Harpers Ferry Negative No. 66 (National Geographic File No. 140325-A).

The Potomac River is flowing from the left and the Shenandoah River from the right; the view is looking southeast at the junction of the two streams. Buildings, left to right, beginning with the Armory Building with a cupola at foot of hill - The Bell or Finishing Shop, then moving up to the river edge, the roof of the Armory Warehouse; then the Armory flagpole, the square and tall B. & O water tower; next the one-story stone warehouse on east end of Wager Lot 10, with 3-story Walsh & Brother Dry Goods Store on the west end of Lot 10; next, on Lot 9, Dr. Claggetts (2½-story) Drug store, with rear of the three-story Potomac Restaurant visible on the east end of Lot 9. To the right of this, also fronting on the railroad and located on the east end of Lots 8 and 7, is the three-story brick wing that was added to the Wager House or U. S. Hotel in 1842; at the west end of Lot 8 is the two-story frame Strauss Clothing Store; then on Lots 6 and 7, comes the 3½-story Wager House Hotel; on Lot 1 to the right is the roof of the 1-story B & O Railroad Depot. At the entrance to the Potomac bridge, and resting on the Shenandoah River wall is the bridge toll house and B & O old depot, both 1-story buildings, then the two-story frame Gault House Saloon, and finally the Winchester & Potomac Railroad Depot to the right.

JUL 28 1980

Returning to the Gault House Saloon and moving left: First the three-story brick house on Lot 2, then entrance to Arsenal, with the Large Arsenal (the large 2-story brick building with round arch windows and dating from 1801,) to the right. Continuing left is a portion of the 2-story stone house on Lot 4, then the 3½-story hipped roofed house of William J. Stephens on Lot 5 at the corner of South Potomac and Shenandoah Streets. Then proceeding right again along Shenandoah Street, are the rear (north) roofs of Buildings No. 9 and 8; Buildings 10 (with skylight) and 10A, 11, and 12; then on the hillside, the roof of Building 1A, the Harper House and (to the left) the large residence being reroofed (following a fire) is Building 1B, Marmion Hall; to the left again is the roof of Building 1C and 1D. The buildings located in the left foreground are located on Wager Lots 41 and 39.

Naval Battery

Positioned 350 feet above the Potomac River, the Naval Battery was the first Union fortification on Maryland Heights. Hastily built in May 1862, its naval guns were rushed here from the Washington, D.C., Navy Yard. Along with a detachment of 300 sailors and marines, the battery was equipped to protect Harpers Ferry from Confederate attack during Stonewall Jackson's famous Valley Campaign in the spring of 1862.

Repulsed that spring, Jackson returned to Harpers Ferry in mid-September 1862, during the Confederacy's first invasion of the North.

Jackson's three-day siege included an infantry battle on the crest of Maryland Heights on September 13, in which the Confederates advanced south along the ridgetop. The Naval Battery guns were turned uphill to pound the crest, but orders to retreat forced the Federals to abandon the mountain and this battery.

On September 22, one week after the Union surrender at Harpers Ferry, U.S. forces returned to Maryland Heights to build fortifications at better locations on the crest and slope of the Heights. The Naval Battery lost its defensive importance and eventually became an ordnance depot.

Heavy Artillery

[illegible]

By July 1863, a three-sided earthwork protected the guns in anticipation of another Confederate advance. Remains of this earthwork are visible today.

Battery Improvements

Federal troops periodically improved this fortification—the oldest on Maryland Heights.

At first, the Naval Battery's three guns sat on a river-oriented timber mount. This August 1862 photo taken from across the Potomac River at Camp Hill shows the Naval Battery position.

By January 1863, the battery consisted of seven separate platforms protected by sandbag embankments, or ramparts. Five powder magazines for ammunition storage also had been constructed.
