

"... the ruin of ruins, the equal of which in point of magnitude and general interest, is not to be found among the world's collection of discovered, pre-historic structures."

S. J. Holsinger
U.S. General Land Office Agent, 1901

National Park Service, Chaco Culture National Historical Park's

Pueblo Bonito Centennial Exhibit

celebrating 100 years of archaeological exploration at Pueblo Bonito

Opens June 22, 1996
at the Chaco Canyon Visitor Center

"Buildings as old as time and human labor, the containers of the experience of community, ours in trust...how are we maintaining are trust?...For years the National Park Service has been attempting reverent care of these places, but insufficient care...Now there is an undeniable crisis of care. And we need your help."

Roger Kennedy
National Park Service Director, 1995

EXHIBIT ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Pueblo Bonito Centennial Exhibit was made possible by a grant from Southwest Parks and Monuments Association.

Photography: We extend our gratitude to James Ponce de Leon and Cooper Aerial Photography of Phoenix, Arizona, who donated their services to reproduce many of the photographs in this exhibit. We would also like to thank Dave Six, who graciously produced new photographs and inter-negatives; and Caroline Smith, Kate Eichenseer, Greg McGuan, and Suzanne of Media Services/University of New Mexico worked against tight deadlines to reproduce the needed photographs.

Exhibit: Designed and written by Wendy Bustard, Philip LoPiccolo, and Joyce Raab, Chaco Culture NHP Museum Collection.

Exhibit Construction: Exhibit panels were designed and constructed by Ian Wagoner, Director of Exhibits, Maxwell Museum of Anthropology/University of New Mexico.
