History of Structure: Fur Trade (VI B4)

This portion of the Old Spanish Trail was opened during the late 18th century as a way from the nearby Colorado River crossing to the Green River desert and a crossing of the Green River. At this point the trail climbed out from a wash off the river to the valey parallel to Arches NP that leads to the Green River desert. The trail was used intermittently until the 1840s & and by pioneers in the 1850s.

Old Spanish Trail (Exploration and Fur Trade Theme)

This site is one that shows no visible work of man that can be ~~totally~~ attributed to the Old Spanish Trail era(1780-1840). However, the site is on the historic natural access route to the crossing of the Colorado River that was used by the trail. Some earthwork and removal of stone has taken place at the site that would fit with the minimal types of improvements that would have been made to allow carts to pass over the trail. Later users obliterated all but a very short section of the route(estimated 1/8-mile).

Verbal Boundary Description:

The site of the Old Spanish Trail is bordered on the northeast by the edge of hill that rises out of the wash west of the main park road near the Visitor Center. The border on the southern edge is made up of the grade of the Old Moab Road and the west by a line running east-southeast to west-northwest from ten feet west of the edge of the hill that is the eastern boundary. The northern border is a line running generally east-west at the crest of the hill the Trail is on.

Boundary Justification:

The boundaries, as established above, encompass all the area that is discernable as part of the trail without including any areas of later use that destroyed the integrity of the Trail, such as the segment of heavily graded road that makes up the southern border of the Trail site. The site was not increased because Park development and U.S. Highway 191 have already destroyed the historic scene.
