, I can never forget that battle nor the gallant soldiers who fought under my command, and who upheld in triumph our dear old flag in victory over the traitorous enemy. God bless the survivors! Please present my regards to Colonel Hitchcock and every surviving member of the gallant 132nd.

Hoping that which I send you may be satisfactory, I am, with an earnest, heartfelt God bless you.

The other sketch, submitted in a letter of W. Donaldson, dated "Chandler Ind Feb 3 1895," shows additional landmarks relative to Kimball's position with special reference to the 14th Indiana along the Sunken Road. Among points located are:

A 14th Indiana
B Balance of brigade
C Fence in rear of rebel line
D Stone fence
E Rail fence and stack field

Also shown is the position of "wild cherry tree" and "Haystacks."[21]

Family Data

The first of the Pipers to come to the Sharpsburg area was Jacob Piper, Sr., in 1763. A native of Germany, he, unlike most of the German immigrants that came to the Antietam Valley, bought a townhouse rather than a farm. It was a log house which still stands. In 1790 he sold the town house and bought a farm on the river called "Piles Delight." His wife, Elizabeth Flick, whom he had married in Germany, bore him a son, Daniel Piper, in 1780. Jacob died in 1813 and his wife five years later.[23]

On August 29, 1845, Daniel Piper, Sr., purchased from Jacob Miller and his wife Elizabeth what then became known as the Piper farm.[24] The Millers, near neighbors, were among the earliest settlers in the area. The farm had been in the Miller family for years, having been acquired by John Miller sometime previous to 1821 when his heirs effected a property settlement.[25] This farm had first been patented to John Elwick, August 4, 1742, as "Ellwicks Dwelling" of 180 acres.[26]

Joseph Smith acquired the patent from Elwick, February 1, 1747. On May 1st of the same year he acquired an additional 100 acres known as "Smiths Purchase."[28]

Joseph Smith is shown as having a patent of 270 acres known as "Elwicks Dwelling," which reads in part:

> Charles: Know ye that Whereas Joseph Smith of Prince Georges County by his Humble Petition to Our Agent for management of Land Affairs within this Province did set forth that a certain John Elswick of the afs County had on the fourth Day of August anno Domini Seventeen hundred and forty two Granted him by Patent under the Great of this Province a Tract of Land called Elswicks Dwelling lying and being in Prince Georges County afs Containing one hundred and Eighty Acres under the yearly Rent of Seven Shillings and two pence half Penny Sterling who had since sold and conveyed the

The Piper farm at the time of its purchase in 1845 consisted of two tracts--"Mount Pleasant" of 143 acres, and "Resurvey on "Ellwick dwelling" of 13 acres and three perches. The deed reads in part:

> the one parcel of land being part of a tract called Mount Pleasant, and the other being part of a tract called Resurvey on Ellswick dwelling, viz. Before his death in 1857, Daniel Piper, Sr., and his wife sold the property in 1854 to their son, Henry Piper, who was living on the farm at the time of the battle.[31] He was then 53 years old. The farm consisted then of 231 acres according to his statement before the Commissioner of Claims.[32]

Construction and Structural Changes

The "Slave Quarters" would definitely appear to be the oldest building on the Piper farm. Though no documentary proof has been found to pinpoint the date of its construction, there is evidence to indicate it may well be an eighteenth century structure. The land constituting a farm of 180 acres was patented August 4, 1742, by John Elwick and called "Ellwick's dwelling." Being located in a particularly fertile valley it would appear to have attracted early development by Elwick or Joseph Smith, who purchased the farm February 1, 1747, and expanded the area on May 1 of the same year by acquiring 65 additional acres known as "Smith's Purchase."

Mr. S. Webster Piper, who sold the farm to the Antietam-Sharpsburg Museum, states that the existing Piper residence has been enlarged from a log structure that is predated by the "Slave Quarters." There is a definite possibility that the "Slave Quarters" may be one and the same as "Ellwick's dwelling." It is of interest to note that Joseph Smith was renting the farm in 1747 under "the yearly Rent of Seven Shillings and two pence half Penny Sterling."

Further credence is given this possibility by Architect Archie Franzen, National Park Service, who states that the architectural detail of construction would indicate that it is an approximate mid-eighteenth century structure. It is believed that the name "Slave Quarters" is derived from the fact that Jerry Cornelius Summers, an ex-slave of the Pipers, lived there for many years. He was living in the quarters as a young man of 24 at the time of the battle and proved an excellent eye witness to the damage to the Piper property effected by the Federal troops who occupied the farm immediately after the close of the fighting.[35]

The Census Records do not show Henry Piper as owning any slaves at the time of the 1850 census. Summers must have been given his freedom sometime prior thereto.

35. Maps and Illustrations--Illustration - 1, p. 203.

The original structure was a smaller building than the present one with measurements of 25' x 14'-3". A later addition at an undetermined period extended the north end of the building 5'6". This alteration was made either in 1880 or a few years earlier since the shingles on the extended roof look comparatively new, as is shown in an 1880 photograph furnished by Mr. S. Webster Piper, great grandson of Henry Piper.[36]

Particularly significant is the fact that this photograph shows the original roof line. At a later date the roof was raised by adding a log wall over the masonry to provide an additional floor for living quarters. Information gained from Mr. Piper would indicate that this change was effected about 1912-14 when rather extensive alterations were made in the residence and the barn to accommodate a new farm renter with a sizeable family.[37]

Subsequent to that time the northwest window has been altered to a door.

Architect A. W. Franzen describes the structure in some detail:

> There is a large but shallow stone fireplace at the north end and the first or grade floor is sub-divided into two rooms by a board partition and stair in the north room of the floor above. Each lower floor room has an outside door on the east but there is no connecting opening between them. The north room has three windows but there is only one window in the south room. The second floor is also sub-divided into two rooms separated by a board partition with the stairway occuring [sic] in the south room. There are two gable windows in the north room and one gable window in the south room. The south rooms on both floors are smaller than the north rooms.

---

37. Maps and Illustrations--Illustration - 3, p. 207.

The exterior stone walls are faced rubble on both sides and are filled between the facing stones with clay and small stones.

Portions of the original rafter plate, which was only an inch thick, were left intact when the roof was removed. A layer of stone was laid over the plate and dressed logs were added to increase the height of the structure. The log portion is three logs high and was set back from the outside face of the wall to accomodate [sic] furring strips that permitted beveled edge sliding boards to clear the masonry face of the wall below thus forming a drip. Shortly after 1900 drop siding replaced the earlier siding.

The original rafters support roofers spaced six inches on center which in turn support modern corrugated iron roofing. A small portion of the siding and roofing was removed to examine the underlying fabric. No vestiges of period shingles have been found.

The window sash are six lights over three lights and are double-hung. The exterior doors are board and batten and swung on wrought iron strap hinges with pintle type butts.

The brick chimney above the roof line was rebuilt recently using modern brick.

The first or grade floor is now thick concrete and may have been either of wood construction or plain dirt. Arrangements have been made to break out the concrete for further investigation.

The interior walls were plastered and have been whitewashed many times. The ceiling joists over the first floor level are exposed while the second floor ceiling is plastered.[38]

Two modern photographs show the building as it appears today-- one a view from the northwest and the other a view from the southeast taken in 1968.[40] In the view from the northwest it will be observed that a window in the 8' extended section of the building (first alteration prior to 1880) has been changed to a door. Both alterations show well the architectural detail involved in the raising of the roof of the structure (second alteration 1912-1914).

Both illustrations 4 and 5 show areas of serious deterioration in the stone wall structure and in the sash, frames and sills which will necessitate replacement.

A better appreciation of the architectural features of the structure is provided by the drawings of two student architects in the summer of 1968--William B. Flickinger, Jr., and Roy W. Reynolds of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia. The sheets are entitled: "Elevations," "Cross Section and Framing Detail," "Fireplace and Stair Detail" and "Floor Plans" (Franzen's Report.)[41]

Deposition of Henry Piper.

Henry Piper, being duly sworn, in response to interrogatories by the commissioner, deposes as follows:

My name is Henry Piper; my occupation is that of a farmer; I am 77 years of age; my place of residence is Sharpsburg; my post-office address is Sharpsburg; I am the claimant.

Being interrogated by P. E. Dye, for the claimant, the witness says:

1 Interrogatory. Where did you reside during the war of 1861 and what was your occupation at that time; your post-office address during the same period?

Answer. I resided about one-half mile north of Sharpsburg, on the Hagerstown pike, on my farm of 231 acres. I was a farmer. My post-office address was Sharpsburg, Washington county, Maryland.

2 Int. You are the claimant in this case; you have heretofore had a claim prosecuted in the Quartermaster's Office, upon which a payment was made. Do you remember how much was paid you on account of that claim; how much was the amount of that claim as laid?

A. I am the claimant. I had a claim prosecuted heretofore upon which a payment was made of $913 and some odd cents. The amount of that claim as laid was $1,835.80, but no item in the present claim was included in that claim.

3 Int. Did you also file a claim for commissary stores at the same time in a different branch of the War Department?

A. I did.

4 Int. Did you have an appraisement made by a military board of the property and stores taken from you by the U. S. military forces in 1862? If you answer yes, are you able to say about what time in 1862 this was?

A. A military board was ordered to make appraisement, as I remember, and the board was convened under some military order, some time in October, '62. I remember the name of one of the officers was Major Snodgrass, of some Pennsylvania regiment. I furnished this board a list of the property, including all manner of stores, supplies, and property of all descriptions. I did not include in that list any property which I knew to have been taken by the rebel army. The board of officers took testimony, visited my property, and finally made an award in my favor, which amounted in the aggregate to $2,488.85. The award made by them was stated in several items, and embraced only such property as had been taken, used, or destroyed up to the date of the award. My understanding is that the orders convening the board of officers, the list of articles I furnished them, and the award was filed at the time in the War Department. I find, on reflection and in examining the bill heretofore filed in the Quartermaster General's Office, that the roan mare was claimed for in that account, but whether allowed, I don't know. I will here add that I had other property taken, subsequent to the time I made the list referred to, and which has never been heretofore considered by the Department, although filed, as I understand, in the War Department.

5 Int. I now show you what purports to be a copy of the orders and proceedings of the military board referred to—a list of the articles of property furnished by you to the board is attached. Is this list a true copy of the one you furnished the board?

A. I presume those are the copies of the orders. The amount of the award is what I remember it to have been. The list of articles correspond to a list a copy of which I have in my hands.

By the Attorney: I now offer the copy of the orders convening the board, and copy of the award and copy of the list of articles, and ask the commissioner to mark them, respectively, Exhibits A and B to claimant's deposition:

HEADQ'RS 9TH REG'T P. R. C., Oct. 25, 1862.

In accordance with the foregoing order, issued from Headquarters First Army Corps, dated October 6, 1862, I would beg leave respectfully to report as follows:

The board appointed under said order proceeded at once on the performance of the duties contemplated. And there being but three different properties named in the original order, yet, by subsequent orders from headquarters, the number has been increased to over twenty. We have personally visited all the different properties named in our return, and in our examination have endeavored to ascertain the qualities of the different kinds of articles put down for valuation, and in our assessments have come as near as possible to the true value of the goods or chattels, taking the cash price of such articles when new as a basis of valuation. It will be seen there is a great discrepancy between our valuation and the assessment made by the individuals themselves, or, as in some instances, by citizens in the vicinity. All we can say, on our part is, we have endeavored to act conscientious between man and man and between the citizen and the Government. We have also asked of all those applying for damage to procure a certificate, with the seal of the court annexed, that they are and have been true and loyal citizens to the Government of the United States. All who have sent in such certificate the same is noted in our certificate of their valuation. Also those who did not procure one is also noted. We have also been careful to prevent claims for damage sustained prior to the 16th of September, 1862, and have also endeavored to ascertain, as nearly as possible, by whom the goods were taken, and from the best information we are satisfied that the greater portion of clothing and eatables were taken by the rebels. The destruction of fences and the grain and hay which was taken has mostly been taken by the Union troops. The buildings were mostly fired by the bursting of shells, but we are strongly of the opinion some of those buildings were fired by the rebels. The buildings were all fired before our army got forward.

Hoping the report, as well as the valuations, may prove satisfactory, I subscribe myself, yours truly,

6 Int. I now show you this paper, which I will ask the Examiner to mark Exhibit C, and I ask you what it is?

A. This is an appraisement made of property and for pasturage taken in July or August, 1863, by the U. S. military forces, and to it I see is the oath of allegiance. The appraisement was made by the generals, E. F. Rohrback, Jacob Lakins, and Jacob Snyder. This claim has never been considered before, although filed, as I understand, in the Department. Paper filed as exhibit to claimant's deposition:

of Maryland in and for said county, personally appeared B. F. Rohrback, Jacob Lakins, and Jacob Snyder, three good and loyal men, citizens of the United States, and attached to the Constitution and Government of the same, being duly sworn to value and appraise the property taken, and pasture of Henry Piper, by the troops of the United States in the month of July, 1863, have ascertained the value of said property, and do value and appraise the same according to the foregoing list of items and account above stated.

Sworn and subscribed before me this 23d day of November, 1863.

JACOB GOOD, J. P.

The property was taken as stated in this appraisement and the pasture furnished, and the prices are reasonable for the time and place as stated. I wish to say that the amended petition should be annexed in this case, so as to conform to the facts. It should be as follows:

Bill of Items.

1.	One roan mare, 4 years old . . .	$250
2.	Eight milch cows, at $30 . . .	240
3.	Two steer beeves, at $30 . . .	60
4.	Ten head young cattle, at $18 . . .	180
5.	Four calves, at $5 ; . . .	20
6.	Eighteen fat hogs, at $10 . . .	180
7.	Sixteen shoats, at $5	80
8.	Six pigs, at $2	12
9.	Eighteen head of sheep, at $5 . . .	90
10.	One hundred bushels of Irish potatoes, at $1 .	100
11.	Thirty bushels of sweet potatoes, at $2 . .	60

The foregoing should take the place of items from 1 to 7 in the printed petition. Perhaps the above items might be made more specific, but the items as stated by me are absolutely correct as to price, and are reasonable for the time and place. The items from 8 to 11 in the printed petition as it now stands are correct. I had other stock which were not included in this amended bill of items, and which are not charged. The roan mare, the cattle, sheep, hogs, and calves were taken after my return home on the 19th, and on and after the 19th day of September, 1862, by the Union forces. They were all taken under my own observation.

7 Int. Do you remember whether you filed with the military board any proof authenticated by the clerk of the court of this county showing your loyalty at that time to the Government of the United States?

A. Yes; I remember it well. My son, Samuel D. Piper, obtained a similar paper at the same time.

8 Int. Have you ever received pay or compensation, either in whole or in part, for the claim as herein amended, including the items 8 to 11, inclusive, of the printed list?

A. I never have, unless compensation was allowed for the roan mare in the claim heretofore presented before the Q. M. Department, wherein I have said I received $913 and odd cents. I ask my attorney to examine that subject, and if compensation has already been made for the roan mare, then strike it out of this claim; otherwise, retain it.

Question by Examiner: Do you know of any other matter relating to the subject of the matter of inquiry. If you do, please state it?

A. I think of nothing further.

HENRY PIPER.

Deposition of Jeremiah Cornelius Summers.

Also, at the same time and place, was produced Jeremiah Cornelius Summers, a witness on behalf of the claimant, who first being duly sworn, deposed and said:

My name is Jeremiah Cornelius Summers; I am a farmer by occupation; I am forty years of age; my place of residence is Sharpsburg, Washington county, Md.; I have resided here all my life.

Being interrogated by P. E. Dye, for the claimant, in response to interrogatories, he, witness, testified as follows:

1 Interrogatory. Where did you reside during the war of 1861, commonly called the war of the rebellion?

Answer. I resided at this place during the entire war.

2 Int. What do you know of any property being taken from Mr. Henry Piper by the military forces of the United States; if anything, state fully all the circumstances as you remember them?

A. Do you mean I shall state how I know it and where I was?

By Attorney: Yes; state fully all the circumstances.

Witness: I know the Union forces took one roan mare from Mr. Piper after the battle of Antietam, and cattle, sheep, and hogs, and also potatoes.

I was living with Mr. Piper at the time. I remember that on Monday, in the afternoon before the battle, which took place on Wednesday, the 17th day of September, 1862, that Mr. Piper took all of his family and all of his horses, and went back to his brother's house, immediately on the banks in a bend of the Potomac river, in order to be out of the range of the battle, which then seemed about to come on. Mr. Samuel I. Piper, where we went, lived about three miles from Mr. Henry Piper's.

Here we remained until Friday after the battle, when we all returned home, bringing back the horses we had taken away. We put the horses in the barn when we came back. The Union forces were encamped in our fields, and the Union cavalry were encamped on one of our fields on the Boonsboro' pike, and others were moving along the Hagerstown pike towards Sharpsburg. The Hagerstown pike was so full of the Union forces moving towards Sharpsburg that we had some difficulty in passing across the road to the house.

The horses had not been in the stable long, probably not two hours, before a squad of Union cavalry came to the stable and took the roan mare.

I saw the horse taken myself, and know they were Union cavalry. The roan mare was a fine animal. She was worth at the time two hundred and fifty dollars. I saw her afterwards at the camps of the Union cavalry.

When we returned on Friday, as I have just stated, there were still remaining on the place a large number of Mr. Piper's cattle. I saw the Union soldiers engaged in butchering some of these cattle when we came home. They were in the barn, killed. The Union forces butchered all the cattle remaining within two or three days after we came back. I saw them butchering 4 calves in the orchard, near the shop. I saw them butchering cows, steers, and young cattle.

There were 16 head of cows, steers, and young cattle, not including the calves, that I know were butchered by the Union soldiers for the use of the army, after we came back. Mr. Piper had other cattle taken, but by whom, I cannot tell. I only speak of those which came under my own notice.

There were a large number of hogs also remaining on the place when we returned and also eighteen sheep. I know there were eighteen head of fat hogs, sixteen shoats, and a number of pigs just large enough to take away from the sow. I could not say how many pigs. I saw the Union soldiers butcher all these hogs at different times after we came back. Sometimes they killed five or six at a time and sometimes four.

The eighteen sheep were all taken the same day after we came home. They were taken for the use of the Union forces. They were all fine, large sheep.

3 Int. What do you know, if anything, in relation to potatoes being taken by the Union forces?

A. I know Mr. Piper had a field of about one acre of potatoes. I know that these potatoes were dug and used by the Union forces. I saw them digging them many times. I also helped to plow the field after the Union forces had moved away, and we only found about two bushels remaining in the whole field. I know it was a very fine field of Irish potatoes Mr. Piper had a patch of sweet potatoes. These were all taken by the Union forces. I saw them digging these potatoes.

4 Int. What do you know, if anything, of wood being taken from Mr. Piper, from his wood-lot out by the Dunkard Church, east of the church and north of Mrs. Mummas's, in 1863, and do you know of any wheat being taken in the bundle for forage from the rick at the same time, and of cattle being pastured for the Union forces, all for the Union army. What can you say about it?

A. I know Mr. Piper had eight or ten cords of wood taken for fuel by the Union forces in July or August, 1863, and that at the same time the same troops pastured a herd of beef-cattle on his fields, and that the same forces took wheat from the rick in the market field, in the bundle, for forage.

5 Int. Are you related to the claimant?

A. I am not, and have no interest in this claim.

Question by the Commissioner: Do you know of any other matter in relation to the subject of inquiry; if you do, please state it?

A. I think of nothing further.

JEREMIAH C. SUMMERS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of November, 1886.

Justice of the Peace.

Deposition of Mary Ellen Smith.

Also, at the same time and place, was produced Mrs. Mary Ellen Smith, a witness on behalf of the claimant, who, being sworn, in answer to interrogatories by the commissioner, testifies as follows:

My name is Mary Ellen Smith; I reside in Sharpsburg; my occupation is a housekeeper; I am 45 years of age; I am the daughter of the claimant.

In answer to interrogatories propounded by P. E. Dye, for the claimant, the witness testified as follows:

1 Int. Where did you reside during the war of 1861, and what can you say of property alleged to have been taken by the U. S. forces from your father's place in 1862, after the battle of Antietam?

A. I resided with my father, Henry Piper, the claimant, on his farm north of Sharpsburg, about one-half mile on the Hagerstown pike. I remember the battle of Antietam. On Monday, prior to the battle, we all went away from our house to my uncle's, Samuel J. Piper, who resided immediately on the Potomac river, about three miles west of my father's house. We left everything as it was on the farm, taking only the horses with us and one carriage. We remained until Friday after the battle, when we returned to the farm. On our return the Union forces were encamped upon the farm and in the vicinity, and the Union cavalry were moving along the Hagerstown pike in great numbers towards Sharpsburg. We had some difficulty in passing across the pike to get to our house. We found the house occupied as a field hospital. We brought back the horses with us and they were put in the barn. A large number of cattle, sheep, and hogs belonging to father still remained on the place. I saw the Union soldiers butchering some of the cattle, when we came back, in the barn field. The house was vacated at once, and we remained at home after this during the entire war. The Union forces were encamped in vicinity for several weeks after the battle—at least some portion of them. During this time, and after we returned home, all the cattle and sheep on the farm were taken and used by the U. S. military forces. The hogs were also taken and used by the same forces. The sheep were all taken the day and after we returned. The hogs and cattle were slaughtered at different times. I remember that four of the calves were slaughtered in the orchard back of the blacksmith shop.

General interrogatory by commissioner: Do you know any other matter in relation to the subject of inquiry; if you do, please state it?

A. I think of nothing further. I made an affidavit heretofore. MARY ELLEN SMITH.

Deposition of Jacob Lakins.

Also, at the same time and place, was produced Jacob Lakins, a witness on behalf of claimant, who, first being duly sworn, in answer to interrogatories by the commissioner, deposed as follows:

My name is Jacob Lakins; I am a saddler by occupation; my post-office address is Sharpsburg, Md., which is also my residence; I am 52 years of age; I am not related to the claimant.

The witness being interrogated by P. E. Dye, for the claimant, testified as follows:

1 Q. You are acquainted with the claimant, Henry Piper; did you make an appraisement of property and pasture alleged to have been taken by the U. S. military forces in 1863.

A. I am; with two other gentlemen I made an appraisement.

2 Q. I call your attention to Exhibit "C" in the deposition in this case; will you please tell me what that exhibit is?

A. (Looking at the paper.) This is our appraisement. The gentlemen that were with me were B. F. Rohrback and Jacob Snyder. The amount of the appraisement was $102.25.

3 Q. What can you say of this appraisement?

A. I believe it to be a just appraisement. It was made to the best of our judgment at the time.

General question by the Examiner: Do you know of any other matter relative to the subject of inquiry; if you do, please state it?

A. I think of nothing further.

JACOB LAKINS.

Deposition of Philip Pollard.

The deposition of Philip Pollard for claimant, taken before Raleigh Sherman, commissioner, at the city of Washington, on the 4th day of February, 1887; claimant's counsel, P. E. Dye, defendant's counsel, Lewis Cochran.

Philip Pollard, being duly sworn, in response to interrogatories by the Commissioner, deposes as follows:

My name is Philip Pollard; my occupation is a coal and wood dealer; I am 51 years of age; my place of residence is 1517 Vermont Av. N. W., city; my post office address is same place; I am not related to the claimant and have no interest in the claim.

Being interrogated by P. E. Dye, for the claimant, the witness says:

Question 1. During the war of 1861 you were Lieut. and R. Q. M. of the 3d Pa. Cavalry in the service of the United States?

A. I was.

Q. 2. Were you on duty with your regiment in Maryland prior to and subsequent to the battle of Antietam in Sept., 1862? If you answer you were, state whether you were encamped near Sharpsburg, Md., and on what road, if you know, and on whose land; did you remain in that camp some days after the battle; did you make the acquaintance of Henry Piper at that time?

A. I was. I was encamped on the pike leading from Sharpsburg to Boonsboro, on the land of Henry Piper; we remained for some days in that camp at that time; I made the acquaintance of Henry Piper; his residence was north of our camp and a little east of the pike leading from Sharpsburg to Hagerstown.

Q. 3. Immediately after the battle of Antietam do you remember whether there was some difficulty getting up the supply trains, say subsistence trains; do you remember where, or about where, the trains were parked prior to and during the battle; would it have taken some hours to bring them forward from that place to supply the immediate wants of the army?

A. There was as there always is delay after a battle; in the direction of Frederick and at different points along the correll awaiting further orders; it would have taken some time under the most favorable circumstances; the roads were occupied by the movement of troops, artillery, and ammunition.

Q. 4. What do you know of any property being taken from Henry Piper for subsistence of the military forces at any portion thereof while you were encamped at his place?

A. I know we were in great need of subsistence immediately after the battle; it was customary after a battle or pending a battle to capture and confiscate for the use of the army whatever subsistence stores could be found in this way; I remember that several heads of cattle, sheep, and hogs were taken from Mr. Piper; I have made a statement of this before; I am not able to state how many of either were taken nor their value; I may add that they were informally taken without direct orders from any competent authority, but were used for the subsistence of the army all the same to supply the pressing necessities of the army. Some of this cattle were taken under my own direction and observation, and under the direction of other officers, but no receipts were given therefor, probably because none were asked for by Mr. Piper at the time. The taking and use of the supplies was such as to have justified me in giving a receipt therefor at the time had one been required, and I have no doubt I should have given one had it been requested. I did not take up on my returns stores taken in this irregular way, probably owing to the excitement of the times. The property was not all taken by my regiment. I remember the 4th Pa. and the 8th N. Y. Cav. were encamped at the same place with my own regiment. I was commissary of subsistence as well as R. Q. M. of my regiment at the time. As already stated, I have made two statements or affidavits in regard to this matter before, one in 1878, which I understand was to have been filed in the Q. M. Dept.; and subsequently, in 1874, I made another response to the Commissary General. These affidavits are in writing, and the several facts as therein stated are true.

Cross-examination waved:

General question. Do you know of any other matter relative to the claim in question; if you do, please state it?

A. I think of nothing further.

State of Maryland
Washington County } S.S.

I Henry Piper, do solemly swear that I am a citizen of the United States and reside in Sharpsburg, Washington County and State of Maryland, and that I resided when the claim accrued via my farm one half mile North of Sharpsburg on the Hagerstown Pike, and that the claims set forth by attached, thirty six in number in the foregoing bill of particulars and account against the United States is only for property & supplies actually taken by and used for the benefit of the Army of the United States at or near my farm as above in the month of September 1862 except item Nº 36, and that the situation of the property and the facts & circumstances attending the taking thereof by the Army of the United States under the command of General Geo. B. McClellan, were substantially as follows, viz:

My farm lays between the Hagerstown & Boonsboro Pikes & the North of Sharpsburg and formed a portion of the Battlefield of Antietam — The rebel forces were retreating along their Pikes to Sharpsburg with a view of crossing the Potomac at or near Hagerstown. Their first line of battle brought my farm and buildings in side the rebel lines. This was on the 15th day of September 1862 — Skirmishing began the same day when I was obliged to take my family to a place of safety out of the lines of fire of both armies. —

We left my home on the morning of the 15th & went with under the protection of the Picket of the Potomac Flotilla.

I came back to my place on the morning of the 16th & found my property all safe. I then went away & was absent the 17th & 18th when I returned with my family. During this absence some of my property was taken, by which army I am unable positively to say. I have been told & fully believe that most of the property so taken in my absence was taken by the Union Army, as the rebels did not occupy the ground after the 16th having been driven out by the Union Army. On my return on the 18th my farm & buildings were wholly within the Union lines. My place was never in possession of the rebels at any time after this. I have charged in the foregoing bill of items for only such supplies and property as remained on my farm on my return on the 18th, & for only such property as is known to have been taken on, & subsequent to the 18th for the use of, and used by the Army of the United States. The amount charged in this bill is but a trifle over one half of the amount of property & supplies actually taken by the army. The difficulty of obtaining the necessary proofs as to the taking and use of the property by the army of the United States compelled me to abandon a large portion of my claims. I make no claim for property taken in my absence.

The hay, grain & all the property & supplies charged in this bill were taken after my return & while I was on & at the farm. I saw the Union Soldiers which were encamped on my farm & in the vicinity, taking the hay, grain and other forage, carrying the same away & feeding it to the animals belonging to the Union army. The grain in the sacks was carried away from the stacks by squads of the Union Cavalry. The grain from the granary was carried away in sacks. The corn from the fields was carried away in bundles, in sacks & in waggon, much of it being secured from the ground & fed stalks & all: while the stalks left standing after the corn was gathered by the Union army were pastured and consumed by the animals belonging to the army. I saw most of the hay & grain & other forage taken away by the Union Soldiers. I saw them feeding their forage in their camps from time to time. I talked with several officers & especially with quartermasters in relation to the taking & use of my property. They told me they were in great need of all kinds of forage and that they must have it. This forage was all taken between the 18th & 23rd days of September, 1862 — At this time I was unacquainted with the way and manner of doing business with the quartermaster dept. and did not know the way to proceed to get pay for any property by: neither did I know of any way of prosecuting the claim from taking & using the same according to their needs. I am certain that the Union army took from me much hay, grain and other forage than I have charged in this bill. This too after my return. I was at my farm all the time while the property herein charged now being taken and I am certain the same was taken and used for the army of the United States.

As to the taking and use of the 15 cords of oak wood, item 3, I did not see the same taken myself but I believe the same was taken by the Union army, it being within the Union lines at all times & so situated that the rebels could not have reached it.

As to the fence burned for fuel by the Union army, items 4 & 5 I saw the same being burned from time to time in the camps of the Union army & believe all herein charged to have been burned by and for the use of the Union army.

The rails in the fence burned were good oaks & chestnuts of the kind & description given in the bill of items.

The amount of fencing burned by the Union army for fuel was estimated at the time & a bill of items made out and a record kept from which this bill is made.

This bill is not made out from memory but from record.

As to the fence lumber & shingles, item 6, I saw the union soldiers burning the same for fuel and I know the same was used for the benefit of the army of the United States. I saw the Cavalry soldiers of the Union Army in squads at different times taking the lumber from the wheat ricks and carrying the same away to feed to the animals belonging to the army as before stated. I saw the Union Soldiers taking the grain from my granary.

As to items 16. 17. 18. 19. 20 & 21 I did see all the articles absolutely taken myself but I know all said articles were in the places named after my return to my place on the 18th September as before stated as my farm was in the full occupation & wholly within the Union lines. I saw many of these articles taken myself & particularly item 19 & many others of the groups & I believe all the items from 16 to 21 were taken by & for the benefit of the Army of the United States. The blacksmith tools were taken away piecemeal & used by the army and never returned to me.

As to the Brown Mare, item 22, she was taken from my barn by a Union Soldier and as I believe by consent & authority for the use and benefit of the Army of the United States. She was a noble animal, 4 years old, sound and worth at least $200.00 Two hundred dollars

As to items 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34 & 35 of the foregoing Bill, I did not see all & each particular item absolutely taken myself but I saw the Union Soldiers carrying away articles of bedding, blankets &c, & I was told & I believe they were taking the same away for the use & comfort of the sick & wounded in the Hospitals. My family prevailed on these soldiers to leave some of the bedding in the house for the use of my family & some of the articles taken were returned but none for which charges are here made. I believe all and every item herein last mentioned to have been taken for the purposes named in the bill of items & for the benefit of the Army of the United State.

As to item 36 in the bill, I saw the Soldiers of a Penn. Regt. Encamped on the Hagerstown Pike next to my farm at the time named in the bill of items & I saw them burning the rails as charged.

I made count of the number absolutely taken at the time & I know the same to have been used by & for the benefit of the army of the United States.

And I further depose that several items set forth in the forego-

Bill of Particulars and account are correct and just to the best of my knowledge and belief, and that the prices charged are reasonable, and that I have not charged for any thing taken by the rebel army either in whole or in part, but only for such property and supplies as are known to have been taken and used by the Union army.

And I further say that I have never received any pay or consideration whatever for said property and stores or any part thereof, or any receipt or voucher for the same:- I think the most of my property was taken by the 8th & 13th Penn. Cavalry which Regts. were encamped on and in the vicinity of my farm. I remember the name of one of the officers, a Quartermaster by the name of Capt. Pollard. I have forgotten the names of other officers of these Regts.

I further depose and say that I remained a loyal adherent to the cause of the Government of the United States during the war, and am still loyal, & was so loyal before and at the time of the taking and use of the property, for which this claim is made, and I solemnly declare that from the beginning of hostilities against the United States to the end thereof my sympathies were constantly with the cause of the United States, that I never of my own free will and accord did anything (by word or deed, to injure said cause) (or offered or sought or attempted to do anything) or refused its success, and that I was at all times ready & willing when called upon, or if called upon to aid and assist the cause of the Union or its supporters so far as my means and power, and the circumstances of the case, permitted.

And I hereby constitute and appoint P. E. Dye of Washington city D.C. my Attorney for the prosecution of this claim hereby ratifying all my said Attorney may do or cause to be done in the premises.

IN THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

DECEMBER TERM, 1886–'87.

No. 445—Congressional case.

vs.

THE UNITED STATES.

Claimant's Request for Findings of Fact and Brief.

The claimant, considering the facts hereinafter set forth to be proven, and deeming them material to the due presentation of the case in the findings of facts, requests the Court to find the same as follows:

I.

This cause was referred to this Court by the War Claims Committee of the House of Representatives, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, commonly called the "Bowman Act;" and the Court of Claims made the following order in said case, viz: "This case being a claim for supplies or stores taken or furnished to the military forces of the United States for their use during the late war for the suppression of the rebellion, the Court, on a preliminary inquiry, finds that the claimant was loyal to the Government of the United States throughout said war."

II.

The military forces of the United States took from claimant the following stores and supplies for their use, viz:

1862.

1.	One roan mare, 4 years old	$250 00
2.	Eight milk cows, at $30	240 00
3.	Two 3-year old steers, at $30	60 00
4.	Ten head young cattle, $18	180 00
5.	Four calves, at $5	20 00
6.	Eighteen fat hogs, at $10	180 00
7.	Sixteen head of shoats, at $5	80 00
8.	Six pigs, at $2	12 00
9.	Eighteen head of sheep, at $5	90 00
10.	One hundred bushels of Irish potatoes, at $1	100 00
11.	Thirty bushels sweet potatoes, at $2	60 00
		$1,272 00

1863—July.

12.	To 7½ cords wood, at $3.50	26 25
13.	" 10 acres grass, for pasture, at $4.50	45 00
14.	" 15 shocks wheat, at $1.40	21 00
15.	" pasturage of cattle and sheep	10 00
	Total	$1,374 25

And no pay or compensation has been made therefor.

(Record, pp. 3, 14, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 25, and 26.)

Brief.

The testimony shows that the claimant resided during the war one-half mile north from the village of Sharpsburg, on the Hagerstown pike, in Washington county, Md., and that he owned and cultivated a farm of 300 acres and upwards.

In 1862, immediately after the battle of Antietam, the stores and supplies for which this claim is laid were taken for the immediate use of the military forces of the United States at that place. This is proved by all the witnesses, and especially by the testimony of Capt. Philip Pollard, R. Q. M., 3d Pa. Cavalry, who was personally present with his command, and ordered the property taken. (Pp. 25 and 26.)

A few items of the account were [illegible] amounting to only $102.25 of the present claim. (p. 10)

In October, 1862, less than twenty days after the battle of Antietam, and only a few days after the property was taken, a military board of survey was ordered to convene at that place to assess the value of the property taken from claimant by the military forces of the United States for their use and the damage sustained by him. (Pp. 11 and 12.)

Claimant furnished said board with his list of property, (pp. 14, 15, and 16,) and the board, after a careful examination of his property, made an award in his favor in the sum of $2,488.85, nearly double the amount of the present claim.

No compensation or pay has ever been received for any item of the present claim.

In 1863 four items of the present claim were taken by the military forces of the United States. The items of this claim were filed in the Q. M. Gen's and C. S. Gen's Departments of the War Department.

The present claim is for the sum of $1,374.25.

Each item of the account is shown to be reasonable and just for the time and place, and to have been taken by the military forces of the United States for their use, and no pay or compensation has been received therefor.

It is respectfully suggested that the Court should find the facts as set forth in claimant's request for findings as the facts in this case.

P. E. DYE,
Att'y for Claimant.

Chapter II, Piper Farm - "Slave Quarters"

Appendix B. Piper Deed--August 29, 1845, Deed Book INI, p. 778. Note: Copied by hand since original was too faded to reproduce properly.

Piper Deed

Daniel Piper

At the request of Daniel Piper the following Deed was recorded April 28th, 1846.--

This Indenture made and concluded this twenty ninth day of August in the year eighteen hundred and forty five between Jacob Miller of Washington County in the State of Maryland & Elizabeth Miller his wife, of the one part, and Daniel Piper of the same State and County of the other part. Memorandum

To: Mr. Francis Wilshin, ESC-HHA

From: Superintendent, Antietam-C & O Canal

Subject: Historic Structures Report

The following buildings are discussed in the Historic Structure Reports by Francis Wilshin in one volume. They will, therefore, be treated together in this report. The structures are Mumma Farm Spring House RSP-B-22, Piper Farm Slave Quarters RSP-B-21, Sherrick Farm Smoke House RSP-B-19-1.

Each of these buildings as discribed in Mr. Wilshin's report was heavily involved in the Battle of Antietam. They are located where some of the heaviest fighting took place and are representative of the western Marylander's farm buildings.

These buildings were deteriorating rapidly until they were rehabilitated and now they help to preserve the exterior historic scene. The restoration and continued preservation of these historic structures could be used as interpretative devices when future visitation warrents the need. The restoration work also has solved the safety hazards that these decaying buildings had presented.

1. STATEMENT OF MANAGEMENT'S REQUIREMENTS, PROPOSED WORK, AND ITS RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER FACETS OF THE PARK PROGRAM. (Provide detail data for "Management Information" on Form 10-411a, Supplemental Sheet and attach.)

The Piper Slave House retains much of its historic appearance. In association with the other Piper farm buildings, it serves as an exterior interpretive device.

The building is deteriorating rapidly causing an unsightly, unsafe structure which is extremely expensive to maintain.

The project is necessary to prevent further deterioration of a valuable historic building. It will also eliminate a safety hazard and serve to quiet adverse public comment concerning neglect of historic structures.

"Antietam" Fred W. Cross Caption:

Jerry Summers was the last of the slaves of Sharpsburg.

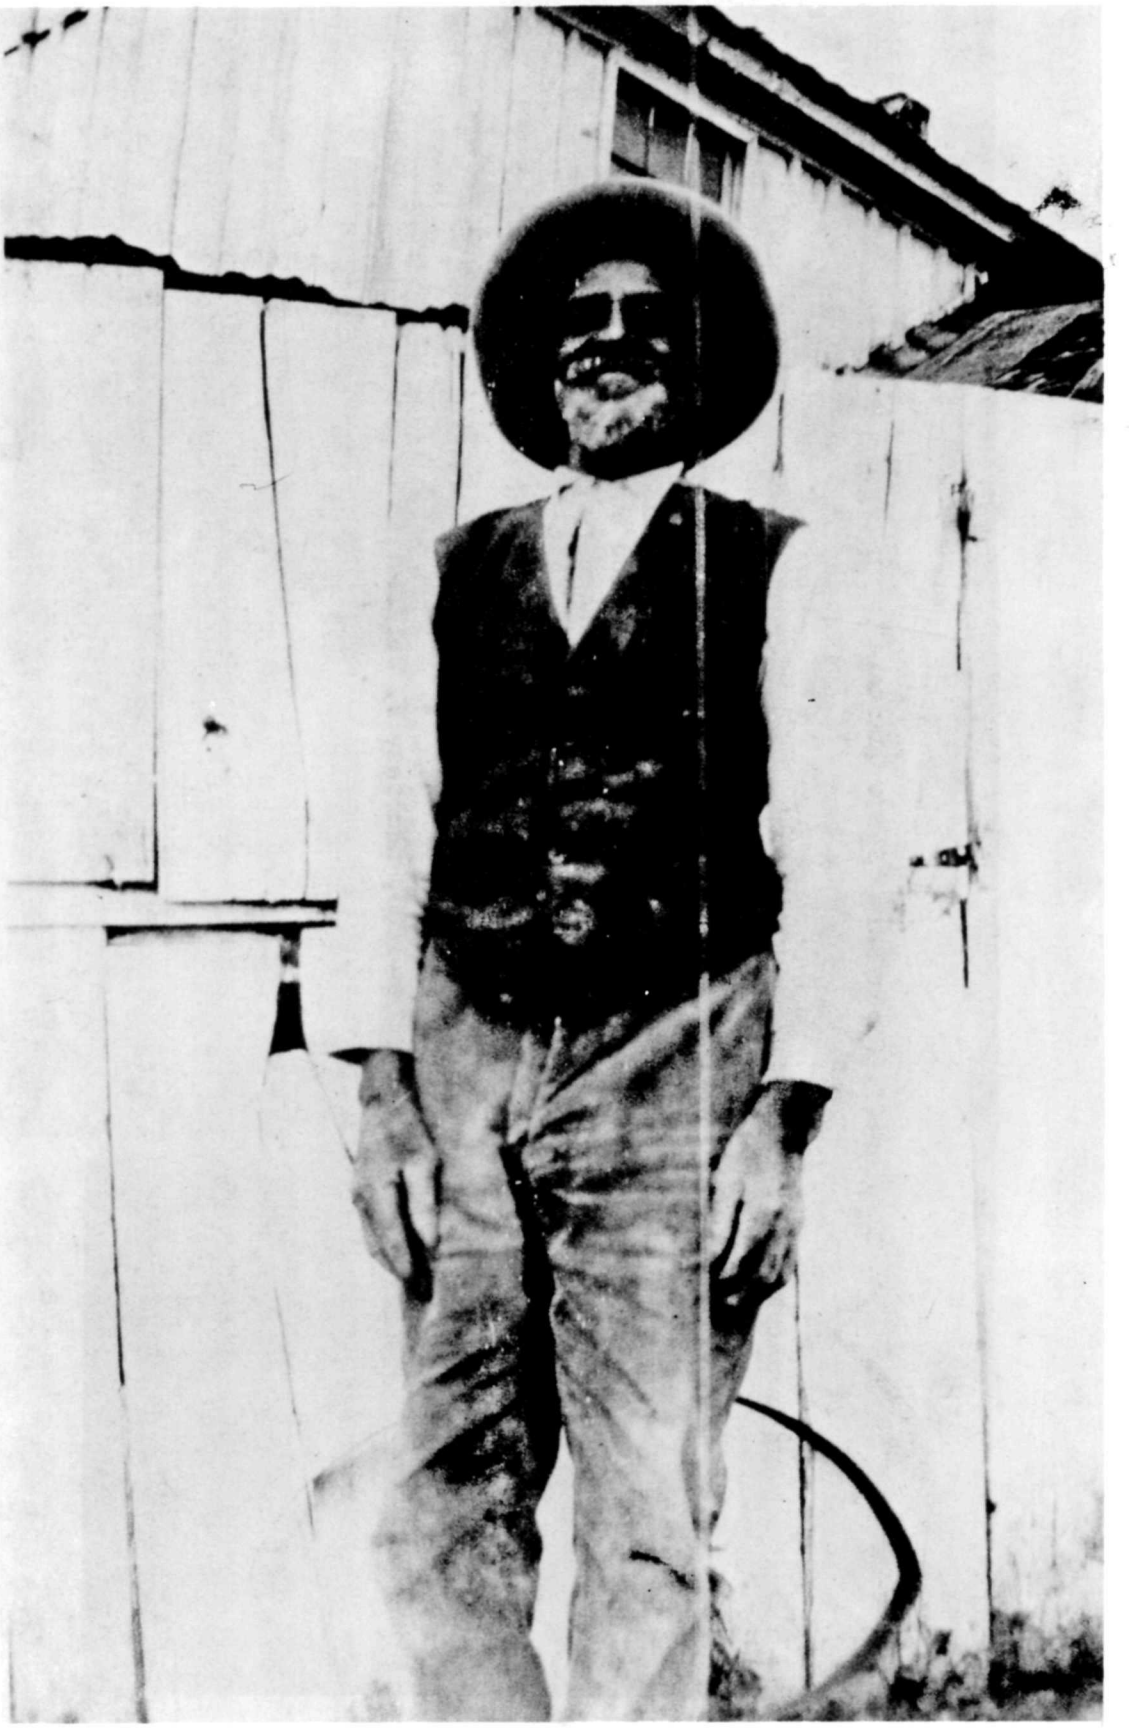

He was the property of Henry Piper who owned the famous Piper farm which was fringed on its northerly and easterly edges of the "Sunken Road" or "Bloody Lane".

In war time Jerry was carried off by the Union Army but later recovered by his indulgent master who regarded him almost like one of his children.

At Henry Piper's death Jerry was given the use for life of a small cottage and garden plot facing the northerly stretch of the "Bloody Lane, and here I found him in 1922 and in 1924 when the picture opposite was taken.

He died in 1925 aged about 76 or 77 years.

[Note: In the Piper Claim of 1886 Summers stated he was 40 years old thus he would have been 79 at his death in 1925].

View from northwest. This 1880 photograph definitely establishes that the first major alteration of the building resulting in an 8' 6" extension was done either in 1880 or shortly prior thereto. The extension is clearly shown in the difference in the shingles. It should be noted that the roof was not raised in this initial alteration. Architect Franzen states that this extension is clearly shown in the interior framing.

View from northwest. Note the raised roof line which was effected by adding a log wall over the masonry to provide an additional floor for living quarters. Also note the corrugaged metal roof which has replaced the wooden shingle roof shown in the 1880 photograph (Illustration 2).

Evidence would indicate that these changes were effected in 1912-14 period when major alterations were made in the house, barn, and "Slave Quarters" to accommodate the needs of a new renter with a large family.

View from southeast. Note corrugated sheet iron has replaced the original wood shingles. Reference should be made to the 1880 photograph to see appearance of the earlier wood shingle. Loose stones and weak spots show in the stone masonry. The walls are composed of facing stones on both surfaces filled in the center with rubble and clay. Mortar is used in the joints both inside and outside the structure. All sash, frames and sills will have to be replaced.

Lawton Darby, Birmingham, Ala, makes this note on the map:

"We were in the cornfield where you have it marked "Bloody" and I think we were very near, if not to the lane. Pryor's Brigade was on our left. We fell back about 1/4 of a mile, formed to the right and came 200 yards in advance from our first line

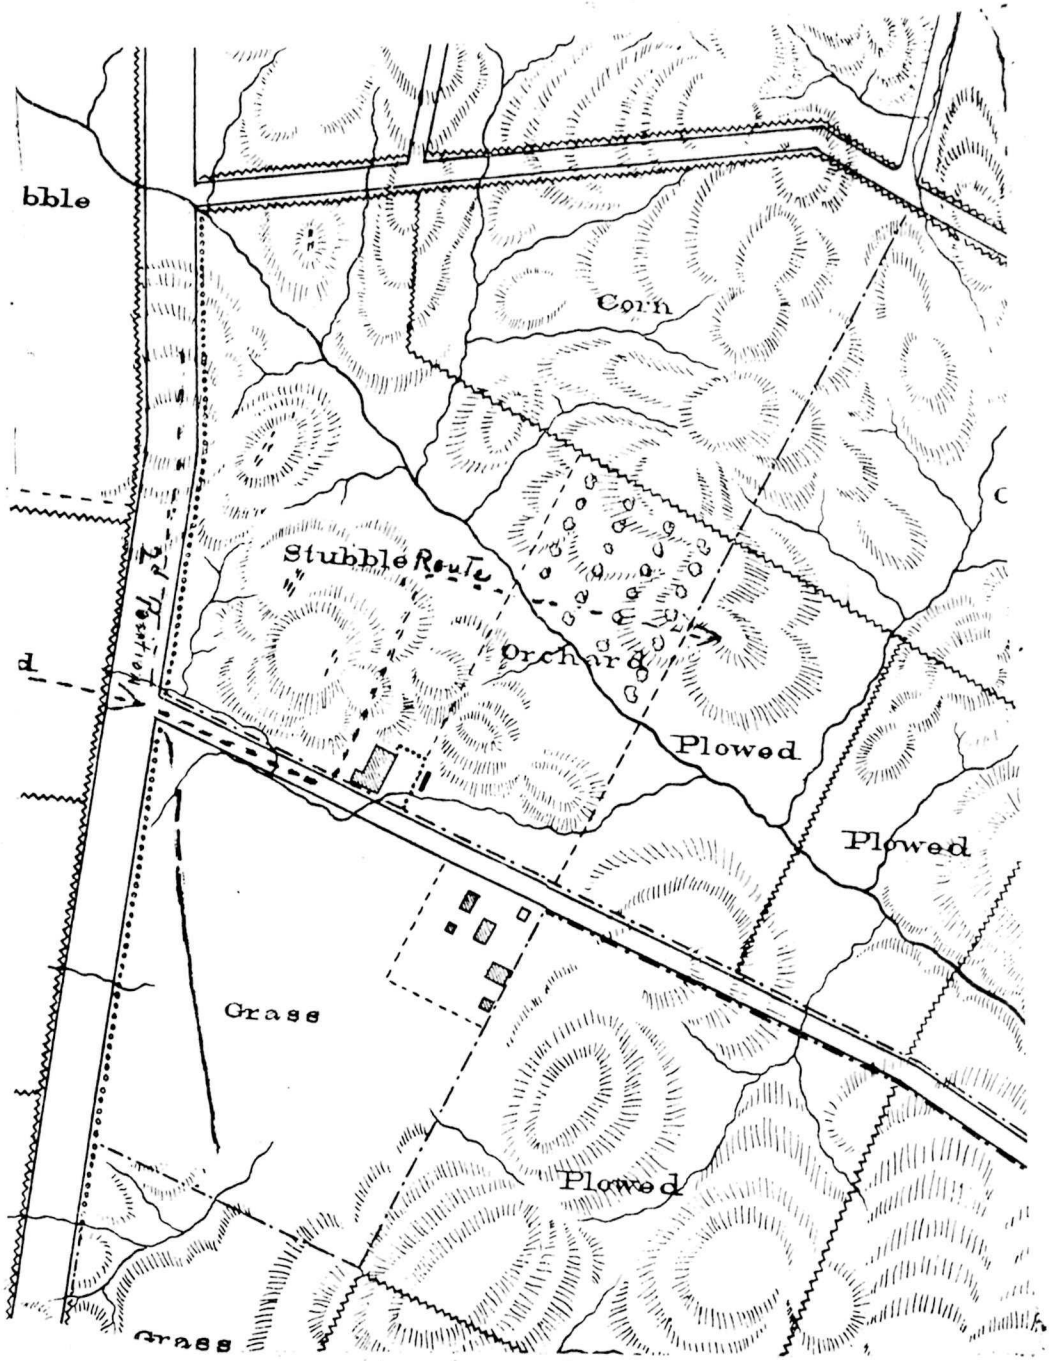

10th Ala, Cummings Brigade

Entered the cornfield just beyond and to the right of the barn, and the battle was raging at the time. Darby thinks the regiment numbered 400 or 450. Says the brigade went into action with Pryor's Brigade which was on the left.

Gen Kimballs letter Sept 12 1894

OGDEN, Utah, April 10, 1894.

DEAR OLD COMRADE:

Your letter of the 4th inst. was received and contents noted. Answering I give you the land-marks near our line established after we had driven the rebels from their position east of Roulette's house, through the woods and corn fields, and from the sunken road into the cornfield and hill beyond.

Roulette's house and barn, 24, the orchard, 24 stone fence and road, 4th, the tree. The 14th Reg. Ind. was on the right, the 8th Ohio on the left of the 14th, the 132d Penn'a on the left of the 8th Ohio, the 7th Virginia on the left of the 132d, completing our line of battle. The sunken road leading northward to the Dunkard church, and from which we had driven the enemy, was nearly 250 yards from our established line and held by our line of skirmishers. The accompanying draught gives you our line of battle, positions of the regiments, and landmarks, etc.

The 132d Pennsylvania's position was in front of the tree and extending to the right of it, your colors in your centre, the length of one company to the right of the tree. We drove the enemy as we advanced from the position first occupied, after crossing Antietam creek, marching forward at 9:30 a. m., through woods, corn fields, Roulette's house, barn and orchard, into the sunken road, from which we drove them at 11 a. m., and held this line for three hours and a half without support of any kind, until relieved by a brigade from Richardson's division. We were under a terrific fire from the enemy's artillery posted on the hill in our front and his infantry in the corn field.

I am growing old now, in my 72nd year of life, I have been an invalid for two years past and am very feeble, yet I get to my office nearly every day. Though nearly thirty-two years have gone by, I can never forget that battle nor the gallant soldiers who fought under my command, and who upheld in triumph our dear old flag in victory over the traitorous enemy. God bless the survivors. Please present my regards to Colonel Hitchcock and every surviving member of the gallant 132nd.

Hoping that which I send you may be satisfactory, I am, with an earnest heart-felt God bless you,

Your Comrade, etc.,

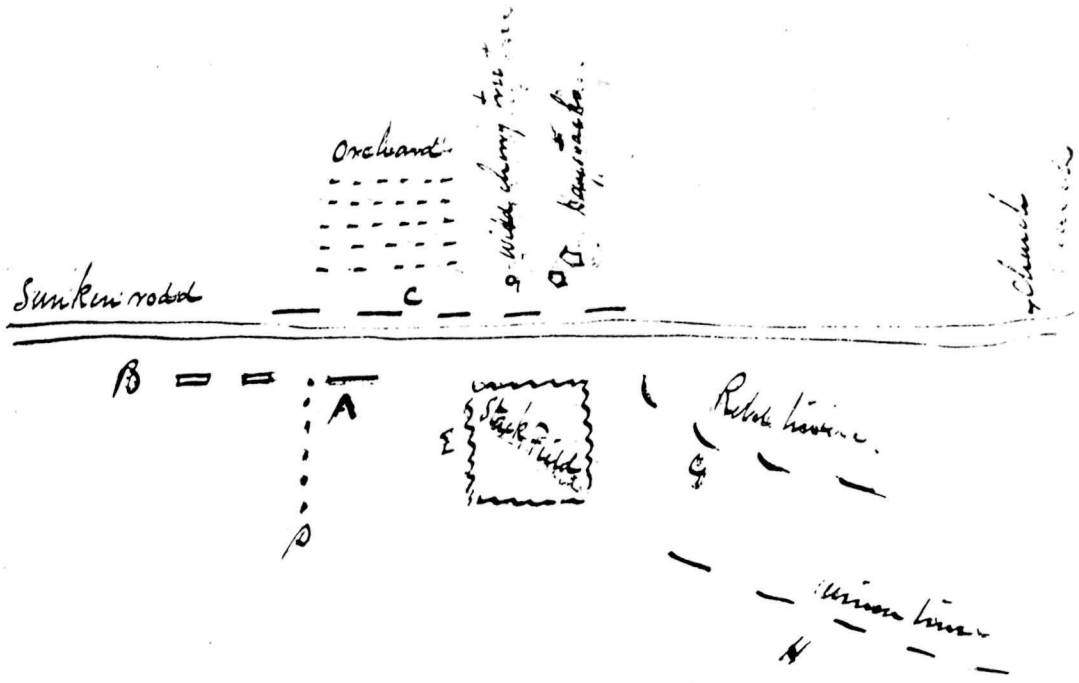

NATHAN KIMBALL,

Late Brig. and Brevet Major Gen'l U. S. V.

SHERRICK FARM - "Smoke House"

Battle Brief, Third Stage (3:30 p.m. - 5:30 p.m.)

The Sherrick farm was involved in the third stage of the Battle of Antietam, September 17, 1862--the one that held the brightest promise of Union victory. As we have seen the first stage, launched at daybreak, involving among others the Mumma farm, attempted to turn the Confederate left. The second stage which started about 9 a.m. involving the Mumma but particularly the Piper farm, desperately sought to penetrate the Confederate center. The third stage, conducted by Maj.-Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside's IX corps, attempted to turn the Confederate right held by units of Brig.-Gen. Robert Toombs' brigade entrenched along strategic heights that commanded the Lower Bridge (later to be known as the Burnside Bridge).

Toombs describes the position:

> The ground descended to the margin of the river, covered with a narrow strip of woods affording slight protection to the troops. Its chief strength lay in the fact that, from the nature of the ground on the other side, the enemy were compelled to approach mainly by road which led up the river for near 300 paces parallel with my line of battle, and distant therefrom from 50 to 100 feet, thus exposing his flank to a destructive fire the most of that distance.[1]

1. O.R., Series I, Vol. 19, Part I, p. 980.

The first attempt to cross was made between 9 and 10 a.m. by units of Brig.- Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis' Federal division. Four other fiercely determined efforts were made through the morning but were all smartly repulsed by the 20th and 2nd Georgia. In each of the actions the Confederates were buying precious time to permit the arrival of major reserves at the critical moment of the battle.

With receipt of orders to carry the bridge at all hazards, Burnside ordered an all-out effort about 1 p.m. The task was assigned to the 51st New York and the 51st Pennsylvania. Describing the attack, Sturgis writes:

> They started on their mission of death full of enthusiasm, and taking a route less exposed than the regiments which had made the effort before them, rushed at a double-quick over the slope leading to the bridge and over the bridge itself with an impetuosity which the enemy could not resist, and the Stars and Stripes were planted on the opposite bank at 1 o'clock p.m. among the most enthusiastic cheering from every part of the field from where they could be seen.[2]

In the meantime Brig. Gen. Isaac P. Rodman had crossed his division together with Col. George Crook's brigade below at Snavely's Ford and was moving up on the Confederate right, held by the brigades of Toombs, Brig. Gen. Thomas F. Drayton, Brig.-Gen. George Pickett and Brig.-Gen. Micah Jenkins (Brig.-Gen. David R. Jones' division). A costly delay of about an hour now ensued as Brig.-Gen. Orlando B. Willcox's division moved up to take the lead in the Federal advance replacing Sturgis, whose ammunition was pretty well exhausted.

By 1 p.m. the 17th South Carolina, the Holcombe Legion, and the 1st Georgia had taken position behind a stone wall just west of the Sherrick House. About 3:30 p.m. Willcox advanced up the Sharpsburg Road in an impressive display of military force. In the lead on the right were the 79th New York Highlanders of Colonel Benjamin C. Christ's brigade, moving quickly up with a double line of skirmishers. They entered the plowed field just east of the Sherrick House followed closely by the rest of Christ's brigade--50th Pennsylvania, 28th Massachusetts, and 12th Michigan. Confederate sharpshooters, posted behind stone fences, hay stacks, and in orchards and cornfields, contested the advance stubbornly supported by an effective artillery fire.[3]

Moving up on the south side of the road came Col. Thomas Welch's brigade with the 45th Pennsylvania out front as skirmishers, followed by the rest of the brigade--the 46th New York, the 8th Michigan, and the 100th Pennsylvania. In battle line they swept forward to gain and push past the high ground of the Otto farm.

Welsh describes the attack:

> I immediately put the Forty-fifth Pennsylvania Regiment in motion at double-quick up the hill. Arriving in the crest, it encountered the enemy, also advancing. The battle became very fierce at this juncture. The Seventeenth Michigan Volunteers, of Colonel Christ's brigade, and also a part of Willcox's division, advancing on our right, also became hotly engaged, and took the rebels in flank.[4]

4. O.R., Series I, Vol. 19, Part I, p. 440.

As Christ's and Welsh's brigades pushed forward, they outflanked the small Confederate command just south of the Sherrick House. Holcombe's Legion broke, as did part of the 17th South Carolina; Col. F. W. McMaster describes the effort to rally the command:

> I then ordered the remainder of my command to retire to an apple orchard, about 200 yards in rear, where, with 40 or 50 men, made up mostly of my regiment and a few Georgians and Palmetto Sharpshooters, I fought the enemy for half an hour or more. Being flanked on both sides, I retired to a stone house adjoining, [Stone Mill on Miller farm] which I converted in a fort, and fought for some time, until Drayton's brigade, on the right, and Jenkins' brigade, on the left, had completely abandoned the ground, and the enemy had almost entirely surrounded my little band.[5]

Realizing the gravity of the situation, Lee hurriedly concentrated the batteries of Maj. John Garnett, Capt. G. V. Moody, Capt. H. R. Garden, and Capt. C. W. Squires on the eastern edge of Sharpsburg, supported by Jenkins' brigade. At this critical moment the head of A. P. Hill's dusty column arrived on the field after a forced march of 17 miles. Reporting to Lee and quickly conferring with D. R. Jones for terrain information, Hill rapidly threw his troops into position--Brig.-Gen. William D. Pender's and Col. John Brockenbrough's brigades on the extreme right with Brig.-Gen. L. O'B. Branch's, Brig.-Gen. Maxcy Gregg's, and Brig.-Gen. J.J. Archer's brigades extending the left to connect with D. R. Jones' division. "My troops were not in a moment too soon," writes Hill, "The enemy had already advanced in three lines, had broken through Jones' division, captured McIntosh's battery, and were in the full tide of success. With a yell of defiance, Archer charged them, retook McIntosh's guns, and drove them back pell-mell."[6]

Branch and Gregg staunchly held their ground, pouring in such a murderous fire as to break the Federal attack. Suddenly the tide surged back into a confused retreat that was stemmed by the fall of night. The timely arrival of Hill had robbed McClellan of a major Union victory--and granted the South a long reprieve.

For 14 hours some 100,000 men with 500 pieces of artillery had engaged each other with a ferocity almost unparalleled in war. Thick upon the field lay the bodies of the dead and wounded--20,000 in a three-mile area of the valley. Approximately 15,000 of these were concentrated in a 500 yard radius of the Dunkard Church. On the Federal side a corps commander, Mansfield, and two division commanders, Richardson and Rodman, had been slain. The Confederates had lost two general officers, Branch and Starke--a third, Anderson, was mortally wounded.

Twenty per cent of the Union troops engaged were casualties. Many brigades lost one-third to one-half of the men taken into action. Twelve regiments lost better than 50 per cent. The 12th Massachusetts led the list with 67 per cent, while the lowest of the twelve, the 14th Indiana, lost 56 per cent. Ten of the Confederate brigades lost one half of the men engaged--three brigades lost better than a half. The heaviest loss on either side was suffered by the

6. Ibid., p. 981.

1st Texas of Hood's division, which lost 82.3 per cent, reputed to be the highest of the war.[7]

The battle had far-reaching consequences, particularly on the diplomatic front. It proved to be the factor that decided the British Government against intervention on the Confederate side and it afforded President Abraham Lincoln the opportunity, for which he had been waiting since July, to issue the Emancipation Proclamation. This basic document proclaimed that on January 1, 1863, "all persons held as slaves within any state or states, wherein the constitutional authority of the United States shall not then be practically recognized, submitted to, and maintained, shall then, thence forward, and forever, be free." The Proclamation, issued by Lincoln five days after the battle, did much to solidify opinion in this country and win favorable support abroad.

Apparently the "Smoke House" and the other buildings of the Sherrick Farm survived with little battle damage though the main house was evidently struck by artillery fire since Sherrick listed an item in his Claim for damages--"Shelling house-$8.00."[8]

Though the buildings suffered little damage there was considerable damage to fences, crops, farm animals, supplies, furniture and

Those neighbors--Newcomer, Nicodemus and Long--swore as to the correctness of the appraisement before the Justice of the Peace, January 28th, 1863. Here again an appraisal provides an intimate glimpse in a home and the way of life of a Valley farmer.

Further from the Claim we learn that the Sherrick Farm was operated at the time by a 43-year-old tenant farmer named Leonard Emmert. He states that he lived on the farm as tenant during the years 1860, '61, '62, and left the farm in 1863. He estimates the acreage of the farm between 200 and 300 acres, which he farmed generally on equal shares--that there were 38 acres of corn making 35 bushels or more to the acre. He testified in the latter part of the month after the battle of Antietam:

> U.S. Soldiers Came into that Cornfield with their wagons & they cut up the Corn & pulled a great deal off & hauled it away, there was none left when they got through; that he saw the Corn taken; that he was entitled to one half of the fodder, they took about 20 or 25 loads of fodder, the fodder was taken at the same time with the Corn, they cleaned the field off. Fodder was worth $5 or $6 per load at that time shelled Corn was worth 75¢ pr. bu. . . . he saw the Soldiers pull the fence down & burn it. that they used about one third of the fence for fuel.

The amount of $582.00 was allowed on the claim.[9]

Family Data

Little or no information has been obtained on the history of the Sherrick family other than that found in the Claim of Victor H. Newcomer, his son-in-law, and the Administrator for Joseph Sherrick.

Joseph Sherrick was apparently living in the area by 1821 since Mr. H. B. Rohrback, a near neighbor, stated in 1876 before the Claim Commission that he had known him "to be a loyal man . . . a man of honesty, integrity and moral worth and was a Whig all his life." He further stated that Sherrick "died in August 1872 in the 70th year of his age." This would have placed his birth as the year 1802.[11]

Apparently the Sherrick family had lived in the area since 1796, for on May 23 of that year "Joseph Sherk" purchased a farm of 200 acres more or less in the Antietam valley from Henry Orndorff for the sum of two thousand four hundred pounds.[12]

On June 30, 1838, Joseph Sherrick and his wife Barbara sold the farm to their son, Joseph Sherrick, Jr., who was then 36 years old. The sum of "Eight Thousand Seven Hundred and Sixty three Dollars 75¢ current money in the United States" was paid for it. The farm at this time comprised an area of 194 acres.[13]

Joseph Sherrick, Jr., later deeded the farm to his daughter Anna, who married Victor H. Newcomer, who later served as the administrator of the estate.

Construction and Structural Changes

When Joseph Sherk (Sherrick) purchased the farm of 200 acres more or less from Henry Orndorff, May 23, 1796, for two thousand four hundred pounds, it would appear from the money involved and from the wording of the deed that he bought a well-established farm with "all the houses Outhouses Barns Fields Woods under Woods Meadows Orchards hereditaments and appurtenances."

It would thus appear that the "Smoke House," an essential part of an operating farm of this size, would have been constructed sometime prior to 1796 and that the builder was quite likely Henry Orndorff, one of the early settlers of the Valley.

Apparently the Sherrick "Smoke House" has undergone less structural change from its pre-battle state than either the Mumma "Spring House" or the Piper "Slave Quarters." Though the farm was right in the path of Burnside's Federal advance, the building received little or no damage as is shown by Gardner's 1862 photograph.[16]

The view is from the east. Shown in composite relationship in exceptional detail are the Sherrick residence, "Smoke House," barn and other outbuildings. Particularly significant is the architectural detail furnished on the "Smoke House" the value of which has been further heightened by a photo enlargement.[17] Note also the two immediately adjacent structures of a leanto character and the stone building somewhat removed that are no longer extant.

Here graphically preserved is highly pertinent environmental detail--stone walls, fencing (post and rail and picket) and planting. Framing the picture on the upper left is a black walnut tree with visible walnuts, while immediately in front of the residence is a lombardy poplar. Snugging the north side of the residence is an ailanthus (tree of heaven) and between the residence and the "Smoke House" is what appears to be a grape arbor. Framing the picture on the right is an oak. Other identities can be made with little difficulty.

A comparison of the Gardner 1862 photograph with the two modern Franzen photographs[18] clearly establishes the fact that the present shingle roof of the "Smoke House" is neither the original nor the one of the Civil War period. It is obvious that the shingles shown in the 1862 photograph are of a different design and of greater length. The wartime shingles are ten rows in length while in the existing roof they are twenty. It should also be noted that the Gardner photograph shows a chimney cap for one flue that no longer exists.

Though the building suffered little wartime damage, the Gardner photograph shows three broken window panes and one broken upper sash.

18. Maps and Illustrations--Illustrations 3, p. 323, and 4, p. 325.

Such minor damage, if battle caused, was not sufficient to warrant inclusion in the Sherrick claim.

The "Smoke House" is a one-story brick structure, 14'-5" x 14'-7", with a garret. It would appear that a stone retaining wall was built to provide level ground for its construction. Architect Franzen of the National Park Service describes the building and the nature of the work involved in its rehabilitation:

> The foundation walls are of native stone. The brick used in its construction were soft burned and many of them have badly deteriorated. This is particularly true for the brick on the inside of the exterior walls. Diamond patterns of interstics in the brick gables ventilated the attic space in addition to the one attic window located over the exterior door to the first floor. The roof is covered with heavily weathered wooden shingles that may have replaced a similar older covering.
> The first floor has a window in each of the sidewalls and a large fireplace in the rear wall. The flooring is modern wood flooring laid over an earlier wood floor supported on wood joists. The space beneath is filled with loose earthen material. A winding enclosed stair in the corner immediately to the left of the entrance door provides access to the attic. The ceiling of the first floor is composed of post-period beaded boards. The ceiling of the attic space is exposed.[18]

Structural weaknesses have appeared in the building as is shown in the repointed areas over the front door, over the side window and in the far right corner as is shown in "Maps and Illustrations--

This illustration entitled "view from north" shows a non-period window that will have to be replaced to conform to the original that appears on the opposite side of the house.

Construction detail of the "Smoke House" was prepared in the summer of 1968 by student architects William B. Flickinger, Jr., and Roy W. Reynolds of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia. The sheets are entitled "Elevations," (front and rear); "Plans and Section," "Elevations" (side views) and "Details."[19]

Depositions of Jacob Long, Leonard Emmert, H. B. Rohrbach, and Victor Newcomer and James Brown, all of the county of Washington State of Maryland taken before me Wm S Williams a Notary Public in and for the County and State aforesaid this 26th day of April 1876, each for himself being duly sworn and examined according to Law in the claim of Joseph Sherick against the United States for Quartermaster stores alleged to have been taken from him during the war by United States troops the said Joseph Sherick being claimant & the said deponents Jacob Long, Leonard Emmert, H B Rohrbach, and Victor Newcomer and James Brown being witnesses

2 Q. What is your name, Age, Residence & Occupation,

A Jacob Long, aged 57 Years, Residence in Washington County Md, Occupation Farmer,

2 Q. Did you Know Joseph Sherick deceased in his life time, how long did you Know him and did you Know him during the war

A I have Known Mr Joseph Sherick for 20 Years, I Know him during the war, I Knew him in 1862—,

2 Q. What was the character of Mr Sherick for loyalty during the war

A From his acts and conversation of them was a Union in Washington County he was one.

2 What do you know about a claim Mr Shrick has against the United States as represented now by his administrators. Victor H. Stevenson

A I know that in 1863 in January I in connection with Joshua Stevenson and John Swiedemus appraisers sworn to an appraisement made by us of the property taken and used by Union troops from the said Joseph Shrick immediately after the Battle of Antietam in 1862

2 When is that appraisement and where are the other appraisers

A I suppose it to be on file in the claims, Mr Swiedemus lives at Boonsboro, and Mr Stevenson lives at Clear Spring

2 Please examine the paper which I hand you and state what it is

A This is the appraisement of that property, made at the time, that is my signature and the signatures of the other appraisers

2 What method did you adopt in making the appraisement

A We counted the panels and the Rails left on the ground and from that we made a calculation of what was missing, We counted all the fence in the same way, the three gates and two pair of Bars we Estimated at $/14.00, the 19 acres of corn at 35 bushels per acre, we estimated at 65¢ per bushel, 12 loads of corn fodder was estimated at at $5.00 per load one load of hay at $15.00, 8½ cords of wood at $2.50 per cord and all the other items in the appraisement was set down at the time according to the facts as appeared to us

2 What other statement or affidavit have you made regarding the claim of the said Dempster Church

A Mr Brown did change the form of the items in the account excluding the articles as he said would not be paid for; in an account stated to the Quartermasters Department, I made a statement and swore to the which included only the articles proper to be placed in the account

2 Please examine that statement and see if it is correct

A That is my signature, and the items are correct as far as I know, we made a calculation what the Rails would sum up in cord wood and the items of cord wood 2 3/12 cords of wood in cubic the [illegible] cut and carted: and the shingles binding, the panels of fencing, I explain the shingles by taking the valuation and added it to the end wood.

2 How do you make 13048 fence Rails out of 373 panels of Rest fence, 2362 Rails, 400 stakes and 3 gates and two Bars, Please explain the item of Rails in the account and see if you now explain that to be a correct Estimate

A No sir it is not correct, I was mistaken about the number of Rails as it was not on the claim, I stand by the original appraisement,

2 Is there any other item that needs correction

A. There is 373 rest that is not in the account

2 Please figure the number of Rails in the appraisement, make the calculation, and reduce the whole to cord wood at 80 rails to the cord, and state how you do it

A I take 373 panels 6 Rails to the panel making 2238 Rails, and 2 Rails to each end of the fence making three 373 making 746 Rails to that add 400 stakes call it Rails then add 30 Rails for gates & Bars and then to that add the actual number of fence Rails in the appraisement 2362 making a total of 5772 Rails equaling 72 40 cords of wood at 80 Rails to the cord

2 What interest, if any, have you in this claim

A Nothing in the world.

2 Where homestead is the appraisment and where homestead is in the claim

A The homestead in the appraisment is Newcomers. and that in the body of the claim is Mr Brown. Mrs James Brown made out the claim

2 State if you know if that is the signature of Mr Sherick to the appraisment

A I think Mr Sherick was present and signed it at the time

Jacob Yancy,

Testimony of Leonard Emmert.

2 What is your name, age, Residence & Occupation

A Leonard Emmert, aged 43 years, Residence Washington County Md, Occupation Farmer

2 did you know the late Joseph Sherick, if so how long did you know him and did you live near him during the war

A I have known Mr Sherick 15 years, I knew him during the war.

I lived on his farm as tenant during the years 1860. 1861. 1862

and left the farm in the spring of 1863

Q What was your occupation in 1862. and when did you live

A I was living on Mr Shinks farm, farming on Shares

Q How many acres in the farm

A He always told me between 200. & 300 acres

Q What was your share of the products that year

A I was to for Half of all the products; except the Clover Hay which I got all

Q How many acres did you have in corn that year

A I think 38 acres, I claimed 19 acres of that corn as my share

Q How many bushels did that make to the acre that year

A It ought to have made 35 bushels or more to the acre

Q How many bushels of corn did you get for your Share that year out of that field of 38 acres of which you claim 19. acres,

A I did not get any except a Spring wagon load of corn with Husks on, I fed it to the pigs and, Mr Shinks did not get any, the reason that I get the corn (I Mean Mr Shinks)

2 Why did you not get any more of the corn

A The United States Soldiers in 1862, about the middle of September, latter part of the month, after the Battle of Antietam they came into that corn field with their wagons and they cut up the corn and pulled a great deal off and hauled it away there was none left when they got through I know this because I saw it with my own Eyes

2 What did you say to them when they were taking the corn away

A I followed them to their Camps and tried to get recompense, They sent me to first one place and then to another, I got tired and let it go

2 What do you know about the fodder, how many loads were taken and what was your Price of that

A I was entitled to one half of the fodder, they took about 20 or 25 loads of fodder. and the fodder was taken at the same time with the corn they cleaned the field off, Fodder was worth $5 or $6 per load. at that time, the corn was worth 75 ¢ per bushel, I had to pay that much for it last fall

I mean shelled corn.

2 How much Hay

A I do not know anything about the Hay. The Hay was in the Barn, I had nothing to do with the Hay

2 What do you know about the fencing.

A I saw the Yankees soldiers pulling the fence down and burn it

2 How much of the fence did they use for fuel

A They used about one third of it for fuel

2 What do you know about the cord wood

A I know that he had wood cut and corded, I do not know how much, I saw it,

2 Can you mention any of the names of the officers

A I know there was a Quartermaster by the name of Oldham.

2 What do you know about the loyalty of the late Mr Sherick

A As far as I know he was a loyal man

2 Were your sympathies during the war

A My sympathies were with the Union Army. I am a Republican

2 What interest have you in this claim

A I have none whatever. I do not expect to get a cent, I have a claim of my own for my share

Leonard Emmert

Exhibit "B"

Testimony of H B Rotruck

2 What is your name, age, Residence & Occupation,

A Henry B Rotruck, aged 64 Years, Residence Washington County Md, Occupation Farmer

2 Did you know the late Dorsey Shrick, if so, how long have you known him

A I knew him for 55 years. I knew him all the time, & the most we were intimate neighbors.

2 When did Mr Shrick die, and how old was he when he died

A He died in august 1872 in the 78th year of his age

2 What was the character of Mr Shrick for loyalty during the War

A If there was a loyal man in the State of Maryland he was one, He was a man of honesty integrity and Moral worth, and was a whig all his life until the organization of the Republican party when he united with us, the Republican ticket

2 What do you know about a claim Mr Church had against the United States for Fuel and Forage taken from him and consumed by U S troops during the year 1862

A All I know is that the wood cut and corded lying adjoining my farm was hauled away in Dec 1862 after the Battle of Centreville. When they was laying on that farm near what is called the Burnside Bridge, I seen them hauling the wood away, I cannot tell how much wood there was but it was a right smart of wood, I never counted it but I think there must have been 20 or 30 cords there. About the fencing I was over the farm several times after the Battle and while the troops were encamped on the farm & when the fences were, they were all gone at least half rails off of the Pioneer farm, I seen them cooking with the fencing, There is about 200 acres in the Home farm, That is all I know about it

2 Where were you during the war

A I lived at home on my farm

2 Were you sympathies during the war with the Union or otherwise

A They were with the Union, Here is where they always were

2 What interest if any have you in this claim

A He was a thorough Union Man died in the Union,

2 When did he die and how old was he when he died

A He died in agust 1872, and was in the 70th Year of his age

2 What do you know about a claim he had against the United States for Forage taken and used and Consumed by the U S Forces during the War

A I am the administrator of the Estate. I am the one in Care of Dwight Blank "deceased" and have charge of the prosecution of the claim. I was on the farm at the time of the appraisment. The appraisal is in my handwriting, I had nothing to do with extending the amounts of the property therein or the prices charged for the same, But I generally think the items in the appraisment and in the accounts are correct and just, except as far as to the reduction of the Rails to cord wood in the first items of the accounts, That should be in accordance with the original appraisment written by me and when I swore to the accounts I intended to swear only to the items of the original appraisment which Mr Brown who made up the claim represented to me as being an estimate found on the original appraisment, the 13048 Rails should be 5774 Rails Equal to 72 7/40 cords of wood instead of 160 as Charged

2 When were you during the war, and where were your sympathies.?

A I lived on the farm a portion of the time and in Bardstown a portion of the time. My sympathies were with the

2 What is your name, age, Residence & Occupation

A James Brown, Aged 70 years, Reside in Washington County Md, Occupation Surveyor & Conveyancer

2 Did you know the late Joseph Shirck, how long did You Know him, did you know him during the War, and State what you know about a claim of his estate against the United States for Quartermaster Stores taken and used by United States troops in the Months of September and October 1862

A I knew the late Joseph Shirck for more than 30 years, I knew him during the War, I know that he had an appraisement which he sent to me to be put up in proper form to file in the Quartermasters Department, I took the appraisement and put it in proper form.

2 Please Examine this paper (Showing the appraisement) and tell me what it is,

A I recognize the paper you hand me as the appraisement from which I made up the claim Signed and Sworn to, Joshua Newcomer, John Nicodemus and Jacob Long, as appraisers also by the late Joseph Shirck. I saw him sign it, I wrote his affidavit

2 Please examine the paper which I now hand you tell me what it is, in whose handwriting and what was the date from which you made it if you made it

A This is the claim made out from the appraisement, it is in my handwriting, I got the data from the appraisement itself.

2 Please take your pencil and paper and Examine the appraisement and the account in the claim and show me how you make 13048 fence Rails from the number of panels and the number of Rails and fencing mentioned in the appraisement

A I cannot explain that item, I know it is a Mistake and I now make the correction. and I reduce the panels the post and gates to Rails by the following Method

373 at 6 Rails to the panel	2238
373 Post 2 Rails to the Post	746
400 Gates	400
30 Rails for the Gates & Bars	30
and 2362 Rails of the worm fence	2362
Making a total of	5776

Rail which at 80 Rails to the Load ~~[illegible]~~ will produce

72.8 Cords of wood which is correct and the original bill is wrong

2 What did you do with the Shingles

A Drew it into Rails

2 How many Rails did the Shingles make

A I do not know

2 You have reflected upon the matter of the Rails charged in the Bill as presented by the administrators of the late Joseph Sherick. against the Government. Be kind enough now to state the result of your consideration.

A I find upon reflection the claim should be 5776 Rails to which I have already testified.

Memorandum

To: Mr. Francis Wilshin, ESC-HHA

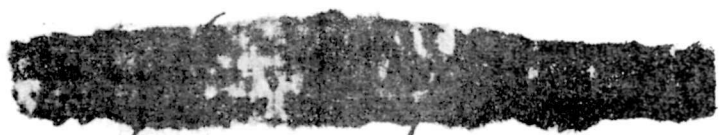

From: Superintendent, Antietam-C & O Canal

Subject: Historic Structures Report

The following buildings are discussed in the Historic Structure Reports by Francis Wilshin in one volume. They will, therefore, be treated together in this report. The structures are Mumma Farm Spring House RSP-B-22, Piper Farm Slave Quarters RSP-B-21, Sherrick Farm Smoke House RSP-B-19-1.

Each of these buildings as described in Mr. Wilshin's report was heavily involved in the Battle of Antietam. They are located where some of the heaviest fighting took place and are representative of the western Marylander's farm buildings.

These buildings were deteriorating rapidly until they were rehabilitated and now they help to preserve the exterior historic scene. The restoration and continued preservation of these historic structures could be used as interpretive devices when future visitation warrants the need. The restoration work also has solved the safety hazards that these decaying buildings had presented.

1. STATEMENT OF MANAGEMENT'S REQUIREMENTS, PROPOSED WORK, AND ITS RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER FACETS OF THE PARK PROGRAM. (Provide detail data for "Management Information" on Form 10-411a, Supplemental Sheet and attach.)

The Smoke House still retains its historic 1862 appearance. In association with the Sherrick House it serves as an exterior interpretive device.

The building is deteriorating rapidly creating an unsightly, unsafe structure which is extremely expensive to maintain.

This project is necessary to prevent further deterioration of a valuable historic building. It will also serve to quiet adverse public comment concerning neglect of historic structures.
