Snee Farm

Located in the once-rural Mount Pleasant, Snee Farm was one of the Pinckney family's plantations, growing rice, indigo, and seasonal produce through the use of enslaved labor.

After the Siege of Charleston in 1780, Col. Charles Pinckney, commanding officer of the Charles Town militia, along with 160 other patriot prisoners, swore loyalty to the Crown to save their lives and property.

During the two and a half year British occupation of Charleston, Snee Farm was used to hold patriot prisoners of war, including Gen. William Moultrie.
