Constructed in the mid 1930s, Cabin 43 was once part of a group of three or four single and duplex cabins standing in a row along on the east side of the present parking lot behind Cabins 668-673. This cluster of newer cabins was presumably built during the approximate ten-year ownership of the resort by the Seattle Trust Company. (The other two or three cabins were removed before 1951.) In the late 1950s, or early 1960s, Cabin 43 was extended approximately sixteen feet to the east: the roof pitch, exterior wall sheathing, and window style remained consistent with the existing portion of the cabin. Little is known of the social history of this building. In terms of scale, design, materials, and siting, Cabin 43 is sympathetic with the earlier structures at Singer's Lake Crescent Tavern.

Rectangular in shape; measures 34' x 14' with 4' wide porch; 1 story; wood-frame wall construction; shake siding; gable roof with shake roofing material; post and pier foundation; 4-light casement windows paired on west elevation; shed roof porch on main (west) facade. Alterations: possible resheathing of exterior walls prior to 1953. Siting: at the edge of an open grassy area; part of Singer's Tavern building ensemble.
