THE WONDERLAND HOTEL AT THE ELKMONT WONDERLAND CLUB
HISTORY OF THE ELKMONT COMMUNITY

The scenic beauty and purported healthy climate of the Southern Appalachian Mountains have long attracted visitors. However, the difficulty of traveling throughout the mountains in the 19th century limited the numbers of visitors and the areas developed for recreation. With the completion of the Buncombe Turnpike from Greenville, South Carolina, to Greenville, Tennessee, in 1827, colonies of wealthy planters from the Carolina lowcountry seeking to avoid the heat and disease of the summer season were the first to discover the resort possibilities of the North Carolina mountains.

The Little River Lumber Company created Elkmont as a lumber camp and town in 1908. Development of the town was further influenced by the "Back to Nature" Movement of the early 20th century. This movement emphasized a return to nature, which resulted in the construction of hotels and resort camps throughout America. The lumber company aided in this development by actively promoting the development of its cutover lands. The establishment of daily railroad passenger service between Knoxville and Elkmont in 1909 further benefited the land promotion efforts of the company. In 1910, the Little River Lumber Company sold fifty acres along Jakes Creek just upstream from the town of Elkmont to the Appalachian Club. The company also leased exclusive hunting and fishing rights on 40,000 acres to the club. The club, whose membership consisted mostly of Knoxville businessmen, built a clubhouse/hotel and allowed members to construct their own cottages. The Appalachian Club eventually comprised the clubhouse/hotel and some fifty-five cottages.

In 1912, the Wonderland Park Company constructed the Wonderland Hotel on sixty-five acres just North of Elkmont, also purchased from the Little River Lumber Company. Owned by three Knoxville brothers, John P., Charles, and T. M. Carter, the Wonderland Park Company aimed to make quick profits by selling off hundreds of small lots to would-be builders of vacation homes. Disputes among the brothers caused them to sell their holdings in 1913 to a group of Knoxville businessmen who turned Wonderland into a resort similar to the Appalachian Club operation. Club members built a hotel annex in 1920 and constructed about twenty detached cottages.

The well-to-do summer residents of the two clubs at Elkmont enjoyed swimming, hiking, picnicking, horseback riding, fishing, and games like croquet, badminton, and horseshoes. Bands from Knoxville provided music for dancing on Saturday nights. Both clubs rented rooms in their clubhouse/hotels to the general public when demand from members was slack. Individual cabin owners also were free to rent out their quarters, giving the two clubs a semi-public character. By the time the Little River Lumber Company discontinued train service and removed its tracks to Elkmont in 1925, many club members were driving most of the way to Elkmont, either along a rough gravel road from Gatlinburg that ran along Fighting Creek or via a road through Maryville to Townsend. Following the removal of the railroad tracks, the roadbed from Townsend to Elkmont was converted to a motor road.
The well-connected members of the Appalachian and Wonderland Clubs received special treatment when Great Smoky Mountains National Park was created. Those who didn't wish to sell outright were awarded half the appraised value of their cabins and granted lifetime leases. In 1952, residents of the Elkmont community desired to replace their private electrical system with commercial power from the Sevier County Electric System. The Electric System declined the request unless it could be guaranteed amortization of its investment over a period of 20 years. An agreement was struck between the Park, lessees and the electric company whereby most of the life leases were surrendered for 20-year leases, thereby guaranteeing 20 years of commercial electricity for the whole community.

Before the leases were due to expire in 1972, an organization called the Elkmont Preservation Committee was formed to represent the combined interests of the Wonderland Club and the Appalachian Club. Again, political influence was wielded and all but four of the leases were extended for another 20 years.

In 1988, the Elkmont Preservation Committee began trying to get them extended again. A monetary offer was made to the Park to extend the leases and political pressure mounted. Active political attempts to extend the leases also occurred during the last few months of 1992 just before the change of administrations. Department of Interior solicitors stated there was no legal way to extend the leases and most of the cabins were vacated. At Wonderland are the 1912 hotel with later additions, the 1920 hotel annex, and nine cottages.

The hotel is a simple gabled-ell two story building covered by lap siding. Ornamentation is generally lacking with chamfered porch posts and bracing being the most dominant ornamentation. Framing is somewhat of a cross between balloon and platform framing and indicates a period of time in which these two practices were evolving from one to another. Public rooms such as the dining room and social rooms are found on the first floor, while the second floor consists of private hotel rooms accessed by central corridors.
