Within Skagway, cardinal directions are colloquially oriented with reference to the city's street grid instead of true north. The north-south axis is aligned with Broadway, making "north" closer to northeast. The photo captions follow this convention.

Additional views of the Moore Cabin (and the Moore Homestead) can be found within the photographs of the City of Skagway (HABS AK-15).

|------------|---|
| AK-295-B-1 | South (front) elevation of the Moore Cabin, showing the metal stove pipe, nonsymmetrical coursing of roof shakes, wood chinking, and wood door. Klondike Gold Rush National Historical Park put a modern poured concrete foundation and stem wall under the structure in 2020. View to north. |
| AK-295-B-2 | South (front) elevation with scale. View to north. |
| AK-295-B-3 | Southeast corner of the building. The non-historic hatch to the crawl space allows access to the building's fire suppression system, sump pump, and electrical systems. A corner of the Frye-Bruhn Cold Storage Building (HABS AK-224) can be seen in the background left. View to northwest. |
| AK-295-B-4 | East elevation. The building sits west of the Moore House and within the domestic landscape. View to west. |
| AK-295-B-5 | Rear entrance to the Moore Cabin. The property fence is in the foreground. The Chicken Coop (far left) and Moore House are behind the Cabin. View to southeast. |
| AK-295-B-6 | Detail of north (rear) entrance to the cabin. Image shows extant bark on logs and chinking of half-round branches tacked into place. View to south. |
